It is not my intention to lay before the members of the Surtees Society, in the preface to the present volume, anything like a full historical description of the Cathedral Church of York. The length to which this work has already run must necessarily preclude the compilation of such an account, which has been already given by others.* My

* I shall refer my readers to three works, all of which deserve a careful perusal.

I. "The History of the Metropolitan Church of St. Peter, York; illustrated by extracts from authentic records, by plans, sections, and engravings of architectural and sculptural details. By John Browne." Two vols. Quarto. London, 1847.

II. "The Architectural History of York Cathedral. By the Rev. R. Willis, M.A., F.R.S., etc." Published by the Archaeological Institute, in the volume which contains the proceedings of their meeting at York, in 1846. 8vo.

III. "An Historical and Descriptive Guide to York Cathedral and its Antiquities. By Geo. Ayliffe Poole, M.A., Vicar of Welford, and J. W. Hugall, Esq., Architect." York. 1850.

Of these three works the earliest in date and in importance is that written by Mr. Browne. That gentleman was fortunate enough to discover the existence of the Fabric Rolls which are now printed, and upon them he has very properly based his history of the Minster. It is neither my wish, nor is it in my power, to gainsay the industry and ability which Mr. Browne has brought to bear upon his work. He has, however, given meagre, and sometimes inaccurate, extracts from the Fabric Rolls, discard-chief object, therefore, shall be to give a very brief summary of the earlier history of the Minster.

It is not known when the first Christian Church was erected among the temples and altars of Eburacum. Doubtless, there was one there at a very early period, whilst the imperial eagles were still flying over the city. An attempt, indeed, has been made, with more ingenuity than success, to shew that the porch of the church of St. Margaret, in Walmgate, is a fragment of some heathen temple : the propounder of this curious theory has, evidently, been misled by the similarity between the Roman and Norman styles of architecture, as the doorway, to which he alludes, must certainly have been erected more than six centuries after the Romans deserted York.

The annals of the Minster may be said to date from the time, at the same time, the language in which they are written, and it is to supply these deficiencies that this volume has been published. It contains, also, some documentary evidence which has hitherto been unnoticed. There is, however, in Mr. Browne's work, much novel and interesting information, upon which this volume does not in any way trench. I have derived great assistance from it myself, and any one who is desirous of studying the history of the Minster will find it similarly useful.

Professor Willis has written a most masterly paper on the architectural history of the Cathedral. He has assailed, and, as is generally thought, with complete success, Mr. Browne's theory of dates, which appears to be quite untenable. Professor Willis argues with great acuteness and ingenuity, and his essay must be the foundation for every future history of the Minster.

The work of Messrs. Poole and Hugall is more perhaps in the form of a guide than a regular account of the Minster. They adopt the views of Professor Willis, and present them in a more popular form. The volume is most pleasingly illustrated, and reflects great credit upon the authors and upon Mr. Sunter.

year 627, when Edwin, the Saxon king of Northumbria, was baptized in that city by Paulinus. That ceremony took place in a church of wood, which, at the suggestion of Paulinus, the monarch ordered to be surrounded with a basilica of stone, of a square form. Fifty years, however, had not elapsed, before the new church began to stand in need of repair. It had been constructed, in all probability, in a hasty and imperfect manner, and when Wilfred ascended the chair of Paulinus, in 669, he found the windows unprotected, and the roof unable to keep out the rain. To remedy these defects was his chief endeavour; the windows which had formerly been filled with linen, or boards pierced with holes, he now glazed; he covered the roof with lead, and purified and furnished anew the interior of the church.

In the year 741, according to Roger Hoveden, there was a fire at York, in which a “monasterium” was destroyed. Now as the Cathedral was, in old time, frequently called the “monasterium,” or minster, I cannot but think that the chronicler intended to refer to that building. He was, probably, a Yorkshireman by birth, and he, therefore, applies to the Cathedral the name which was usually assigned to it. Hoveden is, in general, an accurate historian, and I see no reason, in this instance, to question his authority. Now if this disastrous fire actually occurred, we must expect to find some record of the restoration of the temple which it destroyed. Accordingly, we have a statement made by Alcuin, who was an eyewitness and an aider of the work, that Archbishop Albert, who came to the See in 767, did actually erect a most magnificent basilica.

Professor Willis is of opinion that this basilica is not the Minster, but some other church, either in York or in the diocese. From this opinion, however, I must be permitted to dissent. If the “monasterium” destroyed was actually the Minster, as I believe it to be, it is hardly conceivable that its restoration should be unrecorded, or that the Archbishop should erect a splendid edifice while his Cathedral was in ruins. Again, there is no church beyond the walls of the City of York which can possibly be identified with the basilica described by Alcuin, and within the City itself, which was then small, it is scarcely possible that there should exist at that early period, and at the same time, a Cathedral Church and a gorgeous basilica in which there were no less than thirty altars. But there is a statement on the table of the benefactors to the Minster which goes far to prove that these two buildings were identical ; Albert is there placed among the five founders or builders of the Cathedral ; would his name stand there if the basilica which he undoubtedly erected were not the Minster, “but some other church, either in York or elsewhere in the diocese?”

It is my impression, therefore, that Archbishop Albert was actually the builder of that church which was in existence at the Norman Conquest. Of its shape and extent there is nothing now known. Among the fragments of early masonry which have been disclosed in the crypt there are one or two which have, in all probability, belonged to Albert’s church, but there is nothing whatever in the fabric of the present Minster to connect it with the Saxon times ; except, perhaps, a mutilated image of the Virgin, which is imbedded in the eastern wall of the presbytery.

The Cathedral erected by Albert remained standing for more than two centuries. In the year 1069 it was accidentally destroyed by that scourge of York, a fire, which also consumed the celebrated library. Within twelve months, however, Thomas the Norman became Archbishop, and he, according to Stubbes, rebuilt the church from its foundations. Mr. Poole seems to think that Thomas merely repaired the choir to fit it for the due celebration of divine worship, and that it was not fully restored till Roger came to the see in the middle of the next century. This may, perhaps, have been the case, but if the choir erected by Thomas was only a temporary one, it must still, judging from the remains of it in the crypt, have been of a very substantial character.

Thomas's Church, in all probability, consisted of nave, aisles, and transepts, the aisles and transepts ending, it may be presumed, in apses. There was a central tower of magnificent proportions and, probably, there were two towers at the west end of the Church. There is a sketch of what the Minster is then supposed to have been in the subjoined plan.

No alteration was made in Thomas's Church till the year 1171, when Archbishop Roger began to build a new choir. This is said to have been necessitated by a fire which occurred in 1137, but there are some grave reasons for doubting the fact. It is quite enough to suppose that Roger, a new and active prelate, found the old choir to be inconveniently small, and that on that account he began to reconstruct it. The shape of this choir, which was without an apsidal termination, may be seen in plan No. 2.

The Cathedral was now a complete specimen of the Norman style of architecture. It did not long remain intact. A new style came into vogue with a new century, and it soon made an inroad upon the Minster.

The innovator was that munificent prelate Walter Grey. To him the Church of York was indebted for the south transept with its noble and graceful proportions. This work was probably completed by the year 1240, and its erection was immediately followed by the building of the north transept, which, according to Stubbes, was reared at the sole expense of John Romanus the treasurer of the Minster. That officer is also said to have rebuilt the lantern tower ; as, however, there are still traces in it of Norman masonry, it is probable that Romanus merely re-faced it, putting in at the same time new windows to make it harmonize with the recently erected transepts.

The tide of restoration had now begun to flow, and there was no desire to stop it. The noble transepts and the bell tower of John the Roman were a striking contrast to the nave and choir, which were still untouched. It was plain that they could not remain as they were. It was determined, therefore, to rebuild the nave. The credit of commencing this glorious work is given to another John the Roman, who was Archbishop of York. He was the son of the treasurer who had done so much to renovate the Church, and he inherited the taste and energy of his sire. The first stone of the new nave was laid by the Archbishop in the year 1291.

The erection of a building so vast and so magnificent as the present nave was no ordinary undertaking. The Chapter of York, however, were resolved to complete what they had begun, and they were most generously assisted by others. In 1296 they imposed upon their prebends. and dignities a tax of two-sevenths. In 1298 the Chapter sent their sub-chanter, Roger de Mar, to the court of Rome, and he was there directed to secure the permission of the Pope for the imposition of a tenth and a third upon the non-resident members of the Chapter.*

Nor were the Archbishops unmindful of their metropolitan church. John Romanus, as we have seen, laid the foundation-stone of the nave, and, in all probability, contributed largely to the fabric fund. Archbishop Corbridge granted an indulgence of forty days on behalf of the same work.† His successor, William Greenfield, made a similar concession, and gave, among other donations, the munificent sum of 500 marks to the Church.‡ Archbishop Melton, who succeeded Greenfield, was a most generous benefactor to the Minster. He issued more than one brief on behalf of the fabric, and gave 500 marks to further the progress of the works.* The liberality of the noble families of Vavasor and Percy will be afterwards alluded to.

* Among his instructions, which occur in Archbishop Newarke's Register, is the following order:—"Item cum navis ecclesiæ nostræ Ebor. diu est corruta, propter quod necesse est novam ecclesiam re-edificare opere sumptuoso, nec ad hoc habet Ecclesia aliquas facultates; petatur decima et tercia non-residencium per triennium, vel alia quota, prout melius videritis expedire et facilius poteritis impetrare."

† Appendix No. XII.

‡ This gift is recorded in MS. Cotton. Claudius B. III. In the register of Archbishop Greenfield the following donations to the fabric are recorded:—"12 kal., Sept. 7. Libera Willelmo de Langetoft, custodi fabricæ, 100 marcas, quas Capitulo nostro Ebor. promisimus et concessimus gracie. —7 kal. Junii anno 9. Libera custodibus fabricæ eccl. nostræ B. Petri Ebor. 50 marcas quas eidem fabricæ donavimus de gracia nostra speciali. —28 May 10. Libera custodi fabricæ pro celeriori promocione operis in instanti estate quinquagiuta marcas."

Thus assisted and promoted, the works in the nave, extensive though they were, made considerable progress. In 1338 they were far enough advanced to allow several of the windows to be glazed. In that year the great west window was filled with glass at the expense of Archbishop Melton, who gave 100 marks for that purpose.†

* 7 Id., June, 1338, magistro Thomæ Sampson et domino Nicholao de Ilugate, canouicis Ebor., 500 marcas ad opus fabricæ.

† This circumstance, which has been hitherto unknown, is recorded in Melton's Register. 2 Non., Feb., 1338, magistro Thomæ Sampson, vel Thomæ de Ludham custodi fabricæ eccl. B. Petri Ebor., 100 marcas pro opere vitro fenestræ ex capite occidentali eccl. ejusdem de novo constructæ.

Mr. Browne gives the following extract from Torre's MSS., which shews the use that was made of the Archbishop's gift.

“ On Monday next, after the feast of St. Agatha, the virgin (celebrated Feb. 6), A.D. 1338, it was covenanted by indenture that Thomas de Boneston, vicar choral, should at his own proper costs, glaze two windows of this Cathedral Church, viz., on each side one, find all the glass for the same, and pay the workmen their wages for the finishing thereof. Thomas de Ludham, custos of the fabric, became bound to pay him twenty-two marks sterling, viz., eleven marks for each window.

“ Likewise in A.D. 1338, another indenture was made between one Robert — on the first part, and Thomas de Boneston, custos of the fabrick, on the other, for the making of a window at the west gable of this Cathedral Church, and to find all sort of glass for the same, and for doing the work the said Thomas was to pay him six pence a foot for white, and twelve pence a foot for coloured glass.”

In 1361 we have a notice of another window. In that year Agnes de Holme, widow of Robert de Holme, of Burton, in Lonsdale, leaves

In the year 1345 there was an enquiry into some alleged misdemeanours among the workmen who were employed to the fabric. She also says, "Lego novæ fabricæ chori tantam reuinam pro quanta unus homo poterit conducere ad peregrinandum pro uno alio homine ad S. Jacobum Apostolum ad constructionem unius nestræ vitreæ, et volo quod in uno luminari dictæ fenestræ ponatur ymago S. Jacobi Apostoli, et in alio luminari ejusdem ymago S. Katharinae virginis."

A notice of a contract for glazing the east window, which was made in 1405, is given by Messrs. Browne and Poole. John Thornton, of Coventry, was the artist.

Some of the glass-work in the Minster was executed by John Petty. He died in 1580, being at that time Lord Mayor of York. The following extracts from his will are interesting:—"I bequeath to Sanct Peter wark vj tabyls of Normandy white glase and x schafe of Renyshe glase. To Sanct Mary Abbay, to the wark, x shaffe Renyshe glase. To Furness Abbay 13s. 4d., beseeching thame of clere absolution, be cause I have wrought mych wark thare. To my broder Robert all my toels and seroes and a credill of Normandy glase, and a waw of glase." Petty's name occurred in one of the windows of the Minster.

The following notices are of a more recent date:—"1663, Paid for lewe glasse to Edward Spence. 1670, for one firkin of glass which came from Newcastle, 17s. 6d. 1671, to Thos. Buckton for coloured glass 5s. For three tables of white glass and severall peces of coloured glass, 10s. 1688, to Mr. Giles for 120 foot of odd peces of thick glass, etc., 17. 5s. For a peice of blew glass and a peice of green glass, 1s. 2d. 1693, to Charles Crosby for mending and setting anew a window in the Chapter-house, 13l. 15s. 1694, to Charles Crosby for glass work, 9l. 4s. 1695, to Charles Crosby for setting a new window in the Chapter-house, etc., 28l. 6s. 2d. 1753, to Wm. Peckett for painted glass at south window, 11l. 14s. 1754, to Edw. Matterson for painted glass, 1l. 16s. 1758, to Wm. Peckitt for stain'd glass, 100l. For crown glass from London, 91l. 6s. 1796, to Mrs. Peckett for three windows of painted glass, viz., Abraham, Solomon and Moses, 32l. 0s. 4d."

Mr. Torre has described at some length the painted glass in the Minster, but in a very meagre and inaccurate manner.

ployed by the Chapter. From the evidence which was then produced it may be inferred that the stone-work of the nave was at that time complete, but that a ceiling of wood was still wanting. This defect was not supplied till the year 1355, when the munificence of Archbishop Thoresby enabled the Chapter to complete their magnificent nave.

Simultaneously with the nave proceeded the building of the Chapter-house. Some very erroneous dates have been assigned to this beautiful work. As it is built in the flowing decorated style of architecture it could scarcely have been completed before the middle of the fourteenth century. On the parapet of that building appear several bears which, it may fairly be presumed, are the device of Francis Fitzurse, who became treasurer of the Minster in 1337. It may, therefore, be inferred that Fitzurse took a considerable part in the erection of the Chapter-house.

The nave and transepts being now completed, the difference between them and the Norman choir would be painfully striking. The restoration of the choir was now the desideratum, and it was undertaken by a man of no ordinary energy. It is to Archbishop Thoresby that we are indebted for the conception and the commencement of that glorious work. The foundation stone was laid in 1361; but, at least, thirty years elapsed before the whole was completed. From the Archbishop the Chapter received the most munificent aid. He gave up to them his manor-house at Sherburne, and his purse was always open.*

* The following gifts to the Minster are recorded in the Archbishop's register. "1360, 24 Nov. Johanni de Codyngham, custodi fabricæ Ecl.

The presbytery, or Lady Chapel, was finished before his death, which took place in 1372. His body was there interred before the altar of the Virgin, among the bones of several of his predecessors who had been re-interred in that place under monuments which were made for them at his expense.*

Mr. Browne does not think that the presbytery was finished in Thoresby's lifetime. I have entered into the question at some length in the notes to the Fabric Rolls, and it is, therefore, unnecessary to re-open it here. The following cut, however, will be useful to shew that the tombs which were in the pavement before the altar of the Virgin were, as all the historians have stated, those of Thoresby and his predecessors. This once established, and Mr. Browne's theories are untenable. He assigns these tombs to various persons, laymen as well as canons, but no one who sees this cut,* which has been slightly reduced from

* I am indebted to W. H. D. Longstaffe, Esq., an active and valuable member of the Surtees Society, for the drawing. Mr. Longstaffe gives the following explanation of the drawing :—

“ The annexed plan is made up of Torre's separate drawings in facsimile, and we may gather from the manner in which the stones fit each other and their proportions, that, rough as the representations are, they are not far from some scale adopted for the whole. The same remark does not apply to Torre's general plan, by which the relative places of the stones have, independently of his descriptions, been ascertained ; the breadth of the stones in that place being too great in proportion. But, although the stones are thus uniform in size, and in Torre's general plan their heads form a connected line, yet in the latter the dimensions of N°. 31 to 36 are contracted towards the east by a sort of projecting step, with some transverse object in the centre, and I cannot be certain whether this covered the feet of the stones (in which case Torre must either have restored the stones from the portions remaining in sight or have copied them while the step was raised upon some occasion or before it was constructed) or whether N°. 31 to 36 projected more westward than N°. 30 and 37, notwithstanding the general plan. I prefer the former supposition for the following reason, because N°. 36 is an addition to the series, and from its shortness, probably nearly contemporaneous with the projecting step, which must therefore have been an addition also, otherwise we would have to suppose that a space intervened between each stone.

“ The piers and longer step are supplied from Torre's general plan. In Drake's plan the step is more to the west, in fact it clears the piers instead of abutting against them. I suspect that this alteration was made about the time that Dean Finch was buried, whose monument is affixed to the south pier. Drake's Bishop's stones are altogether to the south, with a blank stone (qu. 36 or 33 removed?—sed qu. his accuracy?) to the north.

“ The shorter step to which I have referred is given in dotted lines.

“ With the exception of the introduction of N<sup>o</sup>. 36, the stones lie as given in Leland's Itinerary. Leland saw inscriptions commemorating, or ascertained the burial place of, six Archbishops, of whom Thoresby was one. But Thoresby provided six marble stones “ pro tumulis predecessorum nostrorum.” N<sup>o</sup>. 33 must, then, have been an Archbishop also. And who was commemorated by it? There was one man whose body would scarcely fail to rest here, who had preceded Thoresby in the character of founder of a choir, who had been ‘ honourably buried in the middle of the choir— which he had constructed anew;’ and whose body Thoresby would scarcely degrade from its high position. That man was Archbishop Roger.

“ How his inscription came to be defaced or torn up when Leland wrote is a difficult question, but it would equally apply to the tomb of any other person, and in no way militates against my theory.

“ The order of the Archbishops was probably much in that of their former burial. It is very observable that the styles of the tombs vary with their chronology, which is thus:—

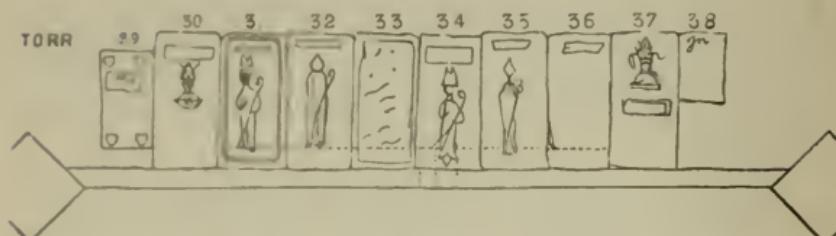

I. Gerard, 1108.	}	Full length figures of a more antique aspect,
II. Thomas Junior, 1113.		and probably copied from old illuminations or seals. Labels above.

IV. Roger?
V. Gisfart, 1277.	}	Heads only and labels.
VI. Romanus, 1285.

“ The last form the ends of the series, a circumstance probably guiding the artist.

“ I am surprised at the absence of Thomas Senior, builder of the first Norman church, who as well as Thomas Junior lay near Aldred.”—Vide Willis, p. 6. I take it that N<sup>o</sup>. 33 was a Flemish brass of one great

I shall not carry my brief notices of the history of the church. The others were cut out, but if in the style of the Wensley priest, how grand a series! And this is only what one might expect in Thoresby's period.

Minster farther. The Fabric Rolls take up the subject where I leave it, and to them my readers must be referred. A few general observations may, perhaps, not be deemed out of place.

It has been frequently asked, How is it that we know nothing of the mediæval architects? Did modesty constrain them to conceal their names, or were the plans executed by several persons, so that it would be invidious, if not impossible, to particularise any one?" It is by no means easy to give an answer to this question. I am inclined to think that at York a great share of the responsibility fell upon the master mason, but he was probably assisted, to a certain extent, by the keeper of the fabric, and the treasurer.* The following list of the master-masons will be of some use.

Thomas de Pakenham.

William de Hoton.

1351. William de Hoton, jun.

1368—71. Robert de Patrington.

1399—1401. Hugh de Hedou.

1415. William Colchester.

1421. John Long.

1433. Thomas Pak.

1442—3. John Bowde.

1445—7. John Barton.

* There was a tracinghouse at York, and if this signifies what we may fairly suppose it to be, a place for preparing the working drawings, it goes a great way to shew that the plans for the renovation of the Minster were prepared on the spot, under the superintendence of some resident architect.

1456. John Porter.
1466. Robert Spyllesby.
1472. Wm. Hyndeley, p. m. Spyllesby.
1505. Chr. Horner, p. m. Hyndeley
1526. John Forman.

Of these, Pakenham was a native of the South. Patrixton and Hedon were probably born at the towns in Holderness which bear their names. The stately churches which grace those places are famous, not only in Yorkshire, but throughout England, and it is probable enough that the Chapter of York very gladly availed themselves of the services of men who assisted in erecting them, to superintend the building of their choir. Colchester, we may safely assume, was an Essex man, and his appointment to the office of master-mason was looked upon as an intrusion. Porter came from Lincoln, and Hyndeley from Norwich. To Hyndeley, the Minster of York is indebted for its splendid screen, and the presence of a hind lodged among the carving, would seem to shew that Hyndeley had had a hand in designing it as well as in executing the work. In looking over the lists of the workmen, many other names foreign to Yorkshire will be observed. Philip de Lincoln was master-carpenter for a long period in the fourteenth century. Hugh de Grantham was one of the masons. Foreigners, also, occasionally occur. On the very first page is the name of Begon Baions, who could scarcely have been an Englishman. James Dam worked the crockets, etc., for the screen.

In 1470, the master-mason was absent from York for twenty-eight days, in quest of persons who could work in marble. The bells were probably cast in York, where the founders were always an important craft, and, as a token of their gratitude, the Minster was, in all probability, adorned with what is still called the bell-founders' window. One of the Friar's Minors was generally sent for when the organs were out of repair.

It is impossible, however, to enter the Minster or its precincts without finding, in the architectural features of the building, some traces of the treasurers of the church. The charge of overlooking the renovation of the fourth pillar of the lantern was, as we know, intrusted to Haxey. The bears upon the chapter house carry us at once to Francis Fitzurse, and upon the exterior of the south-western tower of the nave, to which he was a munificent contributor, stands out in bold relief the name of treasurer Bermingham. The treasurers, I doubt not, took an important part in all the restorations that were made. The Archbishop, I should imagine, rather assented to the plans than originated them. It will be observed that when Archbishop Zouche wished to erect his chapel, the rights of the Chapter were most distinctly laid down, and that the work was placed under the control of their master-mason. The Chapter, however, must frequently have acted in conjunction with the Archbishop; the most splendid portions of their Church were erected by the Metropolitan, and it is scarcely conceivable that the donor should have no voice in the application of his gift. Thoresby, we know, assisted the Chapter with his advice as well as with his purse. What share had he in the designing of that noble choir in which he is now sleeping? Few men were more richly endowed with natural gifts, few men were more pious and energetic, and are we to suppose that the builder of the presbytery at York had no architectural taste or skill? We can hardly think so when we know that Walter Skirlaw was one of his chaplains, and that he gave two stalls at York to William of Wykeham. Did Wykeham give him any assistance?

The funds available for the use of the fabric were fluctuating, and by no means large. There were one or two estates regularly appropriated to it, especially the tythes of Topcliffe, but the annual income derivable from them was inconsiderable. Then there were the sums received by the penanceers, and the brief-bearers, which were generally large,* the mortuaries and legacies,† the offerings and alms. Still, after adding all these sources of income together, the revenues devoted to the fabric were never very large; we may place the yearly average of them at 500*l.*; this, when great works were going on, was but a small sum.

But the church of York could always rely upon the generosity of individuals. When we look at the existing fabric, we cannot but see that if the Chapter had not been assisted by the Archbishops it could never have been erected. The benefactions of Walter Grey, of John the Roman, of

* In the commencement of the fourteenth century, Sir Peter de Manley was fined 100 marks for adultery, and this was given to the Minister. Many other instances of this kind might be given.

† On 15 May, 1368, Richard de Richmond, and the other executors of Wm. fil. Hervie fil. Heurie, rector of Romaldkirk, pay to the Chapter 80 marks, which the testator had left to the fabric (G. c. 86. s.).

Greenfield, and Melton, are not yet forgotten. It was Thoresby who roofed the new nave, and he was, so to speak, the builder of the choir. His successors, Scrope and Bowet, nobly followed his example. And numberless other instances might be given in which the Archbishops of York have evinced their care for their Metropolitan Church.

There were, also, many other benefactors less noted indeed in position, but hardly less distinguished in their liberality. The famous Skirlaw was a large contributor towards the renovation of the lantern; Haxey may be called the builder of the library, and to Dean Andrew the Church was indebted, amongst other things, for the battlements of the choir. Indeed, so widely diffused was the spirit of sacrifice, and the wish to decorate one of the noblest of God's temples, that there were few wills in which there was no bequest to the fabric; the canons, especially, were lavish in their testamentary gifts. To the family of Scrope the Minster was under the greatest obligations. In 1386, when their right to the golden bend, their famous bearing, was contested in a court of chivalry, the sub-treasurer of York gave his evidence in behalf of the Scropes, and produced some vestments which were charged with the disputed shield. After this they had a full right to be considered the patrons of the Church, if deeds of kindness and munificence could place them in that proud position. Many of them are laid in the presbytery, now unrecorded and forgotten; but there is one sleeping there, a noble-hearted prelate, whose generosity and sufferings must for ever endear him to Yorkshire and to York. Nor must we forget two other houses, Percy and Vavasor, which strove with each other in their endeavours to beautify God's house. The Vavasors gave the Chapter free access to their quarries, and if we may believe tradition, and there seems to be no reason for doubting it, large quantities of stone.* The Percies were even more generous, giving stone, and particularly timber, in profusion.† And to commemorate the good deeds of these two noble houses, the Chapter of York has honoured them with a noble monument. On either side of the west door of the Cathedral, which they assisted to erect, stands a figure deftly carved after the image of a man. These are the Percy and the Vavasor, each bearing his offering in his arm, the wood and stone which they once gave. Bare-headed they stand, for they are suppliants before the Lord of all. Brothers in arms and in munificence, you are not yet forgotten! Your gifts were indeed noble, but you could have no prouder monument!

To the Dean and Chapter of York the members of the Surtees Society are under great obligations. All the records * cf. Browne, 47, 48.

† In 1362, when Archbishop Thoresby grants his permission for the founding of the Percy chantry in York Minster for the souls of Hen. de Percy, etc., he says—"Vellemus gratam considerationem habere ad profum beneficia quibus tam dicti defuneti et progenitorum suorum recolenda prioritas quam filius et heres suis predictus ecclesiam nostram Ebor. liberaliter promoverunt, presertim appropriari procurando ecclesiam de Topeliff ejusdem nostrae dioc., in qua jus patronatus habebant, ad fabricam ecclesie nostrae Ebor. eminentius construend' et perpetuo sustinend', ac de lapidicentis suis lapides quant. pro dicta fabrica opus esset sumendos et inde libere cariandos munifice concedendo, et ipsam graciis aliis variis, ut in concessione viarum per districtus et loca sua pro cariacione lapidum predictorum et transitu ministrorum ipsius ecclesie accomodis ussigande."

belonging to the Minster have been thrown open to them in the most generous manner, and the wishes of the Chapter have been most courteously carried out by their clerk, C. A. Thiselton, Esq. I am most happy to have this opportunity of thanking that gentleman for his most considerate kindness, which has been shewn to me upon all occasions.

I am glad, also, to acknowledge the courtesy of Messrs. Hudson and Buckle, who have granted full access to the archiepiscopal registers. The Society is under obligations to Mr. Canon Harcourt and Professor Willis, and to Mr. J. H. Parker it is greatly indebted for the loan of the very useful plan of the Minster which was prepared by that eminent archæologist Professor Willis, and used by him in his account of the Cathedral which was drawn up for the members of the Archæological Institute.

The members of the Surtees Society will be aware that there has been a great delay in the issuing of the present volume. I have already acquainted them with the causes of that delay, and I must throw myself again upon their generous indulgence. I do not regret the labour which has been spent upon this book, and that has not been slight, but there are associations connected with this volume which must always be most painful to myself. Its progress has been retarded by illness and affliction of no ordinary kind. Two kinsmen very near and dear to me, who took great interest in this work, have not been permitted to witness its completion. One, the greatest church-restorer of modern times, was delighted with the novel information that the Rolls contained, and I well remember his pointing to the charges for painting the interior of the lantern at York, recorded at page 77, the last sheet that he saw, and saying—"This is just what we want to do at Ely." Now, singularly enough, the lantern in that glorious temple, renovated and painted, is to be his monument. Another kinsman, nearer and dearer still, first suggested the publication of this volume, and frequently said that it would make quite a revolution in architectural archaeology. All the early sheets were submitted to his experienced eye, but, alas, he was not permitted to see many of them. That which ends with page 160 was the last that was sent to him. He kept it longer than usual, and I wondered at it; at length it was returned, and I soon saw that although it had been a labour of love to peruse it, it had been a labour still. Upon page 156 were the last words that he ever wrote in connexion with the favourite pursuits of his life; there did that hand, so true to the Surtees Society, for the first time, waver. A fortnight afterwards and it was lifeless. It may seem idle to record such trifles as these; I mention them with a melancholy pleasure, and some will thank me for them.

These things are now over, and this volume is at length completed. Several things have been omitted from want of space and time. The book, however, contains nearly all the evidences upon which an architectural account of the Church of York must be built. At some future time it may, perhaps, be in my power to weave out of them a history of that Minster in a more popular form.

EXPLANATION OF THE PLANS.

THIS explanation is given in Professor Willis's own words. It will be well to study the Plans in connection with the Professor's description of the Minster.

"Beginning with No. 5, and reckoning backwards through the series, the black parts of each plan shew all the portions of the previous plan that have been retained, and the light parts shew the portions that have been changed. In No. 1, however, as there is no previous plan, light tint is used to distinguish the conjectural portions from those which have still left traces of their existence and dimensions, and which are marked full black. This light tint is, however, shaded in the opposite direction from the light tints previously explained, so that there can be no ambiguity, and the same may be said of the tint E, in No. 2, which is merely employed to designate a space filled with earth.

"Again, beginning the series of plans from No. 1, each plan has a dotted outline, which marks the extent of the additional building in the next plan in order. Thus the relative dimensions of each new member of the cathedral to the one which it has superseded are brought into direct comparison. The gradual changes by which the Norman cathedral of No. 1 was converted into the existing cathedral of No. 5, were worked out in the following order: 1st, a new choir; 2nd, a pair of new transepts; 3rd, a new nave; 4th, a second new and still larger choir. And these successive additions exceeded the former portions not merely in length but also in breadth.

"The date below each plan is merely that of some one year in round numbers that occurred in the interval between the changes, so that the plan to which it is appended represents the church as it existed in that year. I have purposely avoided the crowding of letters of reference into these plans.

"In No. 5 I have delineated the choir stalls, high-altar, and steps, and the double screen with the feretory, or space T between them, on the authority of Torre's plan, which was taken before the western screen was removed.

"In the nave K is the font, L the position of Melton's tomb, and M the place where Drake found the supposed coffin of St. William."

It is, unfortunately, without a date, but William de Hoton, the master mason, and Philip (de Lincoln), the master carpenter, are well known persons, and I am inclined to think that this roll was made between 1350 and 1360. The workmen, it will be observed, are few in number, and the outlay is so inconsiderable, as to lead us to suppose that no work of any magnitude was going on at this time. The roll contains the expenditure for twenty-five weeks, but it is in a very imperfect state.

‡ The lending or landing place here mentioned is still used for the same purpose. It is the place on the York side of the Ouse, at which the ferry-boat touches. All the wood and stone which was used in the minster was dragged up the narrow lane which leads from the river, and passed the hospital of St. Leonard on their way through Blake-street to the cemetery. In the cemetery was the mason's yard, together with the workshops.

[ANNO MCCCLXXI.]

DEEST CAPUT ROTULI.† Et die Sabbati, x (xv) die Octobris soluti xv cementaris operantibus ibidem per ij sept., quolibet * Uggleforth is the narrow street which leads from the minster yard into Goodramgate. There are now no signs of the existence of a gate.

† A very valuable document, with which Mr. Browne begins his series of rolls. A large portion of it, containing the receipts, together with the wages of the workmen up to the month of August, has been lost, and the remainder is in a very tattered condition. It is eight or nine feet in length. Mr. Browne assigns it to the year 1370; it belongs, however, to the year 1371.

The easternmost part of the church was now being built. The first stone of this part of the minster was laid by Archbishop Thoresby, in 1361. Every exertion was made by the Chapter to hasten the consummation of the work, and they were ably assisted in their endeavours by the munificent Archbishop. Not only did that illustrious prelate contribute very largely from his own purse to the restoration of his Cathedral, but he also destroyed, for the same purpose, his palace at Sherburn, and induced the clergy and laity of his diocese to assist him in his pious undertaking. Considerable funds were by these means collected together, and the work was vigorously carried on.

The eastern portion of the church must be divided into two parts, the presbytery and the choir proper. Of these two parts, the presbytery, or the easternmost, was begun first of all. To erect it, there was no necessity for disturbing the services of the old choir, or for interfering to any extent, with its proportions. It is probable, therefore, that only a small portion of that part of the church, immediately behind the altar, was removed, and that a temporary wall was erected which separated the choir from the new work, and made it still available for the daily services.

Archbishop Thoresby, as has been said above, laid the foundation-stone of the presbytery in July, 1361. The work, therefore, had been going on for ten years when this roll was compiled, and very considerable progress must necessarily have been made. There was no lack of funds, and no want of energy, while Thoresby presided over the see, and the presbytery, after ten years' labour, must have been nearly completed. I must now bring before my readers the words of the chronicler Stubbs, in which he describes some of the munificent acts of the prelate who has just been mentioned. “Idem vero Archiepiscopus,” he says, “ut verus amator Virginis, capellam ejusdem Dei geneticis et Virginis Mariae mirabili artis sculptam, atque notabili pictura peregit. Ibique plurimorum venerabilium pontificum, predecessorum suorum, corpora a choro superius translata, propriis expensis fecit tumulari,—sepultus est coram altari B.M.V. in novo opere chori, anno 1373.”

From this passage Mr. Browne, and every writer upon the minster, concludes that Thoresby finished a richly ornamented chapel to the Virgin, in which he laid his own bones and those of his predecessors. Now, at the east end of the capiente per sept. 3s. . . . Et soluti . . . ment' op. ibidem per j sept. et v. dies sic cap. Et soluti j cementario op. ibidem per presbytery (the whole of which is still called the Lady Chapel), we know that there was an altar to the Virgin, and many traces of painting may still be found there. We know, also, that before or near that altar (exactly as described by the chronicler), Leland found the monuments of seven archbishops, with Thoresby in the middle. We know that Torre, who could never have seen Leland, identifies these tombs, and that Drake, and every other writer, follows in his wake. And within the memory of man seven similar stones, with effaced inscriptions, occupied the same position. We know, also, that Thoresby began (at least) the presbytery in which this altar is placed, and there is no evidence to shew that he did much in any other part of the church. We are brought, therefore, irresistibly to the conclusion which every other writer has arrived at, that the great altar to the Virgin which Thoresby erected, is in the centre of the present presbytery, or Lady Chapel.

The position of the altar to the Virgin, "in novo opere chori," being thus ascertained to be in the presbytery, we may gather, from the words of the chronicler, a pretty correct notion of the progress that had been made in the building of that part of the church. We cannot believe that the Archbishop would begin to decorate his chantry with exquisite sculpture and painting if the presbytery was without a roof.

In the present roll, which records the expenditure of the year 1371, there is, I think, sufficient evidence to shew that the roof was actually placed upon the presbytery in that year. If this was the case, the Archbishop might safely proceed with his decoration of the altar, and place before it the tombs of his predecessors, without any fear of accident.

If the roof was thus erected, the walls must necessarily have been completed. It appears that some Huddleston stone has been used, and from the fact that there is no evidence to shew that the Chapter had any right over that famous quarry before the year 1385, Mr. Browne argues that the presbytery was not completed till after that year. The presence of that stone, which only appears here and there, may easily be accounted for from the circumstance that the materials of the hall at Sherburn, which is close to Huddleston, were granted to the use of the fabric in 1361. In 1385 the Chapter take a lease of the quarry for eighty years, and we cannot believe that they would do so if they had had no experience of the quality of the stone.

I am sorry to differ so entirely from the conclusions of my laborious predecessor, Mr. Browne, on the above-mentioned points. Archbishop Thoresby speaks of the want of a place in the minster suitable for the daily mass of the Virgin, and he supplied that want, I am persuaded, by the altar which, according to Stubbs, he erected in the presbytery. Mr. Browne thinks that this daily celebration was reserved to the high altar, and yet the extracts which he gives from the wills of Robert Wolveden and several others, entirely contradict his theory. He also assigns the seven stones, which all the historians of the minster concur in ascribing to the Archbishops, to six other persons, one of whom in his will desires merely to be buried at the east end of the church, and the other near the Percy Chapel. Again, he removes Archbishop Thoresby from the company of his predecessors, and ascribes to him that tomb in the nave which has been too frequently given to Archbishop Roger: a tomb which must have been erected at least a century after Thoresby's death.

Mr. Browne considers that the chapel of the Virgin, which Thoresby built, is that dedicated to the Virgin and the holy angels, which was adjacent to the nave. There is no evidence whatever for this. He also thinks that Thoresby removed the bodies of his predecessors (mentioned by Stubbs) into the same place. There is, however, no record of any burial in that chapel. Again, it is never called the chapel of St. Mary, alone; it occasionally is termed "St. Sepulchre's," but in the majority of cases it is the chapel of St. Mary and the Holy Angels. I cannot, therefore, resist the conclusion, that the chapel to the Virgin, built by Thoresby, and before which he rests, is in the presbytery, that there is an appropriate union with her divine Son and protector St. John, she was daily revered, and that Thoresby finished that noble portion of his scheme during his life. The roll before me seems to intimate that the roof was erected nearly two years before his death, and he could, therefore, leisurely prepare his own sepulchre among the bones of his predecessors, a fitting resting-place for the most pious of the successors of Paulinus.

* The wages, it will be observed, were paid once a fortnight, and I have given a single fortnight's expenditure as a specimen of the rest. From this we may conclude that the year had been one of great activity in the masons' yards, especially in the spring and summer. The number of masons employed is a considerable one, and, judging from the wages, they may be divided into several classes. The master mason was Robert de Patrington.

* The erection of the partition-wall, to separate the old choir from the new work, would probably necessitate the re-decoration of the ceiling of the roof above the high altar. Some farther remarks upon the "celura," mentioned in this roll, will be given immediately. An architectural friend of mine suggests that this painted ceiling was a flat roof which was put up in the great tower, to which place the high altar was probably removed during the building of the choir. He thinks that the presbytery was now completed, and the re-building of the choir going on, and that, on that account, it was necessary to remove the high altar to a more convenient place. It is, however, not very probable that the works in the choir were begun so early as 1371, and even if it were so, it would scarcely be necessary to remove the high altar for some time after their commencement.

† A most valuable and remarkable entry. There are several notices of the ceiling in this roll. 10,000 Scotsem nails are bought "pro celura," at the cost of 41s. 8d. Two large trees, 80 rigalds, and 500 wainscots are purchased "pro celura." Five rods and a qr. of timber are sawn for it, sixteen "keyes" are wrought for it at the cost of £4. Packthread is purchased for it, and, finally, we have the interesting item to which this note is appended. These items are gathered from different parts of the roll. There is also a charge of 47s. 3d. for painting the ceiling above the high altar with stars. Mr. Browne places all these notices together, and refers them to the reredos of the high altar. In this opinion I cannot agree with him. The high altar, it will be remembered, occupied its old position in the old choir. Its position, however, was merely a temporary one, as the presbytery was now far advanced, and the gradual destruction of the old choir in which the high altar stood was now imminent. Is it, then, at all probable that the Chapter would waste a large sum of money in constructing "a large ceiling" for a part of the church which was speedily to be destroyed? Again, such a reredos, or ceiling, or whatever it is called, if it was made for the old choir, would not be appropriate for the new one. It would be too short, and in every way useless. The painting of the ceiling above mentioned must, of course, specially relate to the high altar, but we may refer it either, as has been before said, to the decoration of the roof above, or to the ornamentation of some old reredos, which, it may be supposed, existed.

It is plain, therefore, that the “great ceiling” cannot, with any propriety, be applied to the paltry decoration of the old high altar, neither can it have any connexion with the old choir, upon which the hand of the restorer had not yet been laid. No work was now going on in any portion of the church but one, and by an exhaustive division, therefore, we must conclude that the “great ceiling” referred to was the framework of wood which was placed upon the walls of the presbytery. We cannot, indeed, say that it was the whole of the roof; but the adjective “magnus” certainly gives us the notion of magnitude and extent. The quantity of timber purchased in the course of the year is but small, but there might be much more in the store-house, and a much greater part of the framework might be ready for use than could be wrought out of the few trees which were bought during the year. We cannot but think that the presbytery would be quite ready for its roof after the masons had been employed upon it for ten years, and if this was put upon it nearly two years before Archbishop Thoresby’s death, Stubbs may be entirely justified when he says that that prelate “capellam Virginis Mariae miribili artis sculptura atque notabili pictura peregit.”

* Between the rolls II. and III. there is an unfortunate interval of twenty-eight years, and there is very little collateral information to tell us how the fabric was proceeding.

After the decease of Archbishop Thoresby in 1373, we are not surprised to hear that the work which was commenced by him languished for some time. The loss of his munificent donations deprived the fabric fund of a large portion of its revenue, and Archbishop Neville did not follow the example of his predecessor. His many misfortunes, together with the commotions of the times, could not fail to impede the progress of the new choir. Therefore it was that its erection extended over a period of at least twenty-seven years, when, with ordinary means and activity, it could have been completed in eleven or twelve.

The presbytery, as we have seen, was finished before Thoresby died, and its towering walls and roof would present a striking and painful contrast to the humble choir of Archbishop Roger, which was still standing. Several years after Thoresby’s death, were spent, as we may believe, in comparative inactivity. In 1377 the annual income of the fabric was increased by the appropriation of the church of Misterton; and it was, perhaps, after this, that the building of the choir really commenced in earnest. In 1385 the Chapter take a lease of the quarry of Huddleston for eighty years, a circumstance which proves that they were in want of stone. In 1390 a complaint is made that the progress of the work was delayed. The present roll, belonging to the year 1399, is the next document that comes before us. The walls of the choir must have been now completed and ready for the roof. Accordingly, we find great preparations for it in the gathering together of timber and other necessary materials.

† Under the very comprehensive title of Old Stores, we occasionally meet with some very curious items. The old images which were sold to a painter probably formed a portion of the painted woodwork of the old choir, and the stars of lead would probably be used at St. Sampson’s, for decorating the roof.

‡ Were these stores on the ground, or above in the tower? It has been generally supposed that the high altar was temporarily placed under the bell tower during the re-edification of the choir; but if these heavy stores were on the ground we can hardly think that the altar could remain there conveniently. The great cross, however, was still under the tower; and, probably, therefore, these stores were in the roofs above. If we suppose that the altar was placed still further westward, there would be no inconvenience from these things; and a temporary wall put up between the two westernmost pillars of the tower would confine the services to the nave, and protect it from the dust and noise caused by the repairs going on beyond it. The high altar could scarcely be placed in the presbytery, as the scaffolds and litter in the choir would obstruct the approach to it.

‡ This is confirmatory, to a certain extent, of the old tradition that the Percies gave the wood which was used in the Minster. Several documents will be given in the Appendix which set forth the munificence of that illustrious family. There is little doubt but that this timber was gathered together for the roof of the choir: the windows also of that part of the church seem to have been ready to receive their glass.

* A fragment of a fabric roll which was probably drawn up about the year 1400.

It begins with the wages of the carpenters. Robert Downham is the master, and three others are employed with him. Their wages amount to 22*l.* 10*s.* The money paid to labourers is 41*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

The choir was still incomplete, and we learn from this roll that a large quantity of iron was wrought into bars for the windows. The glass, as will be seen in the list of stores, was already provided.

Mr. Browne assigns this roll to the year 1390, but the writing is that of a little later period.

* Mr. Browne ascribes this roll to the year 1386; it seems to belong to 1401-2- or 3, probably to the latter year. The writing is identical with that of No. VI. A quantity of stone, it will be observed, is obtained from the quarry at Stapleton. Now, Henry IV. allowed the Chapter to bring stone from that place to York, without paying any toll, in 1400. It is hardly probable that they would make much use of that quarry till this concession was made.

It will be seen that a large number of masons was still employed, although only a small quantity of stone comes into the masons' yards. There would be still much delicate stone-work to be done for the choir, and the groining, pro-

VI.—COMPOTUS — CUSTODIS FABRICÆ ANNO M.CCCC.III.

(DEEST CAPUT ROTULI.)*

—. Et de 100s. de palefrido domini Roberti Faryndon† prebendarii prebendæ de Laughton in Morthyng.

LEGATA ET DONATA. (Inter alia). Et de 7l. 16s. de elemosina magistri Ricardi le Scrope‡ Archiepiscopi Ebor. pro j cementario invento in fabrica de anno jam elaps. Summa 19l. 6s. 3d.

* The date of this roll may be fixed pretty accurately, although the beginning has been lost. It contains, among the receipts, the mortuary of the prebendary of Laughton, who died in the winter of 1404, and it may safely be assigned to that year. It certainly cannot be later, as the munificent gift of Archbishop Scrope is recorded in it. He died in June, 1405, and seems to have been alive when this roll was compiled.

Between the years 1400 and 1405, the period illustrated by this pair of rolls, it is probable that the roof was put upon the western portion of the choir, or the choir proper. We have seen that at the close of the year 1399 the fabric possessed considerable stores of timber, glass, and lead. Much iron work was also prepared for the windows of the choir. In the present roll there are farther purchases of lead and nails. I believe, therefore, that at the beginning of the year 1405 the roof of the choir (wood and lead) was complete. There is internal evidence, I think, in these rolls, that this was the case. For instance, there is a charge for plastering the walls (?) and the altars in the new choir. Now this would not be done till the roof was safely upon the walls. In No. V. there is a donation made to the Commons of the City of York for clearing away the stones (no doubt the waste and rubbish out of the church), and for covering the timber on the outside. This timber was probably spared from the roof, and was stowed away under cover for future use. And in the present roll it appears that, under the head of old stores, the Chapter sold a very large quantity of new timber, a proof, I imagine, that they had bought more wood for the roof than was actually required.

It is much to be regretted that these early rolls are so imperfect. They are in a sad condition. The titles are, in each case, wanting, but the dates may be accurately fixed by the contents. What a pity it is that Torr did not turn his attention to them when he was forming his stupendous collections. He had before him many documents which are now lost, and he and Dugdale record the existence of a regular register book of the fabric, which is now missing. A little care on his part might have prevented much inaccuracy and doubt.

† Faringdon died in the winter of 1404. An account of him, and of the other dignitaries mentioned in this volume, will be found in the forthcoming Fasti Eboracenses.

‡ The munificence of this estimable prelate was only one of those peculiar characteristics of his which made him so popular and so beloved. The Church of York had good reason to remember him, and the offerings at his tomb were for many years a considerable addition to the funds of the fabric. Mr. Browne is of opinion, that the principal events in the tragedy which ended in the Archbishop's death, are recorded on the sculptured capitals of the piers in the north aisle of the presbytery; but there is no authority whatever for this appropriation: it would be, to say the least, strange "to represent Judge Gascoigne as an old woman, and the Archbishop himself as a goose!" Again, it would be somewhat strange if these sculptures had any reference to the Archbishop, considering that they were made long before he died. Other notices of the Archbishop and his family will occur afterwards.

* An item, occurring also in the previous roll, which shews that the masons were still busy on the walls. They were working on the outside, but in the side aisles, and other parts of the interior their services were, probably, still required. It will be observed, that I have given but one extract from the part of the roll devoted to the masons. It would be tedious and unnecessary to give the whole of the MS.

The roll records the employment of four carpenters, of whom Robert Downham was the master, and they were paid the sum of 25l. 2s. for their work. The sum of 10l. 3s. 4d. was spent upon labourers.

* This is the first perfect fabric roll that has occurred. As all of them have been deficient in the receipts, I give that part of the roll entire, to shew my readers what sources of income the fabric possessed.

There is a gap of ten years between this roll and its immediate predecessor. During this time many important alterations were effected. For the convenience of my readers I shall mention these, and at the same time give a brief resume of the operations which had been carried on from the commencement of the series of rolls.

In 1361 Archbishop Thoresby laid the foundation stone of the new choir; the eastern portion of which, called the presbytery or Lady-chapel, was substantially completed before he died. The building of the western portion of the choir occupies the space between 1373 and 1400; and before 1405 that part of the church was roofed in, and considerable progress had been made with the internal decorations. These are, generally speaking, the conclusions arrived at by Professor Willis, which are assented to by Mr. Poole. Mr. Browne, however, differs very widely from them. He thinks that the presbytery was not roofed in till 1400, and that the choir-proper was not in a condition to receive its roof till 1434 or 1435. I must confess that a very careful examination of the documentary evidence upon which Mr. Browne relies leads me to give my opinion entirely against him. The architectural student will, I think, do the same, when he reviews the building and Mr. Browne's work, without the assistance of any additional information. There are, however, several entries in these rolls which have been hitherto either altogether omitted or imperfectly noticed; and these seem to militate altogether against Mr. Browne's theories.

The western part of the choir, as has been said before, was completed before the year 1405. Between it and the decorated nave stood the old Norman bell-tower, presenting a striking contrast to the rest of the church. We may be sure, therefore, that as soon as the choir was complete some alterations would be made in the tower to make it harmonize with the new work. Accordingly, in the year 1409, we find that arrangements were made for altering the fourth or south-western pillar of the tower. We may, therefore, reasonably infer that the other three pillars had been previously treated in a similar way. The change that was made was, principally, recasing the inner faces of the pillars with perpendicular stone work. Of the outer faces, those towards the nave were decorated, having become so when the nave was rebuilt; and those towards the choir were part of the work which had just been finished in that part of the church. The upper part of the tower which held the bells was built by John Romanus in the Early English style. Before this could be altered it was necessary to erect another bell-tower, and therefore the present central tower did not assume its present appearance till the year 1470 or thereabouts.

De 48*l.* de Abbate et Conv. de Fontibus pro decimis garbarum et

The whole of the choir, as far as the roofs and walls are concerned, having been completed by the commencement of the fifteenth century or shortly afterwards, we must expect to find some notices of the re-arrangement of the interior. Accordingly, in 1403 and 1404, we find that the walls (?) and altars of the new choir (the choir-proper) were plastered over, probably to prepare them for the painters. We have also preparations for the filling of the windows with stained glass, they having been temporarily filled with plain quarries or canvas. In 1405 John Thornton of Coventry engaged to execute the great west window, as it now stands, within three years, and many other windows were probably completed about the same time. In 1405 we hear of the first interments in the eastern part of the church since those of Thoresby and his predecessors. The mutilated corpse of Archbishop Scrope was laid in the presbytery, and near him was placed the body of his illustrious kinsman, Stephen Lord Scrope of Masham. In 1409 Thomas Walleworth, the brother of the well known Lord Mayor of London, was interred near the same place, and burials became pretty frequent in that part of the church. Not that it was impossible for any one to have been interred there previously, but it was probably considered inconvenient or inexpedient to open the earth in that part of the church, to any extent, at an earlier period. It is observable that these interments took place in novo opere chori—words which Mr. Browne underlines as if they confirmed his theory that the presbytery was only roofed in a few years before. Of course it was the new work when compared with the nave or the chapter house! In 1415 the crypt was paved with Flemish tiles, and the windows and doors were fitted up with the necessary iron work. The stone work of the crypt, however, was of an earlier date, and must have been completed before the western part of the choir was begun. Between the years 1405 and 1415 most of the internal arrangements of the choir-end of the church would be completed. There was much to be done, and we cannot suppose either that the presbytery and its adjuncts were complete in 1373, or that the choir proper and its decorations were finished in 1405. Of course, on the outside, there was work enough to monopolize the attention of the masons for many years. We must now turn our attention to the eye of the church, the high altar, to the decoration and erection of which the Chapter would be sure to devote themselves at the earliest possible opportunity.

When the choir of Archbishop Roger was removed, and of the period of its destruction, we have no accurate information, it would be necessary to erect a temporary high altar, and to set up stalls in some other part of the church. Mr. Browne seems to think that the old choir was standing at least up to the year 1405, and argues that this was the case from several documents in which the words choir and high altar are mentioned. Now these words might be applied, with perfect truth, to the temporary choir and high altar, and to them, as I believe, they refer. Where this temporary choir was is a matter of some difficulty and doubt. Mr. Browne thinks that the presbytery was the place selected for it. Professor Willis is in favour of the nave and central tower. The presbytery would, no doubt, be quite ready for such a purpose; But Professor Willis thinks that it could not be conveniently reached by the worshippers while the works of the choir were going on. The altar, as he thinks, might safely be placed under the tower; but it could not remain there when the faces of the pillars were being recased between the years 1405 and 1410. Whichever theory be correct, I believe that the new choir would be quite ready to have the high altar returned to it between the years 1405 and 1415. Of course it would be the wish of the Chapter that the new altar should be of sumptuous and costly workmanship. It certainly seems to have occupied a site close to its proper position when the present roll was compiled (1415), for in it there is a charge for sixty-six yards of cloth called westwall, "pro le reredore magni altaris." This was, I doubt not, hung immediately behind the high altar, to form an appropriate barrier between it and the incipient screen or reredos which was to separate the altar from the presbytery. At the present time in the Cathedral at Ely a similar cloth performs the like office till the magnificent reredos is complete. Between the years 1410 and 1430 a very large sum of money seems to have been expended upon the reredos and the table of the high altar, whatever that may have been. Money, together with plate and jewels, were bequeathed to it; and on no other portion of the church was treasure so lavishly bestowed. A new rood was also erected in 1415 before the high altar in the new choir.

Of the testamentary benefactions to the fabric, which were very numerous, many will be found in the two volumes of Testamenta Eboracensis, which have been published by this Society. Others, and the larger portion, will occur in the forthcoming Fasti Eboracenses.

* Walter de Skirlaw, the munificent Bishop of Durham, was a great builder. He became a Canon of York in 1370, and from that time, till he died, we may be pretty sure that he was a great benefactor to the fabrie. His arms occur in the south-eastern transept of the choir, and also on the spandrel of the central tower. He is said to have contributed very largely to the lantern tower, and to it this gift of 52*l.* was probably applied. In his will, dated in 1406, he left 100 marks to the fabrie. To say more about his charity and liberality here, would be to trespass upon another work, in which his good deeds will be more appropriately chronicled.

* A roll, the date of which is ascertained from the names mentioned among the mortuaries. The choir was now complete, but from several entries in this and the succeeding rolls it is probable that some work was going on in the central tower which was not thoroughly finished till 1475, or thereabouts. The Chapter had now time to give their attention to other works of minor importance, indeed, but still necessary. "It is probable," says Mr. Browne, "that about this period, not only the treasury, but the vestry and Archbishop Zouch's chapel were completely rebuilt," to make them, in some degree, uniform with the new building. The treasury, however, and the vestry, were built twenty years before this. The library was now being made, as may be seen from the present roll. The works about the high altar were also progressing, viz., the rich reredos of wood, and, probably, also the stone screen behind St. William's shrine.

William Colchester was the master-mason, as he was also in 1415, and thirty-nine masons were employed. To them the sum of 24*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.* was paid for wages. John Askam, the master-carpenter of 1415, held the same office now, and 27*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* were paid to the carpenters.

† These notices fix precisely the date of this roll. All these persons died in 1418. Appilton was one of those persons who were sent to the Council of Constance, and probably died on the journey.

‡ Haxey was a great benefactor to the minster in several ways. In 1404 he became prebendary of Barnby. From 1418 to 1423 he was treasurer. It is probable that he had a good deal to do with the fabric during his residence at York. In 1409 the charge of the restoration of the fourth pier of the central tower was entrusted to him. In 1418 he gives a munificent present to the new library, in one of the windows of which his arms were put up. The same arms also occur on the groining of one of the choir aisles, and in the clerestory windows of the choir. He died in 1424-5, leaving 100*s.* to the fabric, and twenty silver dishes, together with 20*l.* to the table of the high altar. Of his monument and his other charitable deeds a full account will be given elsewhere.

* Many of these entries have been considerably abbreviated, and some have been altogether omitted. My readers would not thank me for filling up these pages with useless repetitions and uninteresting information.

* A very remarkable entry. Archbishop Arundell, who had just died, had previously presided over the see of York. His executors are going to erect a monument to him, and they send to York, probably at the direction of the Archbishop, for a copy of an effigy there. A copy in wood is made, and sent up to them.

† A roll in which there is little worthy of notice. The same works are proceeding which were mentioned in No. VIII. The editor has struck out many items which are not of general interest, but everything of importance is given in full. The sum of 244l. 14s. was paid to thirty-nine masons, of whom Wm. Colchester was the master; and the labourers received 37l. 10s.

* The altar of St. Stephen stood at the east end of the north aisle of the choir. There the Scropes had their chantry, as will be seen hereafter. Sir Stephen Scrope and the murdered Archbishop were laid there in 1405, and many of their kindred rest in the same place. On the pareclose of the chapel stood an image of the Virgin. In 1479 John de Gisburgh, a canon, requested to be buried "coram ymagine B. M. V. in insula boriali." In 1493 Robert Este desired to be interred near the same place.

† A perfect roll. The various items of the receipts are given by Mr. Browne. John Long was the master mason, and received 10l. for his fee. Eighteen others were employed, a considerably smaller number than usual. The whole charge for the masons was 137l. 16s. Three carpenters, of whom John Askam was the chief, received 22l. 19s. 4d.

This roll shews that the works in the central tower were going on, and that the library was now finished.

* The library was now finished, and its furniture complete. The books were accordingly placed in it. John de Newton, the treasurer, by will dated in 1414, left a large quantity of books to the Chapter for the library. They were now chained to the desks, and guarded with horn and studs, to prevent their being damaged by the readers. Newton also gave three silver bowls, with wheels on the base, to maintain three torches before the high altar, together with twelve silver chingers and twelve dishes for the high altar. His will has been printed in full in Test. Ebor., i. 36*l.* My readers will there learn the titles of forty volumes here mentioned.

† Archbishop Bowet still continues to encourage the work going on at York. We cannot tell to what this special gift was applied. In 1423 the Archbishop died, and was buried under the stately tomb which he had erected for himself at the east end of the minster.

‡ Canon residentiary, and prebendary of Ampleford. An account of his benefactions will be found elsewhere. He erected an altar in the minster, and probably was the donor of one of the windows in the north aisle, in the border of which are repeated the words, "Thomas Parker," with a hound collared between them. This must have been his badge.

* The arms of Archbishop Bowet occur on the easternmost keystone of the south aisle of the presbytery. It does not at all follow from this circumstance that the vault was at that time begun. The bays in that part of the church seem to have been whitewashed at the same time, a process which would frequently be repeated. The interior of the minster does not seem to have been generally painted.

* John Pricklove or Pricklowe was prebendary of Bugthorpe, and died in 1431-2. Wolveden was treasurer, and died in 1432-3. He left 20l. to the fabric. A window in the north aisle of the choir has his name repeated in the borders.

† It is difficult to say who this Sir Henry Percy was. Perhaps he was the grandson of the Earl of Northumberland, who was killed on Bramham Moor, by Sir Thomas, one of his younger sons, and Elizabeth Strabolgy. He left two daughters and co-heirs, both of whom made great alliances. On the 3rd of August, 1434, administration to the effects of Sir Henry Percy, late lord of Harthill, was granted to his noble relict, Elizabeth Scales. There is but little known of the younger children of our old baronial houses.

* The south-west bell tower, therefore, had been begun.

† The great work now in progress was the erection of the south-western tower, in which the bells were to be placed. It is not known when it was finished. It was erected under the auspices of John Berningham, the treasurer, and he has immortalized himself by having his name cut in stone, under one of the large windows on the outside. He was a munificent contributor to the fabric. Indeed, the treasurers of York seem to have held the pencil as well as the purse, and to their architectural skill the beauty of the minster is in a great measure to be ascribed.

At the end of the roll is an inventory of the stores belonging to the fabric, which were purchased during the year. They were valued at 127*l.* 9*s.* 5*½d.* As the purchase of them has been already recorded in this roll, it is unnecessary to give the inventory of the remnant.

‡ The lord mayor and citizens of York were now emulating the spirit of the Chapter. They were erecting the magnificent guildhall, which is one of the principal ornaments of the city of York. They would, necessarily, have some difficulty in procuring stone, and they resorted to the old stores of the fabric.

§ Can this be the vicar of St. Martin's, in Coney Street, at whose expense the west window in that church was filled with such beautiful glass? By his will, dated on New Year's Day, 1443, he left the residue of his estate to the fabric of St. Martin's, if the parishioners will build it anew within seven years. To Robert Steresakre he gives a book called Breton, and to the minster library another called Gyllys de regimine Principum. To Whitby Abbey he leaves Ralph Higden's Policronica, which John Morton, Esq., bequeathed to him in 1431.

|| William Pelleson was archdeacon of the East Riding, and canon residuary. By his will, dated at Copmanthorpe, in 1434, he desired to be buried in the nave of the minster, at the head or feet of master William Ferriby. John Selow was also a residentiary and precentor. In his will, made in 1438, he desires to be interred between the steps of the choir and the vestry door, on the south side of the minster, if he dies at York.

* An extraordinary quantity of timber is purchased in this year. Mr. Browne thinks that it was procured for the roof of the choir, which we think was finished thirty years before this time. We must remember that heavy timber would be required for the tower, which was being erected; there is also no special record, at any time, of the appropriation of any wood for the stalls in the church; these fittings may have been now completed. At all events it is evident that the carpenters were very busily employed. John Askham still presided over that department, receiving 66*s.* 8*d.* for his fee; and the carpenters in this year cost the Chapter the sum of 17*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

The quantity of iron and lead purchased in the course of the year is very observable, but we do not know to what purposes they were applied. I do not think that our builders, in old days, covered their roofs with lead as soon as the woodwork was completed. A temporary covering of tiles was, I believe, frequently put upon them till the lead could be conveniently procured. The Chapter-house at York, which must have been finished before 1370, only received its lead roof about that year. It is quite possible that some of the roofs in the eastern portion of the church still required their leaden covering.

* Archbishop Greenfield died in 1312, and was buried near the altar of St. Nicholas. His tomb, with its graceful overarching canopy, and a portion of an effigy in brass, is still there. Greenfield was one of the earliest contributors to the fabric; and behind his tomb, in 1829, the fanatic, Jonathan Martin, concealed himself when he set fire to the minster. The windows here alluded to are close to the monument, facing the east. As they bear the name and arms of treasurer Wolveden, it is probable that the glass had been executed before the ironwork was made.

stones were inlaid with effigies, etc., of brass. Does this entry mean that the brazen figures were now, for the first time, inserted in the stones? If it is so, it is certainly most strange that there should have been so great a delay, as the monuments had been placed there more than sixty years before, and the presbytery had begun to receive other tombs soon after the beginning of the fifteenth century. The sum paid is but small. Is it possible that some of the figures required re-setting? The fastenings had probably become loose.

* Matilda de York, widow of Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cambridge, died in 1446. By her will, which was printed in Test. Ebor., ii., she bequeathed 100s. to York minster. She was, in more respects than one, a famous lady.

† A fragment of a roll which Mr. Browne ascribes to the year 1465. This date is certainly incorrect, but I am unable to supply the proper one. There is a mention made in the roll of a contract or agreement, for a certain portion of the Huddleston quarries, made by Sir John Langton. Now, as Sir John died in 1459, and, as there was no other knight in the family, this roll in which he is mentioned could not have been made in 1465. I have placed it, therefore, circa 1450, and it undoubtedly lies between that year and 1460.

The Chapter, it will be seen, were still in want of stone for the minster. What the special favour granted by Sir John Langton was we cannot tell. The roll speaks of his renewing certain charters, and the favour granted by him seems to have evoked the warmest acknowledgments on the part of the Chapter.

‡ Sir John Langton, who was the owner of the Huddleston quarries, resided at Farnley, near Leeds. To him and to his family the Chapter were under great obligations. They were the donors of large quantities of stone to the fabric. The wine, therefore, and the other presents which this roll records, were not without reason bestowed upon Sir John, and gratitude prompted the Chapter to put up his arms in the minster as a memorial of his munificence. Sir John died in 1459, and was buried at Leeds. The wills of his widow, Euphemia, and of their son and heir, John Langton, Esq., who was never knighted, are in Test. Ebor., ii.; that of John Langton, Esq., is a remarkably valuable document.

* A valuable entry. It is curious to trace the progress of masons and architects from one city to another, as they carry their mannerisms along with them; and similarities of style, in great as well as in small points, may thus be accounted for. Porter seems to have resided at Lincoln, and he is sent for to York by the Chapter, who wish to avail themselves of his experience. He returns to Lincoln, but in a few years we find him regularly established at York, as master of the masons, an office which he held for ten years. We cannot wonder at the wish of the Chapter to have the assistance of a man who was, in all probability, attached to the staff of the fabric of as fair a minster as their own, upon "the sovereign hill of Lincoln."

STIPENDIA FABRORUM ET EMPCIO FERRI ET CLAVORUM. Willelmo Jakson et socio suo pro diversis clavis, viz., viij.c bragges, no reason to differ from him. The sum of 32*l.* 19s. 11*d.* was paid for stone and the carriage: 25*l.* for masons, of whom five were employed, John Porter being the master: 28*l.* 1*d.* for carpenters' wages, of whom there were seven.

The roll records a gratuity to the workmen for erecting the scaffold within the minster. For what purpose was this scaffold required? The south-west tower in the nave was, we may presume, now completed, and the bells were probably soon transferred to it from the great lantern-tower. The Chapter, therefore, would now be able to commence operations in the lantern. The north-west tower in the nave, however, was still to be erected, and I am inclined to think that it was now first commenced. The absence of an appropriate companion to the south-western tower would be felt to be an eyesore to the unity of the minster, and we may be pretty sure that every exertion would be made to build it with the least possible delay. It must be remembered that the handsome lantern of treasurer Romanus was still untouched, and although it was of a different style to the nave or the choir, it must still have been a great ornament to the church, and I believe that the Chapter would wish to see the wanting tower erected before they meddled, to any extent, with the less necessary restoration of the lantern. They began with that when they had made some progress with the north-west tower; and accordingly we find, from some subsequent rolls, that the works in the two places were going on simultaneously. It would not be possible for the Chapter to carry on two distinct works of such magnitude and importance altogether at the same time, with the small number of artificers which their failing receipts had obliged them to employ.

* Many alterations were going on about this time in that magnificent church. In 1453, Thos. White of Beverley, leaves 6*l.*, "ad fabricaturam sive constructuram de los crosseyles de novo construendis." In 1460 John Ulceby leaves to the fabric of the church a shop with a chamber, in Butcher-row. In 1471, Wm. Melburn of Beverley, merchant, left as many Flanders tiles as would pave the north aisle of the chapel of the Virgin from the west end "usque le langelets."

* An imperfect roll, from which we can gather but little information. It records, however, the purchase of a large quantity of nails and lead, which were, probably, procured for the south-western tower. Six masons only were employed, one of whom, John Whittylsey, came from Leicester, the Chapter paying his travelling expenses. There were also six carpenters, who received the sum of 25*l.* 11s. 2d. The wages of the labourers amounted to 16*l.* 5s. 2d.

† The military orders throughout Europe had many troubles to contend with in the course of this century, and they were assisted by the contributions of the faithful. It appears that the Chapter had granted a subsidy of ten marks for the knights of Rhodes. The chest in which the alms were deposited is probably that which still remains in the vestry. It is carved, in very high relief, with the history of St. George, and is, in some respects, one of the most interesting specimens of mediaeval carving that is in existence. Mr. Poole, in his account of the minster, gives an excellent engraving of it.

‡ Wm. de Cottingham, for a long time the master-carpenter of the minster, died in 1457. Some extracts from his will, which shew that he had thriven in the world, will be given in the Appendix.

§ In old times there were but few vacant spaces around our Cathedrals. Commerce and traffic of every description were carried on at their very doors, as we may still see on the Continent. So it was at York. A range of tenements, extending from the west-end of Belfrey's Church to the corner of Petergate, was removed within the last thirty years. The burial-ground of the same church, which was adjacent to the minster, was frequently used for fairs and other festivities, nor was the inside of the Cathedral itself free from gross neglect and profanation. There is more respect and consideration shewn at the present day to our Cathedrals than was ever paid to them during the middle ages.

|| John Berningham, who died in 1457, had been treasurer of York for twenty-five years. During his tenure of office the south-west tower was begun, and to his exertions its erection is principally to be ascribed. He left 50*l.* to the minster, and large sums of money to other charitable purposes.

¶ A distinguished ecclesiastic and statesman, who died in 1457. He was introduced into public life by the Cardinal of England. He and Barningham were most intimate friends, and were beneficed together, both at York and Beverley. Wilton desired in his will to be interred in a chapel which he had built at Beverley.

* Ten years have elapsed since the last roll, but little, in all probability, took place in the interval with which we are unacquainted. The work in the two towers was now progressing simultaneously, and drawing rapidly towards its conclusion.

In 1465 an eighty years' lease of certain quarries at Huddleston expired. The Chapter, however, were still in want of stone, and the lease was renewed for the farther term of nineteen years; it seems to have been on somewhat different terms, as we find certain annual payments regularly made to the owners of the property for the stone which was required.

The number of the masons is also larger, twenty-three being now employed. Robert Spillesby is the master, having been appointed to that office, vice John Porter, in 1466. The sum of 43*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* was expended upon this department. Six labourers were employed, who received 12*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* for wages.

About this time the College of St. William was being erected. I find the following notice of it in the will of John Marshall, parson in the minster, which was made in March, 1466-7:—"Lego ad edificationem Collegii per personas, consocios meos Ecclesie Cath. prediecte, infra clausum ejusdem Ecclesie noviter inceptam, 20*s.* Item lego ad usum capella dieti Collegii, cum ipsi ibidem plenarie fuerit constructa, menu portiferium cum boles et unum librum de Moribus in dicta capella cathenandum." An account of the College and its position may be found in Drake's Eboracum, 570-1, but the date of the commencement of the building was never discovered by him.

† A person who was probably employed on the roof of the tower. His name leads us to suppose that he was a foreigner.

* The great restoration of the Minster was drawing to its close, and the glorious structure was soon to be completed. We find from this roll that the central tower was nearly finished. A large quantity of wood is sawn and purchased in this and the preceding year for the roof, and the carver is busy preparing the bosses. The iron work for the windows is made ready and the glass procured. In the course of another year the whole was completed.

Robert Spillesby, the master-mason, has nine men under him, and they receive 29*l.* 2s. 11d. in wages. Fifteen carpenters, a very large number, were employed, over whom was John Forster. There were, also, eleven labourers.

† A younger son of Sir John Langton, who has been already mentioned. His elder brother, John, was now dead, leaving an only daughter, who carried the estate of Farneley into the family of Danby.

‡ These bosses were probably intended for the roof of the central tower.

* A document of the greatest importance, although it is unfortunately imperfect. Its date, however, may be settled by the fact that the death of Spillesby, the master-mason, is recorded in it, and the appointment of William Hendeley in his room. Spillesby died in 1472.

This roll affords positive evidence that the roof of the central tower was at length complete. We have the charges for painting it detailed in the most ample manner. More glass is also purchased.

The interior of the church being now thoroughly finished the Chapter determined that it should be consecrated. This was done on the 3rd of July, 1472. The act of consecration was very frequently deferred, for years, or even centuries, till the whole of a church was fully erected. When the sound of the axe and the hammer was stilled then that solemn rite took place.

It will be seen that for some time the Chapter had been busily employed in putting the furniture of the minster into proper order. Fractures were repaired, missing articles replaced, and new acquisitions made. Still, after all, it is lamentable to turn to the revelations which may be found in the visitations of the Church which are given in the Appendix—to see how so fair a shrine was neglected, and to mark the many faults of the ministers of the re-edified sanctuary.

Seventeen masons were employed this year, having for their wages 51*l.* 9s. There were fourteen carpenters, who received 17*l.* 6s. 4d. The sum of 23s. 9d. was paid to two sawyers. Seven labourers received 16*l.* 6s. 4d.

XXVII.—COMPOTUS —— CUSTODIS FABRICÆ ANNO M.CCCC.LXXIII.

(DEEST CAPUT ROTULI).†

MORTUARIA, 16s. 8d. de precio equi magistri Rogeri Radclif,‡ nuper preb. de Masham.

* Into what trouble the poor fabric-keeper had fallen we cannot tell. He speaks his mind in very round terms—far more boldly than he would have ventured to do in the Guildhall. There were many bickerings between the Chapter and the Corporation.

† An imperfect roll, which may fairly be assigned to the year 1473, although, possibly, it may belong to 1472. It contains much valuable information.

The central and western towers were now finished, and in this year the battlements and pinnacles on the south side of the choir were erected by Dean Andrew. The next great work, for a great work it certainly is, that was taken in hand, was the rood-screen. We cannot tell, exactly, when it was begun or when it ended, for a work so elaborate and so difficult could not be completed in a short time. We may, however, safely place its construction between 1475 and 1505. William Hyndeley was the master-mason who presided over the work, and among the rich decorations of that most elaborate termination of the choir, his device, a hind lodged, may be observed.

The screen is ornamented with a long series of regal effigies, terminating in Henry VI. It is not unreasonable, therefore, to suppose that this arrangement of the figures was fixed by Dean Andrew, who, having been secretary to Henry VI., was wishful to place his ill-used master in that prominent position. Within the memory of man that niche was empty, the figure having, in all probability, been removed to prevent the tribute of adoration being paid to it by many a pious Lancastrian. It seems, however, to have been there in 1515, when there is a charge of 20s. for painting and gilding the image of king Henry—an item which, probably, refers to that ill-fated monarch. We may conclude, therefore, that in spite of archiepiscopal injunctions and regal prohibitions, the effigy continued to occupy its position in the rood-screen till the Reformation. It may, perhaps, have been then removed, when every saintly effigy and altar was destroyed.

About the beauty of the workmanship of the screen and its most elaborate ornamentation, there cannot be two opinions; of the propriety of its occupying its present position there may be grave doubts. The effect of the transept is not improved by this heavy mass of stonework, and the proportions of the nave, which ought to be much longer than it is, are very much marred by this ponderous barrier to its extent.

William Hyndeley was the master-mason, having two others under him. Six carpenters were employed, and received 11*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.* The sum of 27*s.* 8½*d.* was paid to the sawyers, and 96*s.* 4*d.* to the labourers, of whom there were but three.

* The new master-mason, it will be seen, came from Norwich. What was the cause of the suit being brought against him? Could he have thrown up a situation contrary to agreement, or did he leave Norwich in debt?

† The choir had been completed for at least seventy years, and still the battlement and pinnacles on the south side, which were necessary for the decoration of the exterior, had never been set up. This omission was now supplied by the munificence of the Dean.

‡ Richard Andrew, Dean of York for twenty-six years, was a most distinguished man. His posts in the church were very numerous, and he was frequently employed in the service of the State. In 1451-2 the deanery of York became vacant, and there were two competitors for it, the treasurer, Berningham, and Andrew. The latter carried the day, as Gascoigne tells us, by bribery. His career as Dean, although he was frequently non-resident, and in the latter part of his life very infirm, was a memorable one. The restoration of the minster made rapid progress under his rule, and he had the gratification of witnessing the completion of that glorious undertaking. This roll records a munificent donation which he made towards the completion of the choir. To the college of the Vicars Choral he gave the living of Nether Wallop, in Hampshire, which they still possess. He also established a chantry in the minster, and in his will left several splendid legacies to the church. In 1477 he resigned the deanery, and died shortly afterwards.

* This journey to Middleham was probably to visit the Duke of Gloucester, who had his residence at that place. He was now meditating the foundation of the college at Middleham, which was soon after carried into effect. In the title deeds of that institution, which was thwarted in its commencement, the names of Poteman and Gisburgh are to be found. The duke was also a great benefactor to York minster, as will be seen shortly.

† Although Henry VI. was never canonized, he was still regarded as a saint by many of his adherents. His many virtues, his gentleness of character, and his many misfortunes, endeared him to a great portion of his subjects, who carefully treasured up any little relic of their injured sovereign. In Yorkshire the Lancastrians were a very numerous body. Henry had spent some time in that county in the course of his wanderings, and he was not yet forgotten. In the minsters of Ripon and York I find that there were images of him erected, to which adoration was, doubtless, paid. Dean Andrew had been his private secretary, and we cannot wonder, therefore, that a statue of his patron was erected in the cathedral. Where this statue stood is not known, but, judging from this roll, it was probably removed before it had been long erected. The feeling of veneration towards the royal sufferer was not extinguished, as in 1479 we find an order from Archibishop Booth, that no worship should be paid to his image. I am inclined to think that this image was that on the rood screen. On account of the adoration that was paid to it, it was probably removed, as the niche was empty till it was filled by a new effigy, the handiwork of a skilful workman on the staff of the fabrie, within the memory of man.

* A curious entry. There had been a deficiency of hands at the royal castle of Nottingham, and the adjacent countries were in all probability swept of their artificers. A similar occurrence took place about this time at Oxford, where the workmen employed upon the new schools were carried off to Windsor.

† There is no special mention of the screen in this roll, nor of any delicate work that could form part of it. There were eleven masons employed in the course of the year, receiving the sum of 39*l.* 16s. 2d.

The great work of the year was the tabernacle and figure of St. Peter, which stood in the choir. Great pains seem to have been taken that it should be worthy of the church and its patron saint. It is not known where this tabernacle stood.

There were but two carpenters working this year, and they were paid 4*l.* 6d. There were seven labourers who received 8*l.* 14d., one of them, John Newbald, received 53s. 4d. for keeping the clock and the chime. The paltry sum of 15d. was paid to the sawyers. * This is, I presume, the great horn of Ulphus, a most interesting relic of Saxon times, and the noblest title deed that the Chapter of York have ever possessed. It has been frequently engraved and may be still seen in the vestry.

† A roll, which is now incomplete. When Mr. Browne saw it it bore the date of 1485, and the name of William Ward, as keeper of the fabric. We see from it that the screen was still progressing, and that the masons, in the course of the year, were employed upon a different kind of work. Six carpenters received 17*l.* 17s. 11d; twelve labourers 15*l.* 2s. 10½; and the sawyers 26s. 6d. The sum of 29s. 3d. was paid to two glaziers, John Pety and Wm. Caldbecke.

‡ The county of Durham, then, par excellence, called the Bishoprick, a name which it still bears in some parts of Yorkshire.

CUSTUS QUERRERÆ. Thomæ Langton pro cxx plaustratis

* In the beginning of his reign Richard III. gave orders for the establishment of a college of a hundred chaplains in the church of York. This order appears in Archbishop Rotheram's register as well as in MS. Harl., No. 433, f. 72, which contains many similar documents. Mr. Browne thinks that the college here mentioned is that at Middleham, but in this he is manifestly wrong: all the deeds connected with the foundation at Middleham have been given to the world, and in them the number of priests who were to be located in that village is very clearly defined. It seems to have been the object of the king to found a grand college at York on a large scale, but he was prevented by his disasters from carrying his designs fully into execution. We have, however, a notice in this roll of the erection of no less than six altars in the minster, which were intended for the king's chaplains. In the will of William Poteman, canon residentiary and archdeacon of the East Riding, who died soon after the king, we find a bequest of certain timber which had been taken down from the house which was being erected for the king's chantry priests. We see, therefore, that not only had a certain number of altars been erected in accordance with the king's desire, but that a college had been begun in which the chantry priests were to be located. By the battle of Bosworth all the pious intentions of Richard were thrown over, the college at York was pulled down, and we hear nothing more about the altars or the chantry priests.

Rarely, if ever, has there been a prince in the north so universally beloved as Richard III. The ties that bound him to the noble house of Neville and his own regal munificence endeared him to the people of the north. They stood by him in every danger, and on every occasion, and even after his fall, when their help was of no avail, his memory lay at the bottom of their hearts, ever springing up again to be cherished and lamented.

Policy as well as affection would induce Richard to win the regard of that people, and he knew well how to gain them. He resided much among them, and dazzled them by his grandeur and affability. Patents and places were showered among them with a lavish hand. His piety won the favour of the clergy, and all, fascinated alike, bowed before the common idol.

He was at York, in great state, in 1483, going to the minster in all the pomp of royalty. At a solemn banquet in the city, which took place shortly afterwards, the king's youthful son was created Prince of Wales. It was probably on one of these occasions that the college of the hundred chaplains was ordered to be established.

He also gave to the minster a very precious cross, which is described in the inventory of the jewels of the church, to be found in the appendix. To the vicars choral he was a benefactor and a patron, prevailing upon the chapter to advance them to their original number. It was a dark day for the north when its sun set upon the field of Bosworth.

† St. Peter's eye, a name given to some taper or corona of special size and importance in the minster. It probably was erected before the image of St.
Peter, in the choir. In the choir of Durham there was one taper at least, so tall that the monks were obliged to let down an extinguisher from the roof to put it out. Was the rope here mentioned intended to support a similar extinguisher, or to raise the taper? The taper might perhaps be the paschal candle.

The minster being now complete, the attention of the Chapter was turned to the grievously neglected church of St. Michael, which was adjacent to their cathedral. It had been in a disgraceful state for many years, as will be seen in some documents in the appendix. It was now pulled down, and the present edifice was begun in the year 1525. It was probably built, to a certain extent, out of the spare stores of the minster. It is curious to note the tradition, that the extremely graceful little church of Skelton was built by Archbishop Grey with the stone which was spared from the south transept of the cathedral. The belfry from which the church of St. Michael takes its name, is very graceful and delicate in its proportions.

* The great religious revolution which had been so long impending had now taken place, and this is the first roll that occurs under the new state of things. Archbishop Holgate now presided over the see, and his iconoclastic injunctions will be found in the Appendix.

The Reformation found the minster of York complete. It interrupted no work of any consequence, as everything had been most fortunately finished. The genius of Gothic architecture drooped beneath the new system, and everything was given up to the purifier or the destroyer.

The present roll presents a painful contrast to its predecessors. It is dirty and carelessly kept, and there is no attempt at order or arrangement in it. I place before my readers every item that it contains. For the future, it will not be necessary to lay many extracts before them; a few only of the more interesting will be selected.

† The work of destruction was going on at St. Mary's Abbey. This magnificent ruin has been the quarry of the neighbourhood for three centuries, and but a small portion of it now remains. The remnant, however, is carefully preserved by the Yorkshire Philosophical Society. It is a pity that so little is known of its history and foundation. Several chartularies of the house are still in existence, and it is the intention of the Council of the Surtees Society, at some future period, to turn their attention to the records of this once-famous house. The chronicle of Simon de Warwick will form a most appropriate introduction to the work.

Nearly ten years had elapsed since Elizabeth ascended the throne, yet, strange to say, little change seems to have been made in the internal arrangements of the minster. The progress of the Reformation in the North was very slow, and it was only a work of time and care. In 1567 Matthew Hutton became Dean of York, and he, probably, made the alterations in the minster which are now recorded. He was somewhat of a Puritan, and would brook nothing that savoured in any way of Roman Catholic forms and ceremonies.

For term service bookes for the Coronation-day, 5s.

* An item which is easily comprehended. The word "beautified" is still used, and is best understood by village churchwardens.

† The Lord Deputy was the celebrated Earl of Strafford. The church of York was much indebted to the Wentworths, several of whom are interred there.

Edward Horsley was a painter-stainer of some note in York. In 1638 Sir Henry Slingsby says, "Edward Horseley, a painter in York, is now painting the lodging-chamber above the new parlour in colours suitable to those hangings I have brought to hang it with all. The chimney-peice is painted answerable in blew colours."—(Diary 5.) Horsley made his will on Feb. 25, 20 Car. ii. He leaves to his grandson, Wm. Horsley, "A book of armory, being a copy of the same booke I bought of Mr. Thos. Harrison, which cost 15*l.* To my grandchild, Edward Horsley, all my bookes, comonly called Quaker's books. To my sounre William all my bookes of armory, written, drawne, or printed, and all my bookes of history and divinitie, the painted pictures in the house, all my coulors, working tooles, and grynding stones and oyle belonging to my trade, my pockett watch, etc. To Major Walter Bethell my maize ring of gold."

From this person the antiquary, John Horsley, in all probability descended.

* I now proceed to lay before my readers a series of extracts from the rolls of the chamberlains of the minster, which illustrate the compoti of the keepers of fabric, and throw much light upon the services and the internal arrangements of the church of York.

It was the business of this officer to attend to the services and the servants of the church. He paid the commons of the canons in residence, the stipends of the vicars and officers of the minster, together with all pensions and casual charges connected with the church and its liberties. He provided the wafers, wax, etc., which were required, and out of the cope-money which he received from each canon he kept the vestments, etc., in proper repair. Certain estates and payments were appropriated to the office, including the great farms; and the residue, after the payment of all expenses, was divided equally among the residentiaries.

The chamberlain sent in two rolls for each year; one extending from the feast of St. Martin in the winter to Pentecost, and the second from Pentecost to the first-mentioned feast. It is much to be regretted that this series of rolls is so very imperfect: they are pretty numerous between 1370 and 1400; in the fifteenth century but few have been preserved, and in those of a subsequent date, which are far more regular, there are few notices of sufficient interest and importance to be recorded here.

† I give this roll entire as a specimen of the rest, as it is the first perfect one that has occurred to me. It gives us an accurate account of the revenues belonging to the office of chamberlain, and tells us how they were distributed.

* The great benefactor of the church of York, whose horn is still preserved. His obit was always observed, as the Chapter had good reason to remember his munificence.

† Dean of York, Lord High Chancellor, and a distinguished statesman and ecclesiastic. He died in 1314. In 1307 He gave the church of Broddesworth to the Chapter, and they agreed to find a chaplain to sing for the donor and his parents in the chapel of Hamilton, in the parish of Brayton, which he had recently built. He was also the founder of another chantry in the minster.

‡ All record of the foundation of this chantry has been lost. Even in the fourteenth century this had been forgotten, and no notice of Jordau has ever occurred to me.

¶ It appears, therefore, that the present system of having special services in the nave of our cathedrals is not without precedent.

** A singular incident. The Archdeacon of York, Robert Ramsden, a notorious person, has a writ served upon him in the minster at the suit of the Chapter. In 1627 Dr. Cradock, a canon of Durham, was arrested in that church in a similar manner, but the offenders were brought before the Court of High Commission. In 1674 Dennis Grenville, Archdeacon of Durham, and a well-known man, was also arrested at the door of Durham Cathedral, when he was coming from a funeral and had his surplice on, for debt. Fortunately for him he was one of the king's chaplains in ordinary, and the wrath of the Privy Council fell heavily upon the offenders. The under-sheriff lost his office, but, so fickle are the changes of fortune, he was knighted by James II., and became High Sheriff of Northumberland.

* He came, probably, to see his Bishop, John Thornburgh, who was allowed to hold the Deanery of York in commendam.

† Similar donations to travellers who were in trouble, and to decayed gentlemen, are not infrequent. "1595. To a Scottishe man, a scoller, 5s. To Mr. Walter Gray, a singinge mynister, 5s. 1598. To Mr. Stephen Zadari, an Hungarian, 5s. 1682. To two seamen who escaped when the Gloucester frigatt was sunk and lost, 5s." These men, many of whom were impostors, travelled through the country with a brief, and realized, very frequently, large sums of money.

‡ York castle was filled at this time with Roman Catholic gentry and priests. Every endeavour was made to bring them over; in some few instances, with success. A most interesting account of their treatment may be found in Chaloner's Missionary Priests. In 1673 "Mr. Bownes, a convert from Popery," received a present of 1l. "1678. To Mr. Sedgewick, sometime a Popish priest, who was turned Protestant, 2l."

§ It was usual to give an Ambassador a hearty welcome. The cause of the coming of the Earl of Marr is pretty well known.

|| Whenever the Archbishop came to the minster on a state occasion, there was always a "banquet" prepared for him, and the advent of other prelates was marked by some special entertainment. "1617, 24 Nov. For bread and wyne att the coming of the Bishop of Carliell, 5s. 2d. For wyne, byskett bread, and suger bestowed of my Lo. Archbishop in the vestrie, 30 Nov., 4s. 6d. 1618, 6 Apr. † Mr. Newcombe had been permitted to carry some of the books out of the minster library into the country, a privilege very rarely accorded. The name of Newcombe is not unknown to fame.

‡ Probably the celebrated non-conformist, who was now drawing towards the close of his labours. Jackson held, I believe, the same religious opinions, and the Chapter contribute towards the expenses of his funeral.

§ Henry Bland was the agent and receiver for the Government. We do not know what the residentiaries wished to "discourse" him upon.

* This document is now, I believe, in the Archbishop's registry. It is a very long roll, containing an account of a thorough visitation of the diocese of Durham, made by the Archbishop of York after the death of Bishop Kellawe in 1316. The right of the see of York to interfere in the Palatinate was always disputed, and even now the question is not thoroughly at rest.

† One of the Ingrams had left a certain sum of money to assist in lighting the minster. It appears that the payment had been refused, upon which, legal proceedings had been begun. The church, I believe, failed in their cause. Mr. Belwood was a native of York, and a lawyer of great repute.

‡ The Greek Church was just being erected in London. An account of it may readily be found elsewhere.

§ To supply the plate which had been stolen in 1676, Archbishop Sterne bequeathed to the minster the gilt communion plate used in the chapel at Bishopthorpe, "that is to say, one gilt bason, two gilt flagons, one gilt paton, one gilt chalice with cover, together with the cases wherin they are commonly layd up."

|| I am not aware that this man was ever convicted. Ten years, it will be seen, had elapsed since the perpetration of the offence.

¶ The board on which the names of the different preachers in the minster throughout the year were placed in their proper order. This custom is still generally adhered to.

* A silver pastoral staff of very elegant workmanship, and more than six feet in length. It is still preserved in the vestry, and has been more than once engraved. It was taken in that year of commotion, 1688, from James Smith, titular Bishop of Callipolis, by the Earl of Danby. The Pope had made Smith his Vicar Apostolic for the northern district, and he was soon pounced upon.

† The advent of a new Archbishop was always the occasion of much festivity. As Lamplough was the first Bishop appointed by king William, there would be a great political demonstration when he came to his see.

‡ The Dean and Chapter had the power of life and death within their jurisdiction. Peter prison was their gaol, and we now learn the site of the gallows. The criminals for the city and county were executed on Knaresbrough.

§ Heneage Dering was a gentleman of a good Kentish family. He afterwards married Archbishop Sharp's daughter, and, entering into orders, he became Canon of York and Dean of Ripon.

|| Several act books and registers of the Dean and Chapter disappeared, I fear, about this time. Torre gives extracts from several which are now missing. The loss of one, a register, devoted to the fabric, is greatly to be deplored.

¶ The magnificent Thesaurus of Dr. George Hickes. Dean Gale was his intimate friend, and secured, no doubt, these volumes for the library.

a.—CARTA DOMINI WILLELMI DE PERCY SUPER ECCLESIA DE TOPPECLIVE DATA FABRICÆ EBORACENSIS ECCLESIAE. (MSS. Cotton. Claudius, B. III. 78a.)†

Willelmus de Percy omnibus hanc cartam visuris vel audituris salutem. Sciatis me donasse, concessisse, et presenti scripto confirmasse ecclesiæ Sancti Petri Eboracensis ecclesiam de Topecliva, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis, in perpetuam clemosinam, ad reficiendum, edificandum, per dispositionem domini Archiciscopii et successorum suorum et Capituli Eboracensis, * An inventory of the church goods at Sherburn in Elmet of a very early date, and in the Saxon character. It is extracted from a fly-leaf at the end of a manuscript of the Gospels in the custody of the Chapter clerk. The book itself is written in a fine bold hand, circa 900, and is of the quarto size. Prefixed is the canon, on eight leaves, arranged in compartments in which a good deal of architectural skill is manifested. At the end of the volume are several charters and Saxon documents, which have been hitherto unnoticed, including a list of the reliques belonging to the Minster, and some very early deeds connected with land and its measures. At the beginning, on the fly-leaves, are several forms of oaths to be administered to the canons and other officers of the church. In fact, I should say that this is the very copy of the Evangelists upon which every new officer of the church took his oath from the year 900 downwards.

I append a translation of the document—

“These are the churches' goods in Sherburn. There are two Christ's books (gospels), two roods, one aspiciens, and one ad Te levavi (service books beginning with those words), two books of epistles, one mass book, one hymnarium, one psalter, one chalice, and one dish, two mass vestments, three mass mantles (?), two woven sheets, two upper coverings, four hand bells, and six hanging bells.”

† From these charters we learn how the church of Topcliffe came into the possession of the Dean and Chapter of York. The exact date of the grant is not known, but it must have been made between the years 1154 and 1181, the period during which Archbishop Roger presided over the see of York.

The donor was one of the most powerful and munificent barons in the north of England. He did good service at the battle of the Standard, and was the

β.—CARTA ARCHIEPISCOPI SUPER EADEM. (Ibid. 78a.)

Rogerus, Dei gratia Eboracensis Archiepiscopus, apostolicæ sedis legatus, omnibus sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, ad quos carta ista pervenerit, salutem. Universitati vestro notum facimus quod dedimus et concessimus Radulpho de Alne ecclesiam de Topecliffe, cum omnibus pertinenciis suis, ipsumque ad presentationem nobilis viri Willelmi de Percy, ea vacante, impersonavimus. Verum ipse Willelmus postmodum eandem ecclesiam, interveniente voluntate et auctoritate nostra, dedit et concessit ad founder of the abbeys of Hampoll and Salley. He is said to have died in Palestine. The name of Sibill his wife has never yet appeared in the pedigree of the Percies.

From the village of Topcliffe the fabric derived a very considerable revenue. The church of that little village has been recently re-built; the original structure possessed several features of great interest, and many notices illustrative of the history of the building have already been given.

These charters are to be found in the great white register at York. These transcripts, however, were made from a chartulary among the Cottonian MSS., a most beautifully written and preserved volume of the deepest interest to any York historian. It contains many charters which are to be found in the great book at York, and many others which are missing in that noble volume; but the greater part of them are authenticated by the names of the witnesses being inserted, which may be looked for in vain in many parts of the MS. at York.

† An indulgence granted by Pope Alexander III., as I believe, in 1165. Mr. Browne, however, dates it a century later, and makes the writer Alexander IV. Among the correspondence, which has been printed by Labbe in his Concilium, there are several letters addressed to Archibishop Roger. In the Registrum Magnum Album, part iii., p. 93, is the following letter, which I give at length—

V.—CARTA WILLELMI FILII HAMELINI DE RIDERA SUPER PRATO ET TERRA CAPITULO CONCESSIS.* (MSS. Cotton, Claudio, B. III., 107, a.)

Sciant omnes qui litteras has viderint vel audierint quod ego, Willelmus filius Hamelin de Ridera, consensu et assensu

Cum Ecclesia tibi commissa multa dignitate premineat, decet te diligenter ac sollicite providere ut ejus dignitas in omnibus quæ ad honestatem Ecclesiae pertineant et decorum ejusdem elucescat, ita quod studium tuæ sollicitudinis in hiis appareat precipue commendandum. Cepimus autem quod cum in quibusdam cathedralibus ecclesiis quæ Ecclesia tua longe inferiores existunt ea prerogativa et dignitas observetur, ut in majoribus earum altaribus nulli, nisi sint Episcopi vel carumdem ecclesiæ canonici, missam audeant celebrare, ad celebrandum missam in majori altari Ecclesiæ tuae passim presbiteri quilibet admittuntur, et sic ejusdem Ecclesiæ dignitas quodammodo minuitur et vilescit. Quandoque igitur tuum prudenciam decet ad omnia diligenter intendere quæ dignitatem ejusdem augeant et decorum fraternitati tue, per apostolica scripta, mandamus quatinus cum Capitulo ipsius Ecclesiae, vel majoris et sanioris ipsius partis statuas ut in majori altari ipsius Ecclesiae nemo nisi Episcopus vel canonicus ejusdem Ecclesiae celebrare audeat, nec aliqui in missa quæ in prescripto altari celebratur evangelium vel epistolam, nisi ejusdem Ecclesiae sint canonici, legere presumant, quia quod super hiis juxta mandatum nostrum statueris nos auctore Domino ratum et firmum habebimus. Datum Anagniæ iij kal. Aprilis.

* The same charter may be found in the Registrum Magnum Album at York. There are but few of these early grants to the fabric in existence, and I give them entire. The charter is without date and witnesses, but it may be ascribed to the middle of the twelfth century, and I put it among the other grants which we know to have been made about that time. The concluding condition of the charter is curious.

fratris mei junioris Willelmi, concessi, et presenti carta confirmavi, Deo et Sancto Petro, ad reedificacionem ecclesiæ suæ, donacionem illius acræ prati juxta Aesefeld quam pater meus pro salute animæ suæ et uxoris suæ et liberorum suorum Beato Petro ita concesserat. Accrevi, insuper, cum consensu ejusdem fratris mei W., unam mansuram terræ in Litdehil, quæ contineat xv perticatas in longitudine et iij perticatas in latitudine, ita ut Beatus Petrus et homo quem ibi habebit, habeat in communi pastura iij vaccas cum fetibus earum, et iij equas cum pullis earum, et iij sues cum toto nutrimento suo. Et si in tempore pannagii xx porcos superanuatos habuerit acquietabit se homo per xx denarios. Et si plures porcos superanuatos ibi habere voluerit habeat per licenciam domini, et habebit in bosco ad edificacionem suam et ad proprium ignem quantum ibidem fuerit necessarium. Hec omnia ego Willelmus et frater meus Willelmus junior manutenebimus et warantizabimus legitime Beato Petro ad ecclesiam suam reedificandam, et homini suo, tenenda libere et quiete, sine omni consuetudine vel exaccione, sicut puram et perpetuam elemosinam, et sicut habent omnia, super altare Beati Petri, in perpetuum, a nobis et heredibus nostris fideliter observanda optulimus. Et si qui fideles pietatis intuitu ad opus ecclesiæ Beati Petri reformandæ equum vel taurum vel bovem vel alia animalia macilentia contulerint licenciam habeant ibi morandi donec reformatur.

VI.—CARTA DOMINI ROBERTI LE VAVASOUR DE LAPIDICINA
APUD TADCASTER.* (Monasticon Vet. Edit. III. 162.)

Universis Christi fidelibus, ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit, Robertus le Vavasour, æternam in Domino salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me dedisse, concessisse, et hac præsenti carta mea confirmasse, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam et liberam ab omni seculari servicio et exactione, Deo et B. Petro et ecclesiæ Ebor., pro salute animæ meæ et uxoris meæ

* This charter was found, by the compiler of the Monasticon, in a register of the fabric which is now missing. There is no date to it, but it may be, in all probability, ascribed to 1225, or thereabouts, the period at which Archbishop Grey began the building of the south transept. It speaks, it will be observed, of a grant, not of a quarry, but merely of a right of road on an ancient and customary way. It is probable, therefore, that the Chapter had obtained stone from the quarry at Thevesdale for many years before this time, and it is likely that this is the same quarry that was given to the minster by William de Percy. Some notices of the Vavasors, and of their gifts to the church of York, will occur shortly.

Julianæ, et antecessorum meorum; et ut participes simus omnium bonorum quæ in eadem Ecclesia fient in perpetuum, plenum et liberum transitum per antiquas et consuetas vias et semitas, sine omni impedimento et contradictione in cundo et redeundo, in Thevedale, quod est de libero tenemento meo, ad sufficientiam fabricæ ejusdem Ecclesiæ, quotiescumque opus fuerit dictam Ecclesiam emendare, reædificare vel ampliare. Et ad majorem securitatem hujus concessionis præsentem paginam sigilli mei appositione dignam duxi communire. Ego vero et hæredes mei warantizabimus hanc donationem nostram in perpetuum contra omnes homines. Hiis testibus, Rogero decano, Galfrido de Norwico præcentore, Willelmo thesaurario, magistro Waltero Archidiacono.

VII.—DUÆ CARTÆ SUPER BOVATA TERRE IN SUNDERLAND-WICK.

a.—CARTA ENGELRAMI DE MUNCEAUS SUPER TERRA IN SUNDERLANGWIK. (MSS. Cotton, Claudio, B. III. 52, b.)

Engelr' de Munceaus,* omnibus has literas visuris vel audituris, salutem. Universitati vestræ notum fieri volo me concessisse et ratam habere donacionem illam quam Henrieus Foliot fecit Deo et Sancto Petro de una bovata terræ in Sunderlangwic, quam dedit ad reedificationem ecclesiæ Sancti Petri Eboracensis, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, liberam et quietam ab omni servicio seculari. VIII.—INDULGENTIA PRO FABRICA ECCL. EBOR. CONCESSA PER WALTERUM GREY, ARCHIEPISCOPUM EBOR.* (Rot. major.)

Omnibus, etc. Cum inter opera caritatis pium sit et meritorium ad constructionem et fabricam ecclesiarum opem impendere, in quibus jugiter Domino prestatur obsequium, ac ecclesia nostra Beati Petri Ebor. nostro indigeat suffragio, cui, tamquam matrici ecclesiae, precipue tenemini subvenire; devotionem vestram rogamus, et exhortamur in Domino, quatinus ad fabricam ipsius de bonis vestris impendere curetis, ac parochianos

* The first Archiepiscopal Indulgence for the church of York that is on record. It occurs upon the roll of the acts of Archbishop Walter Grey, dated 18th of July, 1227. In the month of March, in the same year, the same prelate issued a somewhat similar instrument, but that part of the roll on which it occurs has been so much injured that it cannot be now deciphered.

The munificent prelate was probably beginning the south transept, in which his own tomb is placed. The charter of Robert de Vavasour would afford him great facilities for carrying on the work, to which he wished the faithful to contribute.

The Archiepiscopal acts of Walter Grey are recorded on two rolls, called Major and Minor. The Major begins in 1227, the eleventh year of his rule, and extends to the twenty-first. The other roll contains his acts during the remainder of his long episcopate. They are, really, parts of one continuous roll, which for exactness and extent is perhaps unequalled. It is written on both sides, and contains many entries of very great interest and importance. Grey may be called the great organizer of the diocese of York, and the number of ordinations, etc., of benefices made during his episcopate is indeed remarkable.

vestros ut de bonis sibi a Deo collatis partem aliquam, secundum quod Dominus eis inspiraverit, conferant, efficaciter inducere studeatis, magistrum Adam, latorem presencium, quem hujus rei procuratorem deputavimus, et ejusdem clericos benigne recipientes ac honorifice pertractantes, eidemque consilium et auxilium efficaciter impendentes. Nos autem, etc., preter indulgenciam domini Papæ et relaxacionem a fratribus nostris coepiscopis indultam, xl dies, etc.: atque ipsos missarum, oracionum, et beneficiorum omnium participes constituimus: quæ omnia per dictum magistrum plenius exponentur. In cuius rei testimonium, etc., has litteras nostras patentes ipsi duximus committendas. Datum apud Sireburn xx. kal. Augusti Anno xi.

IX.—RELIQUIÆ RECONDITÆ IN ECCLESIA BEATI PETRI

In nomine Domini Amen. Istæ sunt reliquiæ reconditæ in ecclesia Beati Petri Ebor. Scilicet in magna cruce, quæ stat ultra pulpitum in introitu chori, quam Rogerus Archicopiscopus fecit parari & postmodum dedicavit, continentur in corpore imaginis crucifixi reliquiæ sanctorum Apostolorum Petri & Pauli & Mathei et sanctorum martirum Mauricij, socrorumque ejus, Sebastiani, et Calixti papæ, Cipriani episcopi, Justinæ matris Felicis Treverensis episcopi, S. Rustici Treverensis episcopi & Sanctæ Fellicitatis. In alia cruce quæ stat retro majus altare, quam idem Rogerus Archicopiscopus fecit parari & postmodum dedicavit, continentur in corpore imaginis crucifixi reliquiæ de Sancto Luca Evangelista. De sanctis martiribus Marcelliano et Petro. De Sancto Ciriaco martire, de Sancta Eufemia virginie, de Sancto Tiburtio martire. De Sancto Nero martire. In magno feretro retro majus altare in majori pixide alba continentur hæ reliquiæ. Junctura una digitii S. Johannis Baptistæ, lapis de sepulcro Domini, de sepulcro S. Macharii Archiepiscopi

* A most valuable and interesting document. It occurs on a fly-leaf of the MS. copy of the Gospels, in the office of the Dean and Chapter, which has been already mentioned. On the whole, it is not in a satisfactory condition, and some words cannot now be supplied. The handwriting is that of the middle of the thirteenth century. It will be seen that Archbishop Roger was the donor of many of the reliques, and that he arranged and dedicated others. It appears, also, that a portion of these valuable had been pledged to raise a certain sum of money for the ransom of the king, Richard I. An inventory of the reliques belonging to the monastery of Durham may be found in Hist. Dunelm. Scriptores Tres., and other documents, of a similar nature, occur in the Monasticon and other works.

Antiochiæ. Dens S. Stephani prothomartiris; Dens S. Brigidæ virginis. De petra super quam sedit Sanctus Johannes Baptista. De ossibus . . . martiris. X.—LITERA DOMINI ROBERTI DE PERCY DE LIBERTATE AQUE ET TERRÆ SUPER RIPAM DE QUERF.* (Monasticon III. 163.)

Robertus de Percy, dominus de Boulton, universis ballyvis, servientibus et ministris suis, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse venerabili in Christo patri, domino Johanni, Dei gratia Ebor. Archiepiscopo, Angliæ Primi, quod marinarii ducentes seu cariantes petram in navibus suis de Tadcaster, usque Ebor. ad fabricam Ecclesiæ B. Petri, tam in aqua quam super terram propæ aquam, liberum habeant transitum absque impedimento mei etiam, vel meorum. Volens et vobis injungens quod illis nullam inferatis molestiam, nec inferri ab aliis permittatis, quo minus liberum habeant transitum, ut prædixi. Volo etiam et concedo, quod quoties dicti marinarii pro se, vel petra sua, ad dictam fabricam per longum terræ meæ super Querf, quantumcunque duraverit terra mea in pratis et aliis terris meis indiquerint, et ad trahendum naves tam vacuas quam cum petra in eisdem pratis et terris meis, ad utilitatem predictæ fabricæ, hoc libere faciant, absque meo vel meorum impedimento quoconque. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum meum præsentibus est appensum. Datum apud Ebor.

* Another grant for the benefit of the fabric which I have extracted from the Monasticon. The document was found at York in a register specially appropriated to the fabric which is now missing.

The charter is, unfortunately, without a date, but we find a Robert de Percy living at Bolton Percy in the year 1276. This person is, I doubt not, the framer of the present grant. The Archbishop mentioned is John Romanus, under whose auspices the foundation-stone of the present nave was laid in 1291. Percy's grant would be a great assistance to the progress of the new work.

XI.—CASULA ET ALBA CUM DUOBUS BAUDEKINS DATE PER DOMINUM REGEM.* (Lib. T. 3 a, penes Dec & Cap. Ebor.)

XII.—INDULGENCIA PRO FABRICA ECCLESIAE BEATI PETRI
EBOR.† (Reg. Corbridge 74 a.)

Thomas, Dei gratia Ebor. Archiepiscopus, Angliae Primas, venerabilibus in Christo fratribus co-episcopis nostris, et dilectis in Christo filiis, universis abbatibus, prioribus, decanis, prepositis, archidiaconis et eorum officialibus, decanis ruralibus, rectoribus, vicariis, capellanis parochialibus, in capellis divina celebrantibus per civitatem, diocesim et provinciam Ebor. tam in locis exemptis quam non exemptis constitutis, salutem, gratiam, et benedictionem. Cum ecclesiam Deo construere et eam imperfectam reparare, in qua hostia viva Christi pro salute populi

* An interesting entry. It was the privilege of the Archbishop of York to crown the queens of England, and when a queen died a mortuary seems to have been due to the metropolitan church. When Queen Philippa died her rich bed was sent to York, and was cut up into vestments for the Church. Perhaps the bed of Queen Eleanor was put to a similar use.

Queen Eleanor, according to a contemporary entry on the books of the Dean and Chapter of York, died on the 4th of the kalends of December, 1290. The story of her death, and of the affectionate sorrow of her husband, is well known. There are several excellent papers about her to be found in the Archæologia. As soon as the Chapter of York heard of her decease they ordered a full peal (glaseum) to be rung by the Minster bells: for this the sacrist received 5s. from the king.—(Wardrobe Book, 29).

Edward I. was present at the solemn translation of the remains of St. William in 1284. In his Wardrobe Book there are several notices of offerings which he made at his shrine, including two clasps of gold.

† The second Archiepiscopal Indulgence for the fabric that is recorded in the registers at York. It was issued in 1304 by Thomas Corbridge, who was raised to the see in 1299. Drake says that he died in 1303, whereas we find him living in the middle of the following year, another instance of the singular inaccuracy of the author of Eburacum. Corbridge had been connected with the church of York for many years, and was, therefore, fully alive to the requirements of the fabric. The present magnificent nave was then rising from the ground, and the alms of all the faithful would be especially needed.

jugiter immolatur, inter opera caritatis opus eximum reputetur : et Ecclesia nostra Beati Petri metropolitica sit adeo in presenti diruta et prostrata, ac structura tam nobilis sit incepta ut cam cupiamus feliciter consummari, ad quod novimus fidelium subsidium oportunum, universitatem vestram rogamus, monemus, et in Domino attentius exhortamur, vobis omnibus et singulis vestrum, in remissione peccaminum, et in virtute sanctæ obedientiæ, firmiter injungentes, quatinus quociensque procuratores et nunciæ Ecclesiæ nostræ Beati Petri predictæ ad vos accesserint, fidelium suffragia ad hujus fabricam petituri, ipsos in proximis capitulis vestris celebrandis, post inspeccionem presencium, necuon in ecclesiis et capellis vobis subditis, omnibus aliis negotiis consimilibus et indulgenciis quibuscumque interim cessantibus et semotis, quousque negotium Ecclesiæ nostræ supradictæ plene et plenius fuerit expeditum, benigne et sine impedimento quolibet admittatis ; ac parochianos et subditos vestros, Dei et nostri intuitu, benignius inducatis ut de bonis sibi a Deo collatis ad fundacionem, refectionem, et fabricam Ecclesiæ nostræ predictæ larga conferant subsidia caritatis. In quibus eternale premium mereri poterunt accepctius coram Deo. Nos autem, de Dei Omnipotentis misericordia, et gloriosæ Virginis Matris suæ, etc. ; qui juxta exhortacionem nostram predictam Ecclesiam relevaverint memoratam, et ad fabricam ejusdem de bonis suis sibi a Deo collatis manus porrexerint adjutrices, xl dies de injuncta sibi penitencia, Deo propicio, misericorditer relaxamus. Indulgencias a venerabilibus patribus, co-episcopis nostris catholicis, ad id concessas, ratas habentes pariter et acceptas. Quicquid autem nomine dictæ Ecclesiæ nostræ collectum fuerit per quoscumque, sine diminucione aut retencione aliqua eisdem procuratoribus et nunciis faciatis integreriter liberari, presentibus, donec eas duxerimus revocandas, tantummodo duraturis. Data Ebor., iij id. Junii, anno gratiæ m° ccc° quarto, et pontificatus nostri quinto.

XIII.—INDULGENCIA PRO FABRICA ECCLESIAE BEATI PETRI
EBOR.* (Reg. Kellawe 55 b.)

Ricardus, permissione divina Dunelmensis episcopus, dilectis in Christo filiis, abbatibus, prioribus, archidiaconis et officialibus

* Another Indulgence for the fabric, taken from the register of Richard Kellawe, Bishop of Durham, and dated in the year 1312. The works of the nave

Dunelmensis, ac decanis ruralibus, rectoribus, vicariis, presbiteris parochialibus et in capellis divina celebrantibus, neconon aliis universis ecclesiarum prelatis, tam exemptis quam non exemptis, per civitatem et diocesim Dunelm. constitutis, salutem in amplexibus Salvatoris. Inter cetera piæ devociouis opera, id in conspectu Altissimi credimus fere gratum, quod ad constructionem, sustencionem et reparacionem ecclesiarum gratiose contribuitur, quæ tanquam sancta, et salubria in terris habitacula fideles ad orandum recipiunt, et ad impetrandum in fide sacramenti altaris quod pro salute credencium in ara dominica sacrorum cotidiano ministerio sacerdotum offertur, speratam veniam placato Domino de peccatis. Cum, itaque, Ecclesia Beati Petri Ebor. metropolitica sit adeo in presenti diruta et prostrata, ac structura tam nobilis sit incepta, ut eam affectemus feliciter consummari, ad quod novimus fidelium subsidium oportunum; Universitatem vestram studiose rogamus, monemus, et in Domino exhortamur, vobis omnibus et singulis nichilominus in remissione peccaminum, et in virtute sanctæ obediencie firmiter injungentes, quatinus quocienscumque procuratores seu nuncii fabricæ Ecclesiæ Beati Petri, per Capitulum Ebor. deputati, cum ejusdem Capituli literis ad vos accesserint, fidelium elemosinas ad tam sumptuosi operis fabricam petituri, ipsos in hoc pio negotio, questoribus ecclesiæ Dunelmensis duntaxat exceptis, quos in his volumus anteferri aliis omnibus negotiis consimilibus, quoisque predictum Ecclesiæ Ebor. negocium expeditum fuerit, interim cessantibus, sine impedimento quoilibet cum favore benevolo admittatis: vestros et parochianos et were still proceeding, and great exertions were being made to secure funds for the continuance of the undertaking.

Among the acts of the Bishops of Durham that have been preserved there is no other indulgence for the church of York. There was, in general, so much ill-feeling and jealousy between the two sees, that the absence of documents of this character among the muniments at Durham need excite no surprise. Kellawe, I believe, had taken the oath of submission to the Archbishop, a circumstance which at once accounts for the appearance of this indulgence among his acts. Skirlawe and Longley were exceptions to the general rule, but their connection with the minster of York, before their elevation to the see, made them remember it in after-years.

Bishop Kellawe's register is a very fine volume on parchment, closely written, and containing an immense collection of miscellaneous documents and entries. It had been taken out of its proper custody, and had found its way into the Bodleian library: it was restored to its original position through the mediation of Bishop Barrington. Kellawe was buried in the chapter-house at Durham, under a stone richly inlaid with brass, which was perfect till the close of the last century, when it was destroyed with that magnificent room which it helped to adorn.

In 1306, Archbishop Greenfield issued an indulgence which, with the exception of a very few words, is identical with that issued by Kellawe. It is not necessary, therefore, to print it.

subditos, Dei et nostri intuitu, tam in celebrandis capitulis, quam in ecclesiis et capellis, quando et quociens expedire videritis, per vos et alios inducatis ut ad memoratæ fabricam larga conferant subsidia caritatis, illaque fideliter colligi faciatis. Et quicquid nomine predictæ Ecclesiæ collectum fuerit per vos, archidiaconos, officiales, et alios inferiores prelatos superius nominatos, seu alios deputandos a vobis, sine diminucione et retencione quomodolibet eisdem procuratoribus seu nunciis persolvatis sub pena excommunicacionis majoris, quam contravenientes poterunt, nec immerito, formidare. Nos autem, de Omnipotentis Dei misericordia, et gloriosæ Virginis matris suæ, Beatorum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, neconon sanctissimi confessoris, Willelmi, patroni ejusdem Ecclesiæ, omniumque Sanctorum meritis confidentes, omnibus parochianis nostris et aliis quorum diocesani hanc nostram indulgenciam ratam habuerint, de peccatis suis vere contritis et confessis qui juxta exhortacionem nostram predictam Ecclesiam relevaverint memoratam, et de bonis sibi a Deo collatis ad fabricam ejusdem Ecclesiæ manus adjutrices porrixerint, seu ad id alios induxerint xl dies de injuncta sibi penitencia, Deo propicio, misericorditer relaxamus. In cuius rei testimonium sigillum nostrum presentibus appenditur, tantummodo duraturum donec eas duxerimus revocandas. Datum, etc., ultimo die Septembris anno Domini m° ccc° xij°. Et pontificatus nostri secundo.

XIV.—TESTAMENTUM DOMINI WILLELMI LONCASTRE CAPELLANI.*

In festo Sancti Mich. Archangeli, 1321. Willelmus de Langecestre, capellanus, et penitenciarius ecclesiæ B. Petri Ebor. — Sep. juxta altare B. Thomæ martyris in Ecclesia pre-

* The first will that occurs among the testamentary documents in the office of the Dean and Chapter of York. It is that of one of the penancers of the church, and, as a specimen, it is inserted here. The fabric derived a considerable sum of money every year, as will be seen in the earlier fabric rolls, from their penancers. Offences were punished by the infliction of a certain fine, and when this was paid the culprit received absolution, and was restored to favour. It was the duty of the penancers to determine the sum, and to hand it over to the keeper of the fabric. Some farther notices of these persons will be given afterwards.

The testator, it will be seen, makes a very interesting will. I give some of the most remarkable bequests that it contains. He had thriven in the world, and the disposition that he makes of his wealth shews that he was a person of piety and discretion.

XV.—INJUNCTIONES DATE QUESTORIBUS PRO FABRICA EBOR.

Injunctum est nobis presbiteris a superioribus nostris in virtute sanctæ obediencie, ut nos exponamus parochianis nostris distinete et aperte omnibus diebus dominicis et interim festivis, infra missarum solemnia, indulgencias omnibus benefactoribus matris ecclesiae Ebor. concessas, videlicet in festis Purificacionis, Annunciationis, Assumptionis, Nativitatis et Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, et Beati Willelmi cuius corpus in eadem ecclesia requiescit, ac eciam in die anniversarii dedicacionis ecclesiae predictæ, neconon per octos dies festivales ipsos mediate sequentes,

* We have now a copy of the brief which was furnished to the regularly appointed beggars in behalf of the fabric, to be published by the parochial clergy in their churches. No less than twelve of these persons are mentioned in it by name. By them the whole diocese of York and other districts were periodically visited, and large sums of money were gathered together through their importunity. I am tempted to insert an extract from the Somponore's story

(sic), devote visitent et honorent, de bonis sibi a Deo collatis, pia devocione adjuvent, ut per hujusmodi pias elemosinarum suarum largiciones in terris thesaurum sibi indeficientem faciant in celis, et mereantur habere largas peccatorum suorum et penitentiarum sibi injunctarum indulgencias et remissiones, per sanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ pontifices, et alios pios super hoc concessas. et hoc subscriptas. In primis, videlicet, conferentibus ad fabriamong the Canterbury Tales which describes the operations of one of these travellers in Holderness. Had Chaucer heard of the fame of these Yorkshire beggars?

“Lordings, ther is in Yorkshire, as I gesse,
A mersh contree ycalled Holdernesse,
In which ther went a limitour aboute
To preche, and eke to beg, it is no doute.
And so befell that on a day this frere
Had preached at a churche in his manere,
And specially aboven every thing
Excited he the people in his preaching
To trentals, and to geve for Goddes sake, Wherewith men mighten holy houses make.

As may easily be conceived, the privilege of seeking alms for any religious purpose was frequently abused. Forged seals and licenses were common. The country was overrun by idle fellows, who imposed upon the faithful in many ways, and wasted upon their own pleasures the numerous gifts that they received. In 1324, Archbishop Melton warns his spiritual subjects in strong terms against these impostors. “Injungimus vobis omnibus et singulis in virtute obediencie supradictæ, et sub pena excommunicacionis majoris ne ad presens negocium exponendum aliquos admittatis questores preter eos qui nominatim in cedula annexa presentibus continentur. Et ne ipsos seu eorum aliquem . . . falsa, errores, seu aliiquid aliud excessivum permittatis in populo exponere, seu eciam predicare . . . oculos seu libros depictos, seu falsas reliquias ostendere nec in fraudem seu elusionem catholicorum aliud predicare seu exponere contra quod in breveto seu dicta cedula continetur sub penis superius annotatis.” (Reg. Melton, 518, b.)

Archbishop Melton issued two Indulgences for the fabric, one in 1320, and the other in 1324. As they are, in words, identical with No. xiii., they need not be recorded here.

XVII.—INQUISITIO DE DEFECTIBUS FABRICÆ ET CUSTODUM EJUSDEM.* (From a book marked L. penes Dec. et Cap., fol.
12, b.)

Nono die Januarii, 1344, comparuit dominus W. . . . qui juravit ad dicendum veritatem de defectibus fabricæ, et de re-that person to act. It is granted, it will be observed, by the Dean and Chapter, and is registered among their acts.

* This is one of the most valuable documents connected with the history of the fabric that has occurred to me, and it is one that has escaped the attention of every writer on that subject.

ceptis camerarii. Prius dixit de receptis istud. Dixit etiam quod de oblacionibus provenientibus ad sepulcrum bonæ memoriae domini Willelmi quondam Archiepiscopi (sic). Item de xx marcis debitibus de domino Nicholao de Hugate,* nuper hujus ecclesiæ canonico. Item, de expensis fabricæ, dixit quod credit cemetaryos ultra quam debita fuerint et nimis excessiva salario recipisse, et idem de aliis operariis, prout Nicholaus de Pykering plus debito recepit, ut dicitur. Item in solucione stipendiariorum ubi videlicet quod quum solet fieri solucio pro xv<sup>a</sup>, modo differtur usque in mensm, et aliquando ultra. Et aliquando contrarotulatores, in absencia eorumdem. Ordinatum est quod de cætero non differatur solucio ultra quindenam ad plus. Item dicit quod solvit semel Rogero de Hirton, ejusdem fabricæ cementario, stipendum suum fere per quindenam, qui toto tempore illo absens fuit, et nichil operabatur. Item de pecunia soluta pro potacione. Item, memorandum, quod, quoad fabricam Ecclesiæ, dicit quod sepius facta fuerit alienacio meremii, lapidum et calcis, et nescitur ubi. Item dicit quod coopertura Ecclesiæ et opus ecclesiæ lapideum deteriorantur propter defectus curæ et custodiae eorumdem. Item fabrica oneratur in pensione c.s, pro Roberto de Pynchebek, nuper canonico Ecclesiæ, et camerarius non percipit emolummentum ultra xl.s. Item dicit quod custodes operis et eciam operarii, licet videbantur ydonei, tamen sepissime

In the beginning of the year 1345, an officer, whose name and office have been lost, is summoned before the Chapter to give an account of his stewardship, and, generally, to inform the Chapter how the works of the minster were progressing. He gives by no means a favourable report, in consequence of which the master-mason and master-carpenter are also called before the Chapter to answer for themselves. The information that they give is at once novel and interesting, and throws very great light upon the architectural history of the church.

Fifty years had now elapsed since the foundations of the nave were laid, and, under ordinary circumstances, we should expect that that part of the church was complete. There seems, however, to have been some delay in the work, by which the fabric had received much injury. There was a "coopertura" to the nave, but there was no lead upon it, and the rain broke into the church through the imperfect covering so violently as to endanger the life of one of the servants of the church. The buttresses, also, had sustained much injury from their having been left unprotected at the top, the wet thereby getting into the joints of the stones and loosening them by degrees. The wheels for winding up stones and wood were still at the west end of the church, but they had fallen into decay, probably from not being used, and there were many peculations among the stores. All this tends to shew that the nave, with the exception of the lead roof, had, in point of fact, been complete for some time, long enough for it to fall into decay, and that, through negligence or want of funds, the Chapter had been unable thoroughly to finish the work. Thus the masons became idle, and idleness generated strife and plunder. When men are well employed they have no time to waste upon such matters.

dissenserunt adinvicem, ita quod opus fabricæ multociens tardabatur et perierunt hiis de causis. Item dicit quod columpnulæ exteriore, quæ botraces vocantur, perierunt, pro majori parte, pro defectu cooperturæ. Item dicit quod W. carpentarius senex est, et non potest laborare in altis. Ordinatum est quod alius juvenis loco suo subrogetur, et quod alius senex supervideat defectus. Magister cementariorum comparuit xj die Januarii Anno, etc., xliij<sup>to</sup>. Dicit quod sunt plures cementariorum qui, contra suam voluntatem, et eciam operarii, qui non sunt habiles aut ydonei ad laborandum, ac quod quidam ita rebelles sunt, quod nequit eos corripere et debite castigare. Item dicit quod alienata sepius erant ligna, lapides, calx, cement' et hujusmodi, et dicit quod de quarrura plura mala provenerunt quoad alienacionem lapidum, et quod domi nihil affertur quasi fabricæ ydoneum. Item dicit quod pro defectu curæ et cooperturæ tanta est aquæ habundancia quod nuper quidam famulus fere submersus extiterat, qui quidem defectus provenerunt, ut supra, pro defectu plumbatæ cooperturæ, etc., et dicit quod non potest habere curam operis, operariorum, et aliorum, sicut habere debet, quia impeditur per majorem, et non potest supervidere defectus quia dominus Thomas de Ludham habet claves ostiorum fabricæ solus. xij die mensis Januarii ordinatum fuit per dominos meos canonicos supradictos (viz., J. de Warren, R. de Cestre, T. Sampson, T. de la Mare, J. Giffard, et J. Wodhouse), quod nullus intromittat se de cementariis nisi magister cementariorum, videlicet de perficiendis vel amovendis. Item quod magister cementariorum denunciet Capitulo de illis qui rebelles inventi fuerint et incorrigibiles. Item quod predictus magister cementariorum diligenter intendat ne quis cementariorum suorum, quid accipiat ultra industriam et diligenciam quam fecerint in operando. Item quod dominus Thomas de Ludham supervideat omnes alias operarios, vel quisunque pro tempore fuerit principalis magister operis, quominus, ut supradictum est, idem magister cementariorum Capitulo denunciare debeat defectus discipulorum et excessus. Item quod magister sepius denunciet Capitulo et saltim de xv<sup>a</sup> in quindenam excessus discipulorum predictorum. Item quod de cetero nullus cementarius vendicet aliquid privilegium ultra communia salario eis per consuetudinem vel habere . . . vel quoniam alio modo debita. xj die Januarii, ut supra, comparuit Willelmus de Wrsal, submagister operis fabricæ ejusdem, et, examinatus, dicit quod major defectus, quem ipse scit, est quod rotæ existentes in occidentali parte Ecclesiæ sunt putridæ et nichil valent. Item eodem die comparuit magister carpentariorum, qui eciam janitor clausi fuit eo tempore, juratus et examinatus, dicit quod nescit de mala administracione camerarii plus quam quod solet unum lapidem per vices aliter dare, ut credit, et credit quod valorem recepit pro hujus dacione.

XXIII.—LICENCIA CONCESSA PER CAPITULUM DOMINO WILLELMO LA ZOUCHE ARCHIEPISCOPO EBOR., AD CONSTRUENDUM CAPELLAM SUAM.* (G. c. 5 a, penes Dec. et Capit. Ebor.)

Universis sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, ad quorum noticiam presentes literæ pervenient, Capitulum ecclesiæ Cath. B. Petri

* When the life of Archbishop Zouch was drawing to a close, that distinguished prelate, who had been long connected with the church of York, desired to evince his piety to God and his regard for the minster, by founding a chapel in that place. The assent of the Dean and Chapter was, therefore, asked and obtained.

CONSENSUS CAPITULI ECCLESIAE CATHEDRALIS BEATI PETRI EBOR. UT DOMINUS POSSET ERIGERE QUANDAM CAPELLAM JUXTA LATUM AUSTRALE ECCLESIAE MEMORATÆ. (Reg. Zouche, 233, a, b.)

Venerabili in Christo patri et domino Willelmo Dei gratia Ebor. Archiepiscopo, Angliæ primati, sedis apostolice legato, Capitulum ecclesiæ Beati Petri Ebor., Decano in remotis agente, omnimodum reverenciam et honores debitos tanto patri. Literas vestras recepimus tenoris infrascripti. "Salutem, gratiam et benedictionem. Carissimi, quia quandam capellam juxta latum australi chori ecclesiæ nostræ Cathedralis Ebor., absque tamen deformitate seu impedimento quibuscumque chori et ecclesiæ predictorum, erigere disposuerimus, Domino concedente, ad effectum ut in capella hujusmodi sic costructa, in Divini cultus

Ebor., Decano ejusdem in remotis agente, salutem in sinceris amplexibus Salvatoris. Noverit universitas vestra quod cum venerabilis in Christo pater et dominus, dominus Willelmus la Zouche Dei gratia Ebor. Archiepiscopus, Angliæ primas, sedis apostolicæ legatus, salubri ducens proposito quandam capellam in honore Sanctarum Mariae Magdalene et Marthæ, hospicæ Domini, juxta latus australe chori ecclesiae Cath. predictæ, ad Divini cultus augmentum et ministrorum in dicta capella laborancium sustentacionem uberiorem, erigere et construere proposuerit, suis sumptibus et expensis, ad effectum ut quedam cantaria perpetua certorum capellanorum divina perpetuis temporibus in dicta capella sub certa forma celebraturorum constituantur, et etiam ordinetur; nos laudabile propositum dicti venerabilis patris attendentes, ac volentes etiam, quoad ad nos attinet, propriis viribus promovere dictæ capellæ erectioni et construc-augmentum ac ministrorum dictæ ecclesiae amplificationem, quedam cantaria perpetua ordinetur, nostris in omnibus sumptibus et expensis, vestram sinceritatem attentius requirimus et rogamus, quatinus ut nostra hujusmodi intencio, quam piam fore credimus, celerius compleatur, permettere velitis quod magister cementiariorum ecclesiae vestre memorare, constructionem capellæ hujusmodi intendens, fabricam, nostris, ut prediximus, sumptibus et expensis, regere valeat et ordinare; significantes nobis vestris literis quid facere decreveritis in premissis. Diu et feliciter in Domino valeatis! Scripta Ripon. ix<sup>o</sup> die Aprilis." Quibus quidem literis vestris per nos recensitis, habitaque deliberacione super premissis placet nobis ut faciat, et fieri faciat, prout in literis vestris supradictis plenius continetur. Vestra valeat paternitas reverenda ad ecclesiae regimen salubre per tempora longiora. Scripta Ebor. xj die Aprilis. (1350?)

What a pleasing picture this gives us of the relations which existed between the Archbishop and the Chapter. It evinces much kindly feeling and affectionate regard.

Soon after this letter was written the work must have been begun. Among the miscellaneous expenses of the Archbishop, recorded in his register, there is an order made on the 16th of Nov., 1350, for the payment of 20*l.* to Robert de Swetmouth, rector of the altar of St. Laurence in the minster, "pro diversis expensis circa constructionem capellæ nostræ ibidem." On the 25th of April following a similar order is made in behalf of John de Acome, canon of the chapel of the Virgin and the Holy Angels, for the sum of 40*l.* On Nov. 18, a farther sum of 40*l.* is ordered to be paid to Acome and Swetmouth; and on the 10th of May following, two sums of 25*l.* 9s. 7*d.* and 27*l.*, are paid to them, and they have a general acquittance. The work was, probably, finished about this time, and as the formal assent of the Chapter had not as yet been regularly entered among their acts, we find the document which is now given.

This chantry chapel was dedicated to S. Mary Magdalene and S. Martha. In the will of the founder, dated in June, 1349, his intentions with regard to the dedication and the chantry are declared, and the sum of 300 marks is bequeathed to carry them out. Before the grave closed upon the benevolent prelate he was able to witness the completion of his undertaking.

The management of the work was wisely entrusted to the superintendence of the master-mason, and the site of the chapel is laid down for us. Of that building, however, there are now no remains. It was an appendage to the old Norman choir, and when that portion of the church was removed the chapel fell with it. Another building took its place, and rose up close to its old site, and it is in it that the Chapter-clerk has his office.

cioni, ac dictæ cantariæ ordinacioni cuicunque inde factæ seu faciendæ, suis tamen sumptibus et expensis, consentimus expressæ, ac volumus, et concedimus per presentes, pro nobis et successoribus nostris, ut dictus venerabilis pater, heredes vel executores sui, parietem dictæ ecclesiae Cathedralis eidem capellæ, in capite videlicet occidentali ejusdem, contiguam, unum vel duos arcum vel arcus construendo facere valeant, liceat perforari ac inter clausuras hostia ibidem ponere, liberumque ingressum et egressum per medium ejusdem parietis et arcum et hostiorum hujusmodi, pro cementariis et aliis operariis circa fabricam dictæ capellæ insistentibus, necnon pro capellanis et ministris in dicta capella in eventu juxta ordinacionem inde, ut premititur, faciendam, perpetuis futuris temporibus ministrantibus, ac eciam divina inibi audire volentibus, temporibus debitum et oportuni, facere et habere; ac dictam capellam jam laudabili opere inchoatam libere erigere, construere, et consummare valeat, suis sumptibus, ut prefertur; ac quandam cantariam certorum capellanorum in eadem divina celebraturorum juxta ordinacionem suam inde faciendam fundare, construere et ordinare, perpetuis futuris temporibus duraturam. Proviso quod dicti venerabilis pater, heredes et executores sui, dictam capellam, cum erecta fuerit et constructa, in parietibus, fenestris, verruris, hostiis, tecto et coopertura ejusdem faciant suis sumptibus, perpetuis temporibus, ut convenit, sustentari; ad quorum sustentacionem nos et successores nostri per premissa non intendimus nec volumus aliquando obligari. In cuius rei testimonium sigillum commune dicti Capituli nostri presentibus est appensum. Data in domo nostra Capitulari, quarto decimo dic mensis Julii, anno Domini millesimo trecentesimo quinquagesimo secundo.

XXXIV.—LITERA MISSA J. ARCHIEPISCOPO EBOR. PRO MEREMIO AD CELURAM HABENDO.* (G. c. 17, b.)

Reverentissime pater! optenta nuper concessione vestra liberali, vestrorum predecessorum vestigiis conformata, quod ad decorum et ornatum ecclesiae vestrae Cathedralis merendum pro

* After the death of Zouch, which took place in 1352, John Thoresby was promoted to the Archiepiscopal chair, the greatest benefactor that the church of York ever possessed. In 1353 he granted an indulgence on behalf of the fabric, which it is unnecessary to print here, as it is identical with the documents of that kind which have been already given.

The nave of the minster was now complete, with the exception of the ceiling. For this the Archbishop is requested to contribute the wood.

celura ejusdem necessarium de boscis vestris, prout indiguerit, sumeretur, in expedicione felici et festiva dicti operis, instantibus nobis et ejus custodibus vigilantibus, adeo prospere et celeriter est processum, quod totum meremium adhuc habitum quod pro longiori tempore sufficere putabatur in manibus est carpentiorum instructum, favente Domino, in proximo erigendum, et nisi novum meremium isto tempore hiemali succidatur, quod per tempus estivale poterit exsiccari, carpentarii, et alii operarii nostri, ad construccionem dicti operis conducti deficiente meremio stabunt penitus ociosi per totum tempus hiemale proximo jam futurum. Dignetur ergo vestra paternitas reverenda senescallo et aliis vestris ministris injungere, et precipere gracie, ut meremium competens, quod magis in arboribus tortis quam in aliis majoris precii et valoris quae in altum se protendunt consistit, instante isto tempore hiemali liberent, si placeat, succidendum, et omnem diligenciam quam possimus apponend<sup>o</sup>, quod ad consummacionem ipsius operis valeatis, ut speramus, disponente Domino, propriis oculis intueri. In prosperis feliciter vos conservet Altissimus incolumes ad suae ecclesiæ regimen et munimen. Scripta Ebor. xix<sup>o</sup> die Januarii, anno Domini millesimo ccc<sup>mo</sup> lv<sup>to</sup>.

XXV.—ORDINACIO FACTA PRO CEMENTARIIS ET CETERIS OPERARIIS FABRICÆ.* (Acta Cap. 1343—1368, 77, a.)

Ordinatum est per venerabile Capitulum ecclesiæ Beati Petri Ebor. quod consuetudines antiquæ, quibus cementarii et carpentarii et ceteri operarii operantes in fabrica Ecclesiæ predictæ uti solebant, per singula tempora anni, de cetero, more solito, observentur. Ad quarum observationem principalis et secundarius cementarius, qui vocantur magistri eorumdem, ac carpentarius fabricæ predictæ, qui sunt recepti per Capitulum, et imposterum recipiendi, jurent coram Capitulo quod consuetudines antiquas infrascriptas faciant per ceteros cementarios, carpentarios, et ceteros operarios ibidem operantes, de cetero fideliter observari, videlicet.

* A very useful set of rules to be observed by the masons and the other workmen connected with the fabric. They continued in force for about twenty years. The restoration of the choir, a serious and extensive undertaking, would oblige the Chapter to take care that their staff of workmen and officers was of the most efficient description, and the observance of the rules now given would ensure punctuality and order, and be of great assistance to the regular progress of the work. Their exact date is not given, but it was probably in June, 1352.

Quod ipsi cementarii, carpentarii, et ceteri operarii, incepere debeant operari, singulis diebus operalibus in estate, usque ad pulsacionem campanæ B. M. V., et tunc sedeant ad jantaeulum infra logium fabricæ, cum non jejunaverint, per spaciun dimidiæ Lente: et tunc predicti magistri, vel unus eorum, pulsabit super ostium logii, et omnes statim accedent ad opera sua; et sic officia sua diligenter complebunt, usque ad horam nonam, et tunc ad prandia sua ibunt. Item in yeme, videlicet, a festo Sancti Michaelis usque ad festum Paschæ, lucecente die, ad opus suum venient, et statim unusquisque, cum venerit, incepit operari, et sic continuare in forma predicta usque ad horam nonam. Post prandium vero, a festo Invencionis Sanctæ Crucis usque ad festum Beati Petri ad vincula, dormire debent infra logium. Et cum vicarii venerint de mensa canonicorum post prandium, magister cementarius, vel ejus substitutus, faciet eos de sompno surgere, et ad opus suum accedere; et sic debent operari usque ad primam pulsacionem ad vesperas, et tunc in logio ad potandum sedebunt a dicta prima pulsacione usque ad terciam pulsacionem propulsatam, tam in estate quam in yeme. Item a festo Beati Petri ad vineula predicto usque ad festum Invencionis Sanctæ Crucis, statim post prandium suum propalam hora competenti sumptum, ad opus suum redibunt non exspectantes recessum vicariorum de mensa canonicorum, et unusquisque, cum redierit, incepit operari; et sic operabuntur usque ad primam pulsacionem vesperarum, et tunc potabunt infra logium usque ad terciam pulsacionem propulsatam, et redibunt ad opera sua, et sic operabuntur usque ad pulsacionem campanæ abbathiae Beatae Mariæ quæ vocatur le Langebell, videlicet, singulis diebus operalibus, a festo Sancti Petri in Cathedra usque ad festum Sancti Michaelis, et a festo Sancti Michaelis usque ad dictum festum Sancti Petri, quamdiu per lucem diei videre poterunt, opera sua continuabunt annuatim. Item quilibet cementarius minus capiet per septimanam in yeme quam in estate, ad valorem unius dictæ, videlicet a festo Sancti Michaelis usque ad festum Paschæ. Item quando duo festa accederint infra septimanam, amittat unusquisque unam dietam, et, cum tria evenierint, medietatem illius septimanæ. Item in vigiliis et in sabbatis, quando post nonam requieverint, propter solemnitatem diei subscquentis, tunc operabuntur usque ad pulsacionem horæ nonæ. Item predicti duo magistri cementarii et carpentarius fabricæ intererint in qualibet pacacione, et ibi notificabunt custodi fabricæ et contrarotulatori ejusdem defectus et absencias cementariorum, carpentariorum, et ceterorum operariorum, et secundum moram et absencias cujuslibet deducatur de salario suo, tam pro dieta integra, quam pro dimidia, prout justum fuerit in hac parte. Item prefati duo magistri cementarii, ac carpentarius, qui pro tempore fuerint, debent predictas consuetudines fideliter observare in virtute juramenti prestiti, ac per ceteros cementarios et operarios ibidem operantes facient, sub pena amacionis, observari. Et si quis operari noluerit in forma predicta, statim amoveatur nec postmodo ad dictam fabricam recipiatur quoadusque eas voluerit in omnibus et singulis suis periculis observare.

XXVII.—INDENTURA CONCERNENS NOVUM OPUS CHORI ECCLESIAE EBOR. ET DESTRUCCIONEM MANERII DE SCHIRBURN.*
(G. c. 52.)

Hee indentura testatur quod reverendus in Christo pater et dominus, dominus Johannes, Dei gratia Ebor. Archiepiscopus, Angliae primas, et apostolice sedis legatus, et venerabiles viri, Capitulum Ecclesiæ suæ Ebor., Decano ejusdem in remotis agente, reducentes in debitæ consideracionis examen, quam sit conveniens quod ecclesia quelibet in singulis sui partibus conformi decore concordet, quodque chorus qui ad offerendum sacrificia, piæ placacionis officia salubriter exercendum, divinumque cultum explendum, est peculiariter deputatus, structura decenti potissime deceret ornari, ac quod in Ecclesia Ebor. predicta non fuerat aliquis locus congruus ubi missa gloriosæ Dei genetricis et Virginis Mariæ cotidie in ipsa Ecclesia celebraunda decenter poterat celebrari; ex certis rationabilibus, justis, utilibus, urgentibus, probabilibus et legitimis de causis ipsos ad id moventibus, pio proposito Divini Spiritus gratia, sicut pie creditur, inspirati, tam dictus dominus Archiepiscopus, quam Capitulum supradictum, de caritativis devotorum subsidiis confidentes, ex mutuo et deliberato consilio, prehabita super hoc convocatione, ac diligenti et solempni tractatu, et aliis solempnibus, quæ in hujusmodi arduis negotiis fieri et observari debent, de consuetudine, vel de jure, consenserunt, et unanimiter concordarunt, quod ibidem fabricare inciperent chorum talem, et quod antiquus chorus, qui respectu pulcritudinis navis Ecclesiæ videbatur pluribus nimis rudis, per partes dissolvetur, prout unanimi consensu ipsorum Archiepiscopi et Capituli videbitur expedire, et convertetur in auxilium complectionis novi chori supradicti. Nolentes, ymmo, expresse renuentes ipsos dominos, Johannem Ebor. Archiepiscopum, canonicos ipsius Ecclesiæ, vel eorum aliquem, heredes vel executores eorum, aut eorum bona sive catalla quecunque, in aliquo occasione premissa ad consummationem hujus, sic inchoati, operis obligari; sed, tam tacite quam expresse, consenserunt, quod iidem dominus Johannes Ebor. Archiepiscopus, et canonici, ultra ea quæ ex caritate et devocione ad fabricam dicti operis dare voluerint, nullatenus astringantur,

* The re-building of the choir being now determined upon, the Archibishop makes a most munificent gift to encourage the new work. He makes over to the Chapter the materials of his manor-house at Sherburn in Elmet, which had fallen into decay. A large quantity of stone, hewn and squared, would, therefore, come to the Chapter. This was used in the presbytery.

The information that this document contains with respect to the progress of the work, present and future, will be read with great interest.

XXVIII.—LITERA INDULGENTIARUM DOMINI ARCHIEPISCOPI CONCESSA BENEFATORIBUS FABRICÆ NOVI CHORI.* (G. c. 43, b.)

Johannes, permissione Divina, etc., dilectis filiis clero et populo decanatus de Pontesfr', nostræ diocesios, salutem, gratiam et benedictionem. Lex gratitudinis id exigit, et sancchio canonis hoc injungit, ut diversi catholici sanctæ matris ecclesiae filii matres suas spirituales, cathedrales videlicet ecclesias, quibus subsint, frequenter et devote visitent et honorent: sane cum nos et dilecti filii Capitulum Ebor. ecclesiae desiderantes ad laudem Dei et devocationem vestram et aliorum Christi fidelium propensius excitandam, ipsam Ecclesiam, sponsam nostram et matrem suam atque vestram, favente Domino, decorare, et chorum novum aptæ magnitudinis et pulcritudinis eminentis ibidem cepimus fabricare, cuius fabrica si debeat expedite procedere, ut optamus, magnum requirit expensarum fluvium, et nobis importabilem, nisi per Dei gratiam eidem proveniat uberius subsidiū aliunde; devocationem vestram attente rogamus et hortamur in Christo, quatinus, premissis in gratiosæ consideracionis examinacione debite recensitis, velitis dictam matrem vestram, sicut decet filios humiles, protinus visitare, vel saltim si id facere commode non poteritis, de bonis vobis a Deo creditis, ad dictam fabricam, feliciter per Dei gratiam et vestrum subsidiū consummandam, manus extendere misericorditer adjutrices, ut defectum visitacionis corporalis vestra supleat munificencia liberalis; et cum honore matris sic pocius honorem et solacium in hoc prosequamini vestrum proprium, et augebitis, non medioeriter, vestrorum cumulum meritorum. Et ut vestras ac aliorum Christi fidelium voluntates ad hoc per collacionem spiritualium munerum fervencius excitemus, de Dei Omnipotentis misericordia, gloriosæque Virginis Mariæ matris suæ, Beatorumque Petri et Pauli Apostolorum, ne non sanctissimi confessoris Wilhelmi, omniumque Sanctorum meritis et precibus confidentes, vobis omnibus, et aliis quorum dioecesani hanc nostram indulgenciam ratam habuerint, de peccatis vere contritis et confessis, qui dictam Ecclesiam nostram Ebor. devote visitaverint, ut prefertur, vel ad ipsius chori fabricam de bonis sibi a Deo collatis grata contulerint subsidia caritatis, vel ad id faciendum, verbo vel opere, alios induixerint, quadraginta dies indulgencie misericorditer concedimus per presentes. Et, eum expedicio dictæ fabricæ insideat, prout debet, præ cæteris nobis cordi, ad petendum et recipiendum a vobis et aliis Christi fidelibus caritativum subsidiū ad fabricam memoratam, dilectos filios, et eorum quemlibet, procuratores et nuncios nostros, ac Capituli nostri predicti, in hac parte deputamus speciales; vos omnes, et vestrum quemlibet, in Domino devocius exhortantes, vobisque de clero, in virtute obediencia firmiter injungentes, quatinus quocienscunque predicti procuratores seu nuncii nostri, vel eorum aliquis, ad vos accesserint, ex hac causa, ipsos et eorum singulos cum prerogativa favoris et gratiæ, prout tenemini, benignius admittatis, et ipsorum et eorum quemlibet negotia dictæ fabricæ in singulis ecclesiis collegiatis, conventionalibus, parochialibus, et capitulis ejusdem decanatus, libere dicere et exponere permittatis; ac ipsud negotium penes parochianos vestros præ omnibus aliis questibus premonere effectualiter studeatis, ac populum vobis subjectum cum debita diligencia inducatis, ut, in remissione peccaminum suorum, ad memoratam fabricam grata conferant subsidia caritatis. Vobis insuper firmiter injungimus, ut quicquid ad opus predictæ fabricæ collatum fuerit prefatis procuratoribus sive nuncii nostris sine difficultate quacunque integraliter faciatis (liberari?). In cuius rei, etc.

XXIX.—LITERA PRO FABRICA.* (G. c. 81, b.)

Capitulum ecclesiae Beati Petri Ebor., Decano ejusdem in remotis agente, universis et singulis rectoribus, vicariis, capellaniis et aliis per prebendas et dignitates jurisdictionis nostrae infra Archidiaconatum Estriding ubilibet constitutis, salutem in sinceris amplexibus Salvatoris. Inter alia caritatis munera id in conspectu Altissimi gratum fore credimus et acceptum, quod ad laudem Dei et decus ecclesiae, neconon ad excitandum erga sanctam ecclesiam devociones fidelium pie contulerit ordinata liberalitas devotorum. Cum itaque felicis recordacionis Innocencius papa sextus, auditio clementer et intellecto quod chorus Ebor. ecclesiae antiquus, et ipsius ecclesiae de novo edificatae, tam in amplitudine quam pulcritudine incongruus et improporcionatus existit, et quod reverendus in Christo pater et dominus, dominus Johannes Dei gratia Ebor. Archiepiscopus, Angliae primas, et Apostolicæ sedis legatus, et nos chorum ibidem facere de novo incepimus, opere non modicum sumptuoso, ad cuius operis consummacionem nostrae non sufficiunt facultates, de decore domus Dei pie solutus, et proinde desiderans mentes fidelium ad impendendum eidem fabricæ caritativum subsidium per concessionem suffragiorum spiritualium inclinare, omnibus vere penitentibus et confessis, qui ad id manus porrexerint adjutrices, duos annos et duas quadragenas de injuncta sibi penitencia misericorditer relaxaverit per literas apostolicas, per decennium tantomodo duraturas. Et jam succedens sibi, tam in habundancia pietatis et gratiae, quam in speculo celsitudinis apostolicæ, sanctissimus in Christo pater, dominus Urbanus Divina providencia sacrosanctæ Romanæ et universalis ecclesiae summus pontifex, cupiens ut opus ipsud celerius et felicius compleatur, et ut Christi fideles eo libencius confluant ad candem, et ut ad fabricam dicti chori manus porrigant prompctius adjutrices, quo ibidem celerius dono celestis gratiae conspexerint se refectos, omnibus Christi fidelibus vere penitentibus et contritis qui in Nativitatis, Circumcisionis, Epiphaniæ, Resurrexionis, Assensionis, et corporis Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, ac Pentecostes, et in Nativitatis, Annunciacione, et Purificacione, et Assumptione B. M. V., ac Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, sub quorum nomine ecclesia ipsa dedicata existit, et in Sancti Wilhelmi confessoris, cuius corpus in eadem ecclesia honorifice est translatum, festivitatibus, neconon per Nativitatis, Epiphaniæ, Resurreccionis, Assensionis, et corporis Domini nostri Jhesu

XXX.— . . . FABRICÆ COM. LINCOLN.* (G. c. 62, a.)

Noverint universi quod cum felicis recordacionis Innocencius papa sextus, et sanctissimus in Christo pater et dominus noster, dominus Urbanus, Divina providencia, sacrosanctæ Romanae ac universalis ecclesiae summus pontifex, auditio quod nos Johannes permissione Divina Ebor. Archiepiscopus, Angliae primas, et apostolicae sedis legatus, et Capitulum ecclesiae Ebor., novum chorum ibidem, sub spe celestis auxili et subsidii fidelium fabricare ceperimus opere sumptuoso, magnas et graciosas indulgencias ac pias remissiones omnibus conferentibus ad dictam fabricam concesserit gracie. Nos, Archiepiscopus et Capitulum supradictum, desiderantes dictam fabricam expedicius procedere, ad publicandum et exponendum clero et populo civitatis et dioecesios Lincoln. dictas indulgencias, et alias tam per sanctissimos in Christo patres, summos pontifices, quam alias in hac parte concessas, temporibus et locis quibus videbitur expedire, dictosque clerum et populum movendum et salubriter excitandum, ut sub spe hujus spiritualis premii, ad dictam fabricam conferendum, ac ad faciendum, exercendum et expediendum omnia et singula que in premissis et ea contingentibus necessaria fuerint seu eciam optima, eciam si mandatum exigant speciale, dilectum nobis in Christo dominum Robertum Nayron, vicarium chori ecclesie nostræ Ebor., nostrum verum ordinamus et constituimus procuratorem, negotiorum questorem, et nuncium speciale; promittentes nos ratum, gratum, et perpetuo firmum habituros quicquid dictus procurator noster fecerit in premissis, seu aliquo premissorum. In quorum omnium testimonium sigilla nostra presentibus sunt appensa. Data Ebor. iiiij<sup>o</sup> die mensis Marcii anno Domini millesimo ccc<sup>o</sup> lxiij<sup>o</sup>, et translacionis nostræ Archiepiscopatui predictæ anno duodecimo.

‡ This form has partly occurred before. So great was the demand for additional funds to support the fabric that the brief-bearers were sent into other dioceses.

XXXI.—INDENTURA CUM JOHANNE PLUMBARIO.* (G. c. 85, b.)

Hec indentura testatur quod Johannes Plomer, de Blaykestret, operabitur in opere plumbarii, propriis suis manibus, et non per substitam personam, in coopertura ecclesiae B. Petri Ebor. campanilis, berefridi, chori, capituli, et pinniculorum sive turrium ejusdem Ecclesiae, quociensemque et quandocumque de cetero necesse fuerit, aut defectus apparuerit in eisdem aut aliqua parte ipsarum, et per magistrum fabricae ejusdem Ecclesiae aut alium ex parte sua fuerit requisitus; capiendo, ebdomada qualibet qua in opere predicto laboraverit, a dicto magistro operis duos solidos sex denarios argenti pro stipendio et pro labore suo, sine aliquo alio amplius exigendo, nisi forsan cum de Capitulo predicto, considerata operis sui quantitate, uberiorem remuneracionem sibi de gratia facere voluerint. Et si dictus Johannes per dietas vel vices in opere predicto laboraverit, recipiet pro dieta secundum ratam sive porcionem summæ predictæ taliter limitatae, nec amplius idem Johannes quocumque anni tempore poterit vendicare. Sin tamen aliquo tempore anni intermedio fabrica predicta ejus labore vel emendacione non indigeat, petita prius licencia a Capitulo, sive magistro operis, et obtenta, licite poterit alibi operari, et commodum suum facere, prout sibi videbitur expedire: ita tamen quod ad reparacionem et emendacionem dictæ fabricæ statim et sine difficultate redcat, quandocumque opus eo fuerit, et per magistrum operis, sicut premittitur, fuerit requisitus. Supradictum etiam opus, quociensemque necesse fuerit, bene et fideliter et absque omni dolo et fraude faciet diligenter, et expediet; ac plumbum et stagnum Ecclesiae, et quicquid ad opus predictum pertinuerit, conservabit, et non alibi quam in ipso opere vel circa illud aliquo tempore distrahet et expendet. Si vero aliquo famulo sive serviente ad opus predictum indigerit, ex consensu et concordia dicti magistri, qui pactum secum faciet pro ebdomada vel dieta, assignabitur sibi famulus hujusmodi in subsidium operis supradicti. Et pro predictis omnibus faciendis et fideliter adimplendis idem Johannes, coram dictis dominis Capitulo, corporale prestitit juramentum. Preterea licet dictus Johannes Plomer teneatur per suum scriptum obligatorium Decano et Capitulo ecclesiae Beati Petri Ebor. supradictis in quadraginta marcis argenti, solvendis dictis Decano et Capitulo vel eorum successoribus * Any document of this kind is of rare occurrence and of great value. I am not aware that any regular contract with a plumber has ever been printed before.

certis die et loco, ut in scripto obligatorio suo plenius continetur, predicti tamen Decanus et Capitulum volunt et concedunt, pro se et successoribus suis, quod si dictus Johannes Plomer omnes convenciones in officio suo plumbarii predicto bene et fideliter fecerit et adimpleverit, nec in eis vel aliqua dictarum convencionum particula defecerit, quamdiu in suo dicto officio steterit, dictum scriptum obligatorium quadraginta marcarum nullius sit valoris vel effectus: alioquin, in suo robore permaneat, et virtute plena, jure valituris. In cuius rei testimonium sigillum dicti Capituli parti hujus indenturæ, penes dictum Johannem remanenti, est appensum: alteri vero parti, penes dictum Capitulum remanenti, sigillum dicti Johannis est appositum. Data apud Ebor. die Veneris in festo Sancti Mathiæ, anno Domini millesimo ccc<sup>mo</sup> sexagesimo septimo.

XXXII.—PENSIO MAGISTRI ROBERTI DE PATRYNGTON, CEMENTARII.* (G. c. 89, a.)

Omnibus, etc. Capitulum Ebor., etc. Sciatis quod pro bono servicio magistri Roberti de Patryngton, cementarii, nobis et ecclesie nostræ predictæ impenso, et imposterum ad terminum vitæ suæ impendendo, concessimus ei decem libras sterlingorum, recipiendas, singulis annis, per manus magistri operis dictæ ecclesie nostræ, qui pro tempore fuerit, ad terminos Pentecostes et Sancti Martini in yeme, per equales porciones, una cum domibus infra clausum dictæ ecclesie quas Willelmus de Hoton cementarius, dum vixit, inhabitavit; ita tamen quod dictus Robertus operibus dictæ ecclesie nostræ bene et fideliter intendat, et nullis aliis operacionibus, in retardacionem seu impedimentum dictorum operum nostrorum, vacet. Et si forte dictus Robertus admiserit operaciones alibi, et circa easdem intenderit, operibus ecclesie nostræ neglectis, retardatis seu omissis, et dictus Robertus, ex parte nostra premonitus tertio, non redierit ad eadem opera nostra ut circa ea diligenter intendat, tunc cesset pensio sua predicta quousque ad opera nostra redierit, et defectus hujusmodi debite emendaverit. Et si forte, quod absit, dictus Robertus eccitate vel alia infirmitate corporis percussus fuerit quominus circa opera nostra predicta corporaliter poterit laborare, tunc, durante infirmitate predicta, recipiat decem marcas per annum duntaxat ad terminos supradictos, una cum domibus predictis, impendendo consilium et avisamentum suum, pro posse suo, in hac parte. Et in eventu quo idem Robertus, laborare valens, se omnino a dictis operibus subtraxerit, tunc concessio nostra predicta extunc cesseret quousque satis redierit, et operibus nostris intenderit, ut prefertur. In ejus rei testimonium sigillum nostrum presentibus est appensum. Data Ebor., in domo nostra capitulari, quinto die mensis Januarii anno Domini millesimo eccc<sup>mo</sup> Ixvij<sup>o</sup>.

* A patent, made in nearly the same words, to William de Hoton, has already been given. Whilst Putrington presided over the masons a great part of the new choir was erected, and this document informs us when he entered upon his office.

XXXIII.—ORDINACIO CEMENTARIORUM.* (G. c. 100, b.)

* A document of very great interest. It is valuable not only for the insight that it gives us into the rules and government of the masons, but also for the language in which they are made. A similar order, made twenty years before this, has already been printed.

On the 31st of October, 1370, master Robert de Patrington, and twelve other masons, came before the Chapter, and swore to observe these rules, in the following terms: "Lordes, if it be your wyles, we grant for to stand at our werkes truly at our power," etc. This circumstance is recorded by the antiquary, Matthew Hutton, among his extracts from some of the books at York, which are now missing. They may be found in MS. Harl. 6971.

XXXIV.—INDENTURA PLUMBARI. (G. c. 97, a).*

Hec indentura facta inter venerabile Capitulum Ebor., Decano ejusdem in remotis agente, ex una parte, et Johannem filium Adae le Plummer de Beverlaco, ex altera parte, testatur, * Another indenture with a plumber, similar in some respects to the one that has been already printed. It refers, however, more to extensive works than to mere repairs.

quod idem Capitulum retinuit dictum Johannem ad serviendum Ecclesiae Ebor. in officio plumbarii, ad terminum vitæ suæ, in forma quæ sequitur. Primo, quod idem Johannes teneatur ad cooperiendum Ecclesiam predictam ac berefridum, et domum capitularem ejusdem in coopertura plumbi, ac defectus ibidem contingentes congrue emendare, quocienscumque opus fuerit. Et habebit dictus Johannes pro quolibet fother plumbi, continente centum et quater viginti petras, de novo fundendo, et in coopertura dictæ Ecclesiae, seu berefridi, et domus capitularis, debite apponenda, septem solidos sex denarios, per manus magistri fabricæ, qui pro tempore fuerit. Item habebit pro qualibet roda cooperienda super dicta Ecclesia, berefrido, et domo capitulari, continente viginti pedes mensurandas per ulnam usualem in longitudine et latitudine, amovenda et de novo (ponenda?) supra eandem Ecclesiam sive berefridum, et domum capitularem septem solidos et sex denarios. Et cum contigerit quod plumbum de novo operatus fuerit, ad cooperiendum campanile, vel illam partem berefridi vocatam brochie, tunc percipiet pro singulis fother, et rodis secundum formam predictam operandis, tresdecim solidos et quatuor denarios. Item quandocunque defectus in Ecclesia, campanili, berefrido, sen domo capitulari eminuerint, et de minore pondere plumbi quam de fother seu rodis sive rodarum quarteris emendari poterunt, ita ut videatur magistro fabricæ expedire magis ad computandum per dietas quam aliter, tunc dictus Johannes, si presens operatus fuerit, percipiet per diem pro seipso sex denarios, et pro quolibet serviencium suorum operancium ibidem quinque denarios, dum tamen iidem servientes habiles et necessarii fuerint. Item predictus Johannes tenebitur, quociens opus fuerit, cineres plumbi fundendas in dicto officio suo bene et fideliter purgare et custodire, percipiendo pro qualibet petra xij librarum, unum denarium et obolum. Item dictus Johannes tenebitur operaciones plumbeas Ecclesiae, campanilis, berefridi, ac domus capitularis, quociens opus fuerit, supervidere, ac circa reparacionem defectuum contingencium fideliter consulere, et diligenciam suam apponere, et ulterius, cum per Capitulum sive magistrum fabricæ requisitus fuerit, fideliter laborare. Et si forte dictus Johannes infirmus fuerit, quominus circa premissa poterit in propria persona sua intendere, tunc inveniet loco suo alium plumbarium sufficientem ad supendum vices suas pro quo tenebitur respondere. Item tenetur idem Johannes plumbum, stannum, et omnia alia officium suum concernencia, fideliter custodire, ac comodum Ecclesiae Eboracensis, quatinus concernerit suum officium, fideliter procurare. Et si per defectum alicujus serviencium dicti Johannis dampnum contigerit fieri Ecclesiae Ebor., quovis modo, tunc tenebitur dictus Johannes de dampno hujus debite repondere. Et omnia predicta tenetur prefatus Johannes facere, suis sumptibus in omnibus, percipiendo, sicut predictum est, hoc excepto, Capitulum sibi inveniet focale necessarium ad omnia premissa, ac statuum pro soldura, cum opus fuerit. Et predictus Johannes tactis sacrosanctis evangelii, corporale prestitit juramentum quod Ecclesiæ et Capitulo Ebor. fidelitatem conservabit, ac officium in forma predicta bene et fideliter, pro posse suo, adimplebit. Prefatum autem Capitulum pro bono servicio suo iis et Ecclesiæ Ebor. impendendo, ut premittitur, dedit et concessit predicto Johanni, ultra stipendia sua preacta, quadraginta solidos, nomine feodi, percipiendos annuatim per manus custodis fabricæ Ecclesiæ, qui pro tempore fuerit, ad terminos Pentecostes et Sancti Martini per equales porciones, primo termino incipiente ad terminum Pentecostes proximo futurum: ita tamen quod idem Johannes fideliter servet premissa pro parte sua. In cuius rei testimonium parti hujus indenturæ penes dictum Capitulum remanenti predictus Johannes filius Adæ le Plummer sigillum suum apposuit, et alteri parti ejusdem indenturæ penes eundem Johannem residenti sigillum dicti Capituli est appensum. Data Ebor. tercio die mensis Januarii anno Domini millesimo ccc<sup>mo</sup> septuagesimo.

XXXV.—ACQUIETANCIA CAPÆ ET PALEFRIDI DAVIDIS DE WOLLOR.* (Acta Cap., G. c. 96, a.)

Noverint universi nos, Capitulum ecclesiæ Beati Petri Ebor., Decano ejusdem in remotis agente, recepisse de venerabili et discreto viro domino Henrico de Ingelby, ipsius Ebor. Ecclesiæ concanonico et confratre nostro, ex legato sive donacione domini David de Woller, canonici Ebor. defuncti, ad opus dictæ Ec-

* According to ancient custom the Dean and Chapter of York could claim, as a mortuary, from each canon, a cope and a palfrey of a certain value, or a money payment in lieu of them. Many of the canons paid their mortuaries themselves, but, in some cases, the Chapter had great difficulty in procuring them. A notice of the receipt of them is duly recorded in the register of the Chapter. On Nov. 16, 1371, the executors of Wm. de Dalton pay 20 marks "pro capa;" on Nov. 1, 1372, the Chapter give an acquittance to Johu de Feriby, for "unam capam preciosam de albo serico et unum morsum ad eandem capam quadrangulum competentem et argento desuper deaurato artificiose confectum." The cope was always added to the stores in the treasury, and if a money payment was received it was devoted to the repairs of the vestments. In the present instance we have a record of a very splendid gift.

David de Wooller was a noted pluralist in his day, and acquired a large clesiæ Ebor., jocalia subscripta, videlicet, unam capam de vclvetto nigro frettatum frectis aureis cum stellis aureis intersertis bene spisse, una cum uno morsu argenti bene deaurato et anelato cum ymagine Beatae Mariæ, ac eciam cum lapidibus de corallo circumpositis: item unam casam pro corporali magni altaris auro textam et ymaginibus bene sutis: item duas pelves argenti deauratas bene spissas cum armis Angliæ et Franciæ in fundis bipartitis, quarum una habet bibonam (sic): item unum coclear argenti deauratum ad proporcionandum vinum sive aquam pro calice magni altaris: item duas pallas largas pro magno altari: item viginti libras argenti loco palefridi debiti pro fabrica Ecclesiæ supradictæ: de quibus quidem jocalibus et palefrido fatemur nobis fore plenarie satisfactum, et tam prefatum David, quam dominum Henricum, ac eciam executores quoscunque dicti domini David acquietamus per presentes. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum nostrum presentibus est appensum. Data Ebor. xxij<sup>o</sup> die mensis Decembris anno Domini, millesimo ccc<sup>mo</sup> lxx<sup>mo</sup>.

XXXVI.—DIMISSIO DOMORUM PHILIPPO CARPENTARIO.*
(G. c. 117, b.)

Universis, etc. Capitulum Ebor., Decano in remotis agente, salutem in sinceris amplexibus Salvatoris. Noveritis nos concessisse Philippo de Lincoln servicium carpentariæ fabricæ Eccl. B. Petri Ebor., ad terminum vitæ suæ, pro laudabili servicio nobis impenso et imposterum impendendo, capiendo inde annuatim de fabrica per septimanam tres solidos argenti, et omnes alias commoditates, prout predecessores ipsius Philippi in temporibus preteritis melius habuerint et receperint. Concessimus eciam eidem Philippo officium janitoris clausi, ad totam vitam suam, cum domibus quas nunc habet, buttantibus super gabulum fortune. His ecclesiastical preferments were very numerous. He was also connected with the Court, and was, for many years of his life, master of the rolls.

Henry de Ingleby, Wooler's friend and executor, was a distinguished statesman and ecclesiastic. On Feb. 16, 1369-70 he, in his turn, gave to the church of York "capam preciosam de velewett, bruni coloris, desuper clavibus ex auro contextis, et unum morsum quadrangulum competentem ex puro auro et argento ac gemmis artificiose confectum."

* A grant which shews how well the Chapter appreciated the labours of an old servant. Philip de Lincoln must have been connected with the church of York for more than twenty years. A document relating to him has been already printed.

chori Berefridi, cum stallagio in porta et cimiterio, certis diebus consuetis, extra shopas ibidem nunc edificatas, quod alicui alii post eum concedi totaliter inhibemus. Ymmo illud extunc fabricæ applicari decrevimus, percipiendo nichilominus de dieta fabrica ad totam vitam suam annuatim deceem solidos argenti ad terminos Pentecostes et S. Martini in yeme, per equeales porciones, dumtamen operibus fabricæ predictæ bene et fideliter intendat, et portas ac clausum predictum secure, prout ad ipsum spectat, pro posse suo custodiat; commodum, insuper, quod in primis magnis residenciis habere consuevit in similibus faciendis ab eo nullatenus auferre intendimus. In ejus rei testimonium sigillum nostrum presentibus est appensum. Data in domo nostra capitulari Ebor. xxix<sup>o</sup> die mensis Januarii anno Domini m ccc<sup>mo</sup> lxxiiij<sup>o</sup>.

Et memorandum quod predictum Capitulum expresse concessit dicto Philippo de Lincoln, quod ipse construere in cimiterio dictæ Ecclesie juxta cisternam prope murum domini Decani Ecclesie predictæ, duas shopas licite posset, et emolummentum inde proveniens ad totam vitam suam libere percipere et habere. Et est secundum quod tempore datae scripti predicti fieri dicto Philippo erant duntaxat in cimiterio dictæ Ecclesie sex shopæ edificatae, videlicet una contra gabulum chori Berefridi et quinque ad—Eccl. Ebor. juxta hostium australē ipsius Ecclesie, de quibus emolummentum ad fabricam pertinebit.

XXXVII.—LITERA DE CRUCE ARCHIEPISCOPI.* (G. c. 134. a.)

Universis sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, presentes literas inspecturis, Capitulum ecclesiæ B. Petri Ebor., Decano ejusdem in remotis agente, salutem in omnium Salvatore. Noveritis nos recepisse de executoribus testamenti bonæ memoriae domini * Another proof of the munificence of Archbishop Thoresby. At his enthronization in the minster he solemnly lays upon the altar as an offering a gilt cross containing a precious relic. This cross is re-delivered to the Archbishop by the Chapter for his own use, and in the following document he promises to have it restored after his decease:—

PROMISSIO CUJUSDAM CRUCIS ECCLESIE EBOR. REMANSURE. (Reg. Thoresby, 12.a.)

Universis presentes literas inspecturis, Johannes, etc., salutem in Domino. Noveritis quod, cum octavo die Octobris anno Domini millesimo ccc<sup>mo</sup> liij<sup>o</sup>, in manerio nostro juxta Westmonasterium, recepimus de Capitulo nostro Ebor. per manus magistri Willelmi de la Mare, canonici Ecclesie nostræ predictæ, ex

Johannis, nuper Ebor. Archiepiscopi, unam crucem preciosam cum particula Dominicæ crucis inclusa, per eundem nuper Archiepiscopum, tempore intronizationis suæ, ad summum altare oblatam, et per nos ei, pro tempore vitæ suæ, comodatam; quam quidem crucem fatemur nobis per prefatos executores restitutam esse, et eos inde acquietamus per presentes: et si quid scriptum obligatorium proinde eujuscumque summæ per quemcumque factum in thesauraria nostra seu alibi reperiatur, in futurum volumus quod omni careat robore et virtute, et pro nullo omnino habeatur. In cuius rei testimonium presentibus sigillum nostrum commune est appensum. Data in capitulo nostro Ebor. xv<sup>to</sup> die mensis Januarii anno Domini millesimo ccc<sup>m</sup> lxx<sup>mo</sup> septimo.

XXXVIII.—COPIA BULLÆ PRO ECCLESIA DE MISTERTON.*
(G. c. 146, b.)

Urbanus episcopus, servus servorum Dei, venerabili fratri Alexandro Archiepiscopo Ebor., salutem et apostolicam bene-accommodato, quandam crucem parvam deauratam, continentem reliquias de cruce Dominicæ et alias, quam die intronizationis nostræ ad magnum altare ipsius Ecclesiae optimus in eadem perpetuo remansuram; nos prefatam crucem cum reliquiis predictis per nos vel executores nostros dictæ Ecclesiae restituere permittimus integrum, sub pena centum librarum prefatae Ecclesiae, si restitucio illa facta non fuerit per nos vel dictos executores nostros, solvendarum. In cuius rei testimonium sigillum nostrum fecimus hiis apponi. Data die, loco, et domo supradictis.

* A papal bull, which throws some light upon the works in the choir. After Thoresby's death, the progress of that part of the church was impeded. The large sums of money which came, periodically, from his purse as additions to the fabric fund, were stayed, and the work, in consequence, advanced more slowly. Besides this, the troubled state of the kingdom, the "malitia temporum," as the Pope calls it, would necessarily lessen the revenues of the church and retard the alms of the faithful. To supply this deficiency, the Archbishop is allowed to appropriate the church of Misterton to the fabric for ten years. The sum to be derived from this concession was but small, but it would still be a welcome addition to the failing rent-roll of the master of the fabric.

We can, in general, infer but little from the wording of such a document as this. It speaks, however, of the incomplete state of a large portion of the choir. It might, therefore, be reasonably concluded from this that some part of it was finished, and here then we have another confirmation of the statement of the chronicler that the presbytery was complete when Archbishop Thoresby died.

I append the permission from Archbishop Neville, and the licence from the king to appropriate the church. Both documents occur in Neville's Register, fol. 85:—

QUALITER ADVOCACIO ECCLESIE DE MYSTERTON CONCEDITUR DECANO ET CAPITULO EBOR. PER ALEXANDRUM ARCHIEPISCOPUM.

Universis Sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis ad quos presentes literæ pervenerint, dictionem. Ad ea quæ ecclesiarum, presertim cathedralium, comodum et utilitatem respiciunt, libenter intendimus, illaque prosequimur favoribus oportuniis. Exhibita, siquidem, nobis nuper, pro parte tua et dilectorum filiorum Capituli Ecclesiae Ebor., peticio continebat quod olim bona memoriae Johannes Archiepiscopus Ebor., predecessor tuus, et prefati Capitulum, attendantes quod corpus dictæ Ecclesiae, quæ olim fuerat parva in amplitudine, magna et formositate decora, ad laudem et honorem Dei per ipsorum devotos antecessores fucrat constructum, choro ejusdem Ecclesiae in antiqua pravitate et deformitate relicto; idque moleste ferentes, et cupientes, in eadem

Alexander permissione Divina Ebor. Archiepiscopus, etc., salutem in sinceris amplexibus Salvatoris. Noveritis nos pro nobis et successoribus nostris deditis et, mediante licencia regia, confirmasse, dilectis filiis Decano et Capitulo Ecclesiae nostræ Cath. Beati Petri Ebor. advocacionem ecclesiae de Misterton nostræ diocesios: habendum et tenendum dictam advocacionem cum omnibus suis pertinentiis eisdem Decano et Capitulo et successoribus suis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam imperpetuum, absque impetione nostri vel successorum nostrorum, secundum formam carte super licencia predicta confectæ. Et Alexander, Archiepiscopus supradictus, et successores nostri dictam advocacionem cum suis pertinentiis universis prefatis Decano et Capitulo warantizabimus imperpetuum. In cuius rei testimonium has literas nostras patentes sigilli nostri appensione fecimus communiri. Hiis testibus, domino Roberto de Nevill de Horneby, milite, senescallo nostro, magistro Johanne de Waltham offic' nostro, Johanne de Clifford cancellario nostro, ac domino Johanne de Clone decano capellæ nostræ et aliis. Data apud Cawode, nono die mensis Februarii anno Domini millesimo ccc<sup>mo</sup> septuagesimo octavo. Et nostræ consecrationis quinto.

Carta regia domino Alexandro Archiepiscopo concessa quod possit dare ecclesiae de Misterton advocacionem Decano et Capitulo Ebor., ac ipsi valeant eandem appropriare.

Ricardus Dei gratia rex Angliæ et Franciæ et dominus Hiberiæ, omnibus ad quos presentes literæ pervenerint. Sciatis quod de gratia nostra speciali concessimus et licenciam dedimus pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, venerabili in Christo patri Alexandro Ebor. Archiepiscopo quod ipse advocacionem ecclesie de Misterton, quæ advocacio de nobis tenetur ut parcella temporalium Archiepiscopatus sui predicti, et quæ quidem ecclesia ad viginti et tres libras sex solidos et octo denarios per annum taxatur, ut dicitur, dare possit et assignare dilectis nobis Decano et Capitulo Ecclesiae Beati Petri Ebor. habendam et tenendam eisdem Decano et Capitulo et successoribus suis imperpetuum. Et eisdem Decano et Capitulo quod ipsi advocacionem predictam a prefato Archiepiscopo recipere, et dictam ecclesiam appropriare, et eam sic appropriant in propriis usus tenere possint dictis Decano et Capitulo et successoribus suis pro sustentacione fabricarum et luminarium predictæ ecclesie Beati Petri juxta ordinacionem prefati Archiepiscopi imperpetuum, statuto de terris et tenementis ad manum mortuam non ponendis edito, seu eo quod prefata advocacio de nobis teneatur, ut predictum est, non obstantibus. Nolentes quod prefatis Archiepiscopis, vel successorebus sui, seu predictis Decanus et Capitulum, seu successorebus sui, ratione premissorum per nos vel heredes nostros, justiciarios, escatatores, vicecomites aut alios ballivos seu ministros nostros quoscumque inde accionentur, molestetur, seu in aliquo seu graventur. Salvis semper nobis et heredibus nostris serviceis de predicta advocacione nobis debitis et consuetatis. In cuius rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste me ipso apud Westmonasterium xxv. die Julii anno regni Ricardi Secundi secundo.

Ecclesia chorūm correspondentem hujusmodi corpori dictæ Ecclesiæ construi et edificari facere, dum tempora essent fertilia, ceperunt edificari facere in eadem Ecclesia novum chorūm convenientem spesiositati ejusdem Ecclesiæ, opere plurimum sumptuoso; quodque hujus chori, sic incepti, tam magna pars adhuc restat perficienda, quod redditus et proventus ad fabricam et luminaria dictæ Ecclesiæ deputati, qui propter maliciam temporum sunt plurimum diminuti, ad consummacionem dicti chori nullatenus sufficere possunt: quare, pro parte tua et ipsorum Capituli, nobis fuit humiliter supplicatum, ut tibi appropriandi et assignandi auctoritate Apostolica Decano ejusdem Ecclesiæ, qui nunc est, pro tempore, et dicto Capitulo, parochialem ecclesiam de Misterton, Ebor. diocesios, quæ ad collacionem Archiepiscopi Ebor. pro tempore existentis pertinet; cujusque fructus, redditus et proventus triginta quinque marcarum sterlingorum, secundum taxacionem decimæ, valorem annum, ut asseritur, non excedunt, licenciam concedere de speciali gracia dignaremur. Nos, igitur, hujus supplicationibus inclinati, fraternitati tuæ appropriandi et assignandi dictam parochialem ecclesiam eisdem Decano et Capitulo, usque ad decennium a tempore quo dilectus filius rector ejusdem ecclesiæ, qui nunc est, eidem ecclesiæ cedit vel decedet, aut alias ecclesiam ipsam quomodolibet dimittet, computandum duntaxat. Ita quod, ipso rectore cedente vel decadente, aut eandem parochialem ecclesiam alias quomodolibet dimittente, liceat eisdem Decano et Capitulo ipsam parochialem ecclesiam et ejus possessionem auctoritate propria libere apprehendere, et usque ad hujusmodi decennium liceat retinere, ipsiusque fructus, redditus et proventus ad fabricam ejusdem chori dictæ Ebor. Ecclesiæ applicare: reservata, tamen, de fructibus, redditibus et proventibus hujusmodi congrua porcione pro vicario interim ibidem instituendo, ex qua idem vicarius possit congrue sustentari; episcopalia jura solvere, et alia incumbencia sibi onera supportare; contradicentes per censuram ecclesiasticam, appellacione postposita, compescendo: non obstantibus si aliquis super provisionibus sibi faciendis de parochialibus ecclesiis et aliis beneficiis ecclesiasticis in illis partibus speciales vel generales apostolicæ sedis vel legatorum nostrorum literas impetraverit; eciam si per eas ad inhibicionem, reservacionem, et decretum vel alias quomodolibet sit processum: quas quidem literas et processus habitos per eosdem infra dictum decennium ad predictam ecclesiam volumus non extendi, sed nullum per hoc eis, quoad assecucionem parochialium ecclesiarum aut beneficiorum aliorum prejudicium, generari, et quibuscumque privilegiis, indulgenciis et literis apostolicis specialibus vel generalibus, quorumcumque tenorum existant per quæ presentibus non expressa vel taliter non inserta effectus earum impediri valeat quomodolibet vel differri, et de quibus quorumque totis tenoribus habenda esset in nostris literis monicio specialis, plenam et liberam concedimus tenore presencium facultatem (sic). Data Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum kal. Augusti Pontificatus nostri anno secundo.

XXXIX.—LICENCIA RICARDI SECUNDI DE MANU MORTUA.*

Ricardus Dci gratia rex Angliæ et Franciæ et dominus Hiberniæ, omnibus ad quos presentes literæ pervenerint salutem. Liceat de communi consilio regni nostri Angliæ statutum sit quod non liceat viris religiosis seu aliis ingredi feodum alicujus, ita quod ad manum mortuam deveniat, sine licencia nostra et capitalis domini, de quo res immediate tenetur, de gratia tamen nostra speciali, et pro quinque marcis quas dilicti nobis in Christo Decanus et Capitulum ecclesiæ Beati Petri Ebor. nobis solverunt, concessimus et licenciam dedimus pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, Ricardo Trumper de Ebor., bocher, quod ipse unum mesuagium cum pertinenciis in Ebor., quod de nobis tenetur in burgagio, dare possit et assignare prefatis Decano et Capitulo, habendum et tenendum eisdem Decano et Capitulo et successoribus suis ad opus fabricæ Ecclesiæ predictæ imperpetuum: et eisdem Decano et Capitulo, quod ipsi mesuagium predictum cum pertinenciis a prefato Ricardo recipere possint et tenere sibi et successoribus suis predictis in forma predicta imperpetuum, sicut predictum est, tenore presencium similiter licenciam dedimus specialē; statuto predicto seu eo quod dictum mesuagium de nobis tenetur in burgagio, ut predictum est, non obstante. Nolentes quod predictus Ricardus vel heredes sui, aut prefati Decanus et Capitulum seu successores sui, ratione premissorum per nos vel heredes nostros justiciarios, escaactores, vicecomites, seu alios ballivos seu ministros nostros, vel heredum nostrorum quosecumque, inde accionentur, molestentur in aliquo seu graventur: salvo tamen nobis et heredibus nostris serviceis inde debit is et consuetis. In cuius rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste me ipso apud Ebor. vice-simo die Novembris, anno regni nostri sexto decimo.—Burton.

* The permission of Richard II. enabling a citizen of York to appropriate certain property to the fabric. The king was at that time in the city, and the Chapter beg this favor at his hands. Almost every royal visit to York is marked by some similar grant. The document is dated on the 20th of November, 1392, and the original is still in the possession of the Dean and Chapter.

XLI.—DE ADVENTU REGIS HENRICI AD ECCLESIAM EBOR.† (Reg. Scrope. 8, b.)

Memorandum, quod 19 Aug. 1403. Ricardus permissione Divina Ebor. Archiepiscopus, Angliae primas, et Apostolicae sedis

* A document inserted in the book of Statutes in a hand of the earlier part of the fifteenth century. It enumerates the burdens which fell upon the treasurer.

† A document which records an unnoticed visit of Henry IV. to York.

legatus, in presentia illustrissimi in Christo principis et domini, domini Henrici Dei gratia regis Angliae et Franciae, in ecclesia sua Cathedrali et metropolitica Ebor., magnam missam ad summum altare ejusdem Ecclesiae solempniter celebravit; in qua quidem missa, hora consueta, dictus illustrissimus princeps obtulit in auro ad summam, 6s. 8d., ad manus ejusdem patris, quam summam idem pater, ut jure suo et tanquam sibi debitam de facto recepit; quam summam tum quidam vicarius dictie Ecclesiae per ipsum patrem super altare dimissam tenebat, et domino Thomae Longlay,* Decano ejusdem Ecclesiae, tradidit; et

There is but little in it of importance, as it merely refers to a question of privilege. Archbishop Scrope was now, probably, the king's host; two years after this his mutilated corpse was laid among his ancestors in the presbytery at York.

Henry IV. had but little connexion with the city of York. In Archbishop Bowet's register, however, there is a document which must have had reference to his interment. That prelate was one of the king's executors, and on that account the subjoined form is inserted among his official acts. It has been already printed by Mr. Bloxam in his Monumental Architecture, page 59, from the "Liber Regalis" at Westminster, but some of my readers will thank me for inserting it here.

Cum rex inunctus migravit ab hac luce, primo a suis cubiculariis corpus ejusdem aqua calida sive tepida lavari debet, deinde balsamo et aromatibus unguetur per totum, et postea in panno lineo cerato involvetur, ita tamen quod facies et barba illius tantum pateant. Et circa manus et digitos ipsius dictus pannus ceratus ita erit dispositus, ut quilibet digitus cum pollice utrinque manus singillatim insuatur per se, ac si manus ejus cirothecis lineis essent operae. De cerebro tamen et visceribus caveant cubicularii predicti. Deinde corpus induetur tunica usque ad talos longa, et desuper pallio regali adornabitur. Barba vero ipsius decenter componetur super pectus illius, et postmodum caput cum facie ipsius sudario cerico cooperietur: ac demum corona regia aut diadema capitij ejus apponetur. Postea induentur manus cirothecis cum aurofragis ornatis. In medio degito dextra manus imponetur annulus aureus aut deauratus, et in dextra manu sua ponetur pila rotunda deaurata, in qua virga deaurata erit fixa a manu ipsius usque ad pectus pretensa, in cuius virge summitate erit signum crucis, quod super pectus ejusdem principis honeste debet collocari. In sinistra vero manu ceptrum aureum habebit usque ad aurem sinistram decenter pretensem: ac, postremo, tibiæ et pedes ipsius caligis cericis et sandaliis induantur. Tali vero modo dictus princeps adornatus, cum regni sui pontificibus et magnatibus ad locum, quem pro sua sepultura elegerit, cum omni reverencie deferetur, et cum exequiis regalibus honestissimæ tradetur sepultura.

* An ecclesiastic of the greatest ability and distinction. His services to the state were very numerous. After the death of Archbishop Scrope the canons elected him in that prelate's room, but their choice was never confirmed. Soon after this he was made Bishop of Durham, and before his death he obtained a seat in the sacred college. In 1436 he made his will, by which he left to the church of York "unum vestimentum de baudekyn albo, cum toto apparatu, videlicet cum una casula, duabus tuniculis, tribus capis, dumbus stolis, tribus manipulis, tribus albis et tribus amittis unius sectæ, octo capis de baudekyn simplice albo habente orfrays de satyn rubeo operato cum arboribus et avibus auri de cipro." To the Archbishop a silver cup and Augustine de Civitate Dei. He sleeps in the Galilee at Durham, under a stately tomb.

subsequenter, missa finita, ad monitionem dicti patris idem Decanus prefatam summam, statim ante recessum ipsius patris a reverstario ejusdem Ecclesiæ, in auro, ut offerebatur, de mandato dicti patris, magistro Ricardo Conyngston,* ipsius patris cancellario, ratione oblationis habitam, nomine dicti patris realiter restitui fecit; quam summam idem magister Ricardus eidem patri effectualiter restituit et liberavit.

XLII.—TRES LITERÆ DE RICARDO SCROPE ARCHIEPISCOPO EBOR.† [Act. Cap. 1410—29, fol. 43.]

DILECTIS IN CHRISTO FILIIS ET FRATRIBUS PRESIDENTI ET CAPITULO ECCLESIE EBOR. AMICIS NOSTRIS CARISSIMIS.

In Christo filii, fratres, et amici carissimi! Quia excellentissimus in Christo princeps, dominus noster rex, juste et religiose * Canon of York and a great pluralist. He died in 1413, desiring in his will to be interred at Southwell.

† Three documents of great interest and value relating to Archbishop Scrope. The legalized murder of that prelate took place in the year 1405, in spite of the remonstrances of the Chief Justice and the entreaties of the friends of law and equity. The consequences were hardly expected by the king. The popular love and regard for the family of Scrope, and for the Archbishop in particular, manifested themselves in the most remarkable way. The English people have always resented any great indignity that has been shewn to their prelates. Becket by his death shook the throne of England to its foundations, and won for himself a place in the calendar: Laud, too, who somewhat resembled Becket in spirit, by his magnanimity at his end, redeemed his fame, and cast into the shade the haughty indiscretion which had brought him to the scaffold. So it was with Scrope. He was a man, if we can at this day properly estimate his character, of no great vigour of mind or judgment, but these defects were forgotten when men were influenced by the fascination of his manner, or were won over by the kindlyliness of his heart.

His violent end evoked the sympathy of the people of the North to an extraordinary degree. His faults were forgotten in his sufferings, and he became the idol of the populace. His name, indeed, was never inserted in the calendar, but by the crowds who flocked to the stately minster at York he was worshipped as a saint. There, in the chapel of St. Stephen, near the remains of his illustrious ancestor, his mutilated remains were laid. Before that simple monument which commemorated him thousands knelt in silent adoration, and prayed for their martyred Archbishop. The offerings which they made were devoted to the fabric, and thus, even in his death, the ill-fated prelate contributed to the upraising of that glorious edifice which he had never neglected during his life.

It was not to be expected that such demonstrations of popular feeling should escape the notice of the sovereign and his officers. The view which they took of the matter is embodied in these letters, which are now, for the first time, printed. The Archbishop of Canterbury who remonstrated with the Chapter was Arundell, who had filled St. Peter's chair at York before Scrope was raised to it. Longley signs the document in his official character as Chancellor. He was also Dean of the body which he was addressing, and thus he could speak to them with even greater effect. The incident must have placed him in rather an awkward position, but he was far too clever a politician to adopt the views of his Chapter, or to oppose, in any way, the feelings and the tactics of his royal master.

The orders issued in the following letters, were, in all probability, attended to, as they could not, evidently, be trifled with. They could not, however, allay the feeling that had been aroused. Offerings and prayers were still made at the tomb of the Archbishop, and when the Reformation swept away both shrine and altar, the treasures of St. Stephen's chapel held a conspicuous place among the magnificent furniture of the church of York.

† Thomas de Garton was sub-treasurer from 1404 to 1418. He was also parson at the altar of St. Thomas the Martyr. By his will, dated in 1419, he left 10*l.* towards the ornaments of the high altar which was to be constructed anew.

‡ Robert Feriby was sub-chanter of the vicars. Whilst he presided over the Beddern the vicars came into violent collision with the Chapter, and Feriby was deprived of his office. After a violent altercation the vicars were compelled to submit, and were restored to their places.

* The last indulgence on behalf of the fabric that has occurred to me, and as it is drawn up in a somewhat original form, I give it entire. There was at this time not so much need of these documents as there had been. The more costly portions of the minster had been completed, and the many offerings that were made at the tomb of Archbishop Scrope, supplied the Chapter of York with large sums of money. The Capitular body also began to make large grants out of their own funds to complete the decorations of the Cathedral.

XLIV.—ORDINATIONES QUÆDAM DE CEMENTARIIS ET DE
QUARTA COLUMNÆ.* (Acta, Cap. 1410—29, xxv., b.)

Acta in Capitulo xxix die mensis Maii anno Domini m° cccc<sup>mo</sup> viij, coram venerabilibus viris magistro J. de Neuton, Thoma Walleworth, et Willelmu Waltham.

* On the whole, this is the most remarkable document connected with the history of the fabric that has been discovered. Mr. Browne had not seen it when he compiled his account of the minister, against which it militates in no small degree. It was laid before Professor Willis by Mr. Canon Harcourt, and that acute and accomplished master of architectural lore draws some conclusions from it in his description of the Cathedral, which appear to me to be irresistible.

Its principal value is, that if all other evidence were wanting, it settles the date of the completion of the stone-work of the choir. I shall quote the Professor's own words: "As the fourth pier is mentioned, three others must have been already completed, and as the eastern ones would probably be first operated upon as nearest to the choir, and as the position of the workshop is in the north transept, it may be concluded that the pier in question is the north-west pier. However, the principal point to the purpose is, that according to the argument I have

Item ordinatum est quod non fiat mutacio in forma alicujus operis in fabrica sine consensu expresso Capituli.

Item ordinatum est quod serventur statuta Ecclesiae quantum ad latomos, et declarentur dubia, quum videbitur expedire, per Capitulum.

Item quod ordinetur supervisor qui continue sit presens in logio, quantum poterit, et notet defectus exeuncium et ingrediencium, et ad excitandum diligenciam latomorum: et ordinatum est per Capitulum quod dominus Robertus Appilton, vicarius, sit supervisor latomorum.

Item quod negligencie puniantur in diminuione vadiorum et qui incorrigibiles expellantur. Item quod nullus admittatur in logio ad operandum nisi de consensu canonicorum, si præsentes fuerint, et magistri operis. Item quod magister latamus et gardiani et majores latomi prestant juramentum corporale de fidelitate et diligencia, et quod, si concreverint aliquas consignationes seu conspiracionem inter latamos, fideliter revelent dominis de Capitulo. Item ordinatum est quod omnis latomus juret corporaliter de servando fideliter statuta concernentia latomos. Item communicandum est cum magistro latomorum super impericia latomorum. Item quod ordinetur de libris existentibus in manibus domini cancellarii. (Dicit dominus precentor quod cancellarius habet unum portiphorium magnum non notatum concernens dignitatem cancellarii.)

Ordinacio, xv Novembris, 1409.

In primis ordinatur quod dominus Thomas de Haxey sit employed above, the mason-work of the choir must have been completed before the date of this document (namely, 1409), and long enough before to give time for the casing of the other three piers." I have already said that, in all probability, the western part of the choir was completed before the year 1405, and this date seems to be correct.

The work which was entrusted to Haxey was merely the re-casing of the easternmost face of the north-west pier. It was of Norman masonry, and had been erected by Archbishop Thomas. The work of that prelate was now concealed with masonry in the perpendicular style, to give as much uniformity as was possible to the whole structure. The coynes, also, on the outside of the tower, were removed or squared, and the wall at the corners of the tower was carried up smooth and plain.

The document contains some other provisions of importance, especially with reference to the masons. The whole is written in a very bad and unequal hand.

supervisor operis <sup>iiij<sup>ta</sup></sup> columpnæ. Item quod oblaciones provenientes et proventuræ ad sepulcrum Ricardi ultimi Archiepiscopi convertantur ad usus operis quartæ columpnæ. Item omnia donata et legata ad fabricam ejusdem quartæ columpnæ convertantur ad usum columpnæ predictæ. Item logium pro eementariis construendum pro columpna hujusmodi sit inter consistorium et ostium domus capitularis. Item quod in eodem logio sint, ad minus, latomi duodecim. Item ordinatum est quod in antiquo logio sint xx, ad minus, latomi. Item provisio lapidum est concessa domino Thomæ Haxey de consensu ejusdem. Item provideatur de calce carianda ad magnam quantitatem, ad minus, videlicet ij vel <sup>iiij</sup> kylnes. Item provideatur de sabulo in aqua Use cum carecta et equis et navicula, et, si fieri possit, cum navicula Sancti Leonardi ad quantitatem magnam. Item ordinatum est quod le coynes in angulis campanilis ad extra subducantur et pro plano modo ascendat murus in angulis campanilis. Item ascensus graduum de Ecclesia ad campanile fiat ex parte boriali vel alæ ad ordinacionem domini Thomæ Haxey, magistri Alani,* dominorum T. Garton et Ricardi Blakburn. Item quod dominus Thomas de Garton fieri transmittat absque mora sperres et meremium a Cawod ad fabricam. Memorandum ad communicandum cum justiciariis pro furcis de novo construendis et de loco. Item de concordando cum procuratore domini R. Crull pro domibus in le Tange situatis et ad fabricam cimiterii sanctæ Margarete applicandis. Item capiantur gistes et sparres in Langwath pro cimiterio S. Margaretae. Item fiat ibi pandoxatria in cimiterio predicto.

Ordinacio, 9 Apr., 1412.

Concessum est per Capitulum quod dominus thes. habeat lomptances ad murum lapideum suum construendum infra clausuram. Item quod Heynton, monachus, habeat xx carectas lapidum, exceptis pavingstones, pendantes, ascheleres et flagges. Item ordinatum est, de consensu Capituli, quod quia dominus Thomas Haxe agit in negociis Ecclesie et Capituli Ebor. quod residencia sua sibi allocetur tanquam personaliter presens fuisset. Item consensimus quod capella de Schulpton dedicetur.

* Alan de Newark, an officer in the Court of York, and Archdeacon of Durham. His coadjutors are well known.

XLV.—LITTERA REQUISITORIA CUM CREDENCIA IN FINE.*
(Reg. Alex. Neville ii. 10, b.)

Reverende domine et confrater merito honorande! Pro vestra benigna, grata et matura communicacione cum domino Ricardo de B. (luckburn), camerario nostro, habita, consiliisque et auxiliis eidem prudentissime prestitis, vestrae fraternitati quas possumus refferimus graciarum acciones; sinceriter supplicantes quatinus opportunitate captata laborare velitis, si et quatenus vobis videbitur expedire et decere, ut ad finem honestum deducatur negocium supratactum. Insuper scire velit vestra reverencia quod certi lathomi seu cementarii nephandissimo invidiae spiritu concitati in mortem et ultimam destrucionem magistri Willelmi Colchester, nobis et fabricæ Ecclesiæ nostræ per metuendissimum dominum nostrum regem pro regimine ejusdem fabricæ per literas patentes ejusdem domini regis assignati, et in proteccione ejusdem specialiter recepti, nequier conspirantes, dictum Willelum per insidias aggressi, enormiter vulneraverunt; alium etiam eidem assistentem trucidarunt, adeo quod de ejus vita verisimiliter desperatur. Quapropter attentissime supplicamus quatinus predictorum maliciam prefato domino nostro regi ac aliis, quibus et quando expedire videbitur, clarius intimetis, et si forsan aliqui veritatis et sanctæ Ecclesiæ emuli, seu minus sinistre informati predictis malefactoribus vel eorum complicibus favere presumpserint, eisdem facto et verbo resistere velit vestra reverencia fraternalis, in quo merito residet omnis nostra confidencia singularis, latori presencium in hiis fidem credulam adhibentes, Vestri utriusque hominis incrementum semper regat et dirigat nostri clemencia Redemptoris! Scripta, etc.

* A curious letter, which has found its way into the register of Archbishop Alexander Neville, in which many documents of a like nature have been inserted. It is addressed by the Chapter to some unknown persons. We may assume, however, that it was written to the Dean, John Prophete, whose avocations as keeper of the privy seal, would necessarily oblige him to spend the greater part of his time at Court. It may, perhaps, have been sent to Thomas Haxey, who was frequently in London.

The Chapter mention an assault which had been made upon William Colchester, the master-mason, and one of his party, by some of his discontented brethren. The exact date of Colchester's appointment is not known, but we find him presiding over the masons between the years 1415 and 1419. He had been selected for that office by the king, in all probability over the heads of the senior masons. The master-mason had generally, if not always, been selected from the staff of the fabric, and the masons, indignant at this encroachment upon their privileges, had fallen upon their new master and had grievously maltreated him. The Chapter desire their representative to acquaint the king with the circumstances of the case.

XLVI.—CAPITULUM SCRIBIT DOMINO H. ARCHIEPISCOPO
EBOR.* (Domesday Book, 127, a.)

Reverendissime pater et domine ! Premissis omni reverencia et honore, Decanus et Capitulum Ecclesiæ vestræ Ebor., attentes onera gravia vestræ paternitatis humeris incumbencia, prependentes, insuper, necessitudinem inevitabilem et sumptuositatem quasi importabilem fabricæ Ecclesiæ vestræ predictæ, considerantes eciam quam grato animo in vestræ promocionis exordio in magnum relevamen fabricæ predictæ arborcs et mercem in bono numero contulisti, sperantesque indubie dictam fabricam vestris temporibus non solum prosperari, sed, gratia Divina favente et vestri, feliciter ac celeriter consummari, consciunt quod obligaciones super et de summa eel. librarum certis personis amicis magistri Roberti Halom,† nunc episcopi Sarum., mutuata confectæ, vestræ paternitati realiter liberentur : ita tamen quod actus iste non trahatur in consequenciam, consuetudinem, seu exemplum, qui ex vestra liberalitate duntaxat procedit, quodque Decanus et Capitulum predicti contra omnes hac occasione ipsos inquietare seu vexare presumentes per vestram paternitatem actualiter defendantur. Scripta Ebor. xx° die mensis Augsti.

* An undated letter, which occurs, among other important documents, in the Domesday book of the Chapter. It was probably written between 1414 and 1418. We learn from it that Archbishop Bowet had made a present of wood to the Chapter soon after his accession to the see. More is now required, and the authorities of the minster do not scruple to apply to their diocesan for a farther donation. In the fabric rolls for 1418 and 1419 donations of wood from the Archbishop are recorded, and they, perhaps, were evoked by this letter from the Chapter. A new library was now being built, and there were other works connected with the fabric upon which the carpenters were employed.

† Robert Hallam, the celebrated statesman, became prebendary of Osbaldwick in 1400. In 1407 he was promoted to the see of Salisbury, which he held till the autumn of 1417. He died at Constance whilst he was attending the Council as one of the representatives of the English Court. He was interred with great state in the Cathedral in that place, and a magnificent brass was placed over his remains, which is still in existence. It is engraved and described in the Archæologia, xxx., 430-7. It appears that Hallam, before his consecration, had induced some of his friends to lend the sum of 250*l.* to the Chapter of York.

XLVII.—SOME ACCOUNT OF THOMAS HAXEY, TREASURER OF YORK.*

THOMAS HAXEY, an ecclesiastic who is still remembered in York for his piety and munificence, although there is little known about him.<sup>1</sup>

In 1384 he became rector of Pulham, in Norfolk, which he exchanged, in the same year, for the living of St. Nicholas, Cole Abbey, in the diocese of London.<sup>2</sup> On 31 Jan., 1385-6, the king presented him to the rectory of Toppsfield, in the same diocese. This he held for six months,<sup>3</sup> and on 9 Aug., 1387, he was pres<sup>d</sup> by John Lord Roos to the rectory of Denge, which he resigned in May, 1388.<sup>4</sup> On 23 Aug., 1386, he became rector of Crawley, Bucks.<sup>5</sup> On 31 Jan., 1389-90, he was collated to the stall at Tarvin, at Lichfield, which he held till he died.<sup>6</sup> On Oct. 2, 1390, he was inducted to the church of St. Andrew, at Histon, in the diocese of Ely, at the pres<sup>n</sup> of Sir Wm. Thorp, etc.<sup>7</sup> On Nov. 3, in the same year, he was pres<sup>d</sup> to the rectory of Great Linford, Bucks, which he resigned in 1391.<sup>8</sup> In 1395 (23 Aug.), he was coll<sup>d</sup> to the stall of Scamlesby, at Lincoln,<sup>9</sup> which he gave up when he became preb<sup>y</sup> of Farrendon cum Balderston, in the same church on 21 Nov., 1402. This stall he filled till he died.<sup>10</sup> He was also rector of Brington, Northants.<sup>11</sup>

In the diocese of Durham, Haxey held a stall at Howden.<sup>12</sup> On 23 Oct., 1423, Cardinal Langley empowered him, together with John Notyngham, treasurer, and Wm. Cawod, canon res<sup>y</sup> of York, Wm. Dalton, prior S. M. Ebor. and Stephen Percy, parson in Eccl. Ebor., to visit St. Nicholas' hospital, in York.<sup>13</sup> When Haxey died, in 1424-6, he was master of Lasenby hospital, near Northallerton.<sup>14</sup>

Haxey's first connection with the diocese of York appears to have been his institution to the rectory of Laxton, Notts, at the

* Some apology is due for the insertion of this memoir of Haxey. It is taken from the Fasti Eboracenses, which, with God's blessing, I trust to be able to complete before long. Haxey was so great a benefactor to the fabric that this notice of him may, perhaps, not be deemed out of place in this volume.

pres<sup>n</sup> of Sir Reginald de Everingham, on May 17, 1393. This living he resigned in Jan., 1407-8. In 1404-5, he became prebendary of Barnby, at York. He was also a canon residentiary. On Dec. 18, 1405, the see being then vacant, the Dean and Chapter of York admitted him to the stall of Rampton, at Southwell, at the presentation of the king. This he gave up in 1418. In 1415 he was made an executor, and had a legacy of 20*l.* in the futile will of Henry Lord Scrope, of Masham,<sup>15</sup> and three years after this he took an active part in requiring reparation at the hands of another member of the same noble house, for an outrage which had been committed in York minster.<sup>16</sup> In 1418 he became treasurer of York, giving up his stall of Barnby. On Oct. 1, 1419, he was inducted to the prebend of Monkton, at Ripon, exchanging for it, with John Brommesgrave, his prebend of Bedminster, at Salisbury, and this, on Nov. 16, 1423, he again exchanged with Thos. Bryan, for the stall of St. Catharine, at Beverley. Twice, on 6 Nov. 1423, and on the 20th of March following, did the Dean and Chapter of York make him keeper of the spiritualities during the vacancy of the see.

During his residence at York, Haxey took an especial interest in the works of the Minster, indeed he was by far the most active member of the Capitular body. In 1409 he was desired to superintend the alteration of the fourth pier of the lantern tower. In 1418 he gave 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to cover the new library with lead, and on that account his arms, or, three buckles in fess, sable,<sup>17</sup> were placed in the windows of that room.<sup>18</sup> The same bearing occurs on one of the key-stones of the vaulting in the north aisle of the choir. Haxey was also the donor of certain plate to the Minster, as will be seen in the Inventory. We have seen that Haxey was a man of more than ordinary munificence and administrative talent. He was also distinguished for his independence of character, and dared to speak what he thought when freedom of speech or opinion was menaced by our kings. In the parliament of 1397 he was one of the representatives of the clergy in the Commons, and in that capacity suggested the propriety of a reform in the king's household, which was at that time more than ordinarily extravagant. The indignant monarch caused Haxey to be condemned to die as a traitor by an ex post facto law! Then came the bishops, "Et prieront a roy humblement, q' lui pleroit de sa grace avoir pity & mercie del dit Thomas, et luy ottroier & donir sa vie."<sup>19</sup> Their petition was successful, and Haxey's life was spared. We cannot but admire his firmness, for he was a man

Verba animi proferre et vitam impendere vero."<sup>20</sup>

Haxey's will, which is undated, was proved at York on the 23rd of Jan., 1424-5. He desires to be buried in York Minster, "Ubi sepulcrum<sup>21</sup> meum ordinatum est." He remembers the poor at Laxton, Tarvin, Bedminster, Rampton, Melton Roos, Seamelby, Brington, Bythern and Weston, Crawley and Howden. To his poor tenants in the Isle of Axholme, and, specially, in the parish of Haxey,<sup>22</sup> he gives ten marks. Five marks are left to the fabric of Southwell minster to repair the bells, the belfrey and the church, if he die within a year. To the use of Lincoln Cathedral he gives a precious chalice, which is in the treasury at Southwell, with a paten, full gilt, and bearing upon the foot the five joys of the Blessed Virgin. To Salisbury Cathedral he leaves a precious cross, which is also at Southwell, of silver gilt, with Mary and John.<sup>23</sup> To John Bekyngham, otherwise called John of the Botery, he gives his lands and tenements in Beckingham and Rampton, which are held of the Duke of Lancaster. To Thos. Haythorp, Esq., John Bekyngham, his cousin, and Thos. Takell, mason, his nephew, he leaves ten marks each. To the fabrie of York Minster, 100s. To the table<sup>24</sup> (as it is called) of the high altar there, he gives 20 silver dishes and 20*l.* To the Abbot and Convent of Selby 20 marks. To the Prioress and Convent of Brodholme, 10*l.* To repair the tower of Rampton church, 10*l.*, and for the repairs of the church of Howden, and the chapel of Lasenby, two sums of 10*l.* are bequeathed.

Haxey is said to have died on Jan. 21,<sup>25</sup> 1424-5. He took good care that his name should be remembered. At Southwell he was the founder of a chantry, which he endowed with a <sup>20</sup> Juvenal Sat., iv., 91. <sup>21</sup> I have not translated this, as I have some doubts as to the meaning of "sepulcrum." It sometimes signifies a monument, at other times, simply a place of interment. <sup>22</sup> This bequest, probably, gives us the testator's birth-place. Haxby would give him a very different patria.

<sup>23</sup> The usual accompaniments of the crucifix. A tradesman in Durham has, at the present time, in his possession a beautiful cross of this description, complete. It is of bronze, and has been rich with enamel. The story goes that it came from York.

burgage in that town, and lands at Beckingham, Bole, Batheley, and Normanton.<sup>26</sup> At York, also, his executors established a chantry and a yearly obit to commemorate him at the altar of St. Thomas of Canterbury. This was munificently endowed with an annual rent charge of 18 marks, to be paid by the Lord Mayor and the citizens of York. At the Reformation, the City begged to be released from this payment, and to convert it, according to the custom of the day, to other purposes.<sup>27</sup>

Chantry and altar are now gone, but in the north aisle of the nave in York Minster is still a monument called "Haxby's tomb." It lies north and south, and is placed against the eastermost pillar in that aisle. It formerly lay east and west,<sup>28</sup> but was removed to its present position in 1735.<sup>29</sup> It represents, to use Torre's words, "the effigies of a man in his winding-sheet, and raised in solid white stone, inclosed on both sides and at the head with iron grates about a yard high, which support an altar-stone of black marble about 3 yards long."<sup>30</sup> Willis, in his description, speaks of Haxey's tomb as having "at top his skeleton, and under it his effigies;"<sup>31</sup> but in this he appears to be incorrect. Our ancestors were fond of depicting the form of a skeleton. The general notion about such memorials, and it obtains in this case, is that rents and offerings were paid upon the stone, the very sight of which was calculated to inspire a proper feeling of devotion, and to drive away deceit and fraud. It is probable enough that a treasurer would put up such a memorial, and therefore the tradition that Haxey erected it, is, perhaps, correct. It is not, however, his tomb, although even in Torre's time it was "commonly mistaken" for it. Haxey's bones were laid a little to the south of it under "a blue marble about 5 yards long, which has been escocheoned at corners, and on a plate at the head bears the inscription"<sup>32</sup> recorded by Drake. Drake and Mr. Poole engrave the skeleton-tomb which is placed, appropriately enough, against the fourth pillar of the lantern, the renovation of which was placed under Haxey's charge in 1409.

Quare vobis firmiter injungendo mandamus quatenus moneatis had taken place in the county of York, and in no part of England had the struggle excited greater interest. We need not be surprised, therefore, when we read of the honours that were paid to the weak but gentle-minded chief of the house of Lancaster after his decease. Many attempts were made to procure the insertion of his name in the catalogue of the saints, but without success; his merits were not deemed worthy of so high an honour, and he was merely beatified.

There were few towns of any consequence in England in which an image of the king was not erected in the principal church. There was one at Ripon and another at Durham. At York the deceased king received peculiar honours. The Dean, Richard Andrew, had been his private secretary, and the minster, therefore, was not long without some memorial of his master. In the screen, which owed its origin to Andrew, there was a statue of Henry in the last niche, and it is probable enough that this was the image to which the Archbishop refers. Within the memory of man that niche was vacant, and it is quite possible that the figure of the king might have been taken out of it in obedience to the order which is now printed. In 1515 a sum of money was paid by the Chapter for painting an image of King Henry. Did this occupy the niche in the screen? If it did, it was removed at the dissolution, when altars and effigies were destroyed. In the great inventory of the church furniture we find several things recorded which belonged to an altar dedicated to Henry VI.

I have, in another place, given some notices of the king in connection with his sojourn in Craven in the household of the Pudsay's of Bolton. An old service-book, which belonged to that ancient house, contains several prayers and a long hymn to the beatified monarch. A roll of prayers, in a contemporary hand, and addressed to the same personage, is now in my possession. I trust, at some future time, to be able to give an account of Henry's wanderings in the North of England, and of the respect which was there paid to him.

Archbishop Booth issued this order, as we may suppose, in obedience to the wishes of Edward IV. In the great struggle which was now over, that prelate had changed sides more than once, and it is not probable, therefore, that this expression of his opinion would have much weight either with the Chapter of York or with the crowds of Lancastrians who visited the minster.

L.—RECEPCIO REGIS RICARDI TERCII APUD EBOR. CUM REGINA ET PRINCIPE; ET IBIDEM PRINCEPS FUIT CREATUS.*
(Ex libro penes Dec. et Cap. Ebor. X. 70, a.)

Memorandum quod xxix die mensis Augusti, scilicet, in festo decollacionis S. Johannis Baptistae anno Domini m.cccc.

* An invaluable document, giving an account of a visit made to the city of York by Richard III. Feeling, as well as policy, attached that monarch to the county of York, and one of his earliest acts after he ascended the throne, was to make a royal progress into the North. It is much to be regretted that the account of this progress is so brief, but we can well imagine what the scene would be when we read the account of the reception which was given by the city of York to the daughter of Henry VII., when she was on her way to join her husband-elect in Scotland. Few pictures have ever been so vividly painted, and none leave a more striking impression.

So much has been said about this visit by my friend, Mr. Davies, in his very useful and excellent work, Extracts from the Municipal Records of the City of York, that I need not dwell upon the subject here. I may, perhaps, be excused for placing before my readers the account which the chronicler Hall gives of the visit. It is an excellent commentary upon the document that I now give:—

“He toke his journey toward the countie of York, where the people,abusyng his lawfull favoure (as he bothe favoured and trusted them in his hart), had of late presumed to attempte divers routes and riottes contrarie to his lawes and enfryngyng of his peace, and uppon hope of his mayntenaunce, were so elated that no lord, were he never of so great power, could either pacifie or rule them tyll the kyng hymselfe came personally thether to set a concorde and an unitie in that countree, and to bridell and rule the rude and rusticall and blusteryng bolde people of that regiou, and so he by long journeyng came to the citie of Yorke, where the citezens receyved hym with great pompe and triumphe, accordyng to ye qualitie of their education and quantitie of their substancialle and habilitie, and made divers daies playes and pageantes in token of joy and solace. Wherefore kyng Richard iugnifiid and applaudid of the northe nacion, & also to shewe hymselfe apparantlie before them in habyt royal with sceptre in hande and diademe on his hed, made proclamation that all personnes should resorte to

MITRÆ. In primis una mitra bona ex dono domini Walteri

* I need not, I am sure, apologize for placing before my readers, in a work of this nature, the valuable inventory which is now given. It has been already printed in the Monasticon, but a careful examination of the original, which is still preserved among the muniments of the Dean and Chapter of York, has enabled me to correct many blunders and omissions in that laborious work.

Few inventories of this description are to be met with, and too great a value cannot be set upon them. They give us a very vivid picture of the great wealth of our churches, and of the height to which the goldsmith and the embroiderer had carried their respective arts. Nor must we forget the piety of the donors which is duly recorded. Each gift, we may believe, had its peculiar interest, and when it was unfolded or taken out of its case to be gazed at and admired, we can well imagine how the exhibitor would descant upon its beauties and enumerate the good deeds of each benefactor to the treasury. Each and all of these splendid ornaments are now gone, and of the splendid church-furniture of the middle ages there are now but few remnants.

I must refer my readers, especially, to two other magnificent inventories of the same character, detailing the treasures which formerly adorned the churches of Lincoln and St. Paul's. They are to be found in the History of St. Paul's and in the Monasticon.

The York inventory was compiled soon after the year 1500. In the year 1510 it was revised by Robert Langton, the then treasurer, who has made many additions to it in his own hand. Above the title he has written, "Computus in frascriptorum habitus xij Januarii, 1510, per me Robertum Langton, thesaurarium." A thin quarto book is entirely devoted to it.

Robert Langton became treasurer of York in 1509, and prebendary of Weighton in 1514. In 1511 the Dean and Chapter allowed him to absent himself from York during his residence, on account of ill health, that he might visit the limina Apostolorum.

Langton was also a canon at Lincoln, Southwell, and Salisbury, and Archdeacon of Dorset. He was nephew to Thomas Langton, Bishop of Winchester, and was born at Appleby, in Westmorland. He was a member of Queen's * Walter Giffard, thirty-sixth Archbishop of York, died in 1279.

† Walter Grey, a most munificent benefactor to the Church of York, died in 1255.

‡ Archbishop Thoresby died in 1373. In his will he makes no bequest to the Church of York. During his life he made many splendid donations to the fabric.

|| The prince-like Bishop of Durham, who died in 1406, the supporter of every public work in the North of England. Longley, Dean of York, and several of the canons, were among his executors, and had the choice, I doubt not, of his treasures. He gave, by will, to the minster, "Unum vestimentum de velveto rubeo, brodatum de coronis et stellis auri, continens j casulam, iij tunicas cum vj stolis iij manipulis et iij amittis cum paruris, et iij zonis pertinentibus, et cum frontali et subfrontali habentibus ymaginem crucifixi, B. M. et S. Johannis, et panno pro lectrino, cum v capis habentibus orfreis auri cum ymaginibus stantibus in tabernaculis, et omnes de eadem secta: item unam casam pro corporali operatam cum salutacione B. V. ex una parte, et cum coronacione ejusdem ex altera: item duas curtinas de tartarino rubeo cum coronis et stellis aureis superpositis, et j tualiam cum frontali stricto de eodem opere." The advent of this precious bequest is duly recorded on the contemporary roll of the chamberlain.

§ Sir Robert Clifton was not really the donor of this precious mitre. It was bequeathed to the minster, in 1464, by his brother-in-law, Archbishop William Booth, who says of it, "Item do et lego Ecclesiae Cathedrali Eboraceusi, sponsa mea, unam mitram cum baculo pastorali." The mitre, it appears, reached York as the gift of Sir Robt. Clifton, but we have no record whatever of the arrival of the pastoral staff. The testamentary arrangements of both of the Booths were grievously neglected by their executors.

cum vj foliis et le treyfoyles, cum ij pendulis et iiiij le perls in sex foliis et aliis lapidibus.

BACULUS PASTORALIS. Unus baculus pastoralis argenteus et deauratus, ex dono domini Thomæ Arundall,* nuper Eboracensis Archiepiscopi.

ANNULI.—Unus magnus annulus pontificalis cum lapide vocato emered in medio, et in circumferenciis sunt quatuor rubuae, iiiij magnæ margaritæ, ex dono domini Willelmi Grenfeld,† quondam Eboracensis Archiepiscopi. Unus annulus pontificalis cum uno le perited in medio, et parvis lapidibus preciosis, et le perles in circumferenciis. Unus annulus pontificalis cum magno saphiro et xij le perles, dudum domini Ricardi Scrope Archiepiscopi Ebor., datus Ecclesiæ per viam conscientiæ.‡ Unus annulus aureus cum uno le balace olim domini Walteri Gyfford. Tres annuli pontificales cum saphiris magnis. Duo annuli minores, quorum unus cum lapide saphiro, et alter cum lapide vocato emered. Tres annuli aurei, unus cum lapide vocato emered, et duo alii cum le balace, unus quadratus, alter rotundus. Sex annuli aurei, unus, videlicet, cum imaginibus Adæ et Evaæ, duo habentes lapides vocatos le balaee, unus alias cum saphiro, alter de emered, sextus parvus cum lapide le balayee.

[Unus annulus pro Episcopo puerorum et duo owhys, unus in medio ad modum crucis cum lapidibus in circumferenciis cum alio parvo cum uno lapide in medio vocato turchas. In Langton's hand.]

* Archbishop of York from 1388 to 1397, in which year he was translated to Canterbury. He died in 1414. He made several splendid gifts to the church of York, which are enumerated in this inventory. At his death he was possessed of two mitres valued at 133*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* The vestments of his chapel were worth 460*l.* 1*s.* 7*d.*; the jewels belonging to the same, 455*l.*, and the books, 207*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* The fittings of his oratory and books were priced at 352*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* (Sommer's Canterbury, Appx. 33, 34.)

A gold ring, with a ruby, taken off Archbishop Greenfield's finger, when his tomb was opened, is now preserved in the vestry. The ring of Archbishop Sewal is in the same place.

‡ I wish that the name of the donor of this ring could be discovered. It may have been one of those who took an active part in the arrest and execution of the Archbishop.

† Palestinae is evidently an error for Praenestrinae. Praeneste was a place from which a member of the Sacred College took his title. I find two Cardinals canons of Masham, Andoinus Alberti, who died in 1363, and William de Agrifolio, who died in 1369. Neither of these two, however, if Ciaconius is to be relied upon, was Bishop of Praeneste.

* In this list we have quite a picture of the Archbishop's shrine. Each offering had its history. The ships and the oars were, probably, the presents of some seafaring men who had promised them in some hour of peril. The hands, feet, eyes, etc., were placed there by those who had had those parts of the body affected by some disease, and who owed their cure, as they thought, to the Archbishop. The virgæ, or rods, may have been placed round the tomb, and may have formed a kind of barrier before the rich cloths, so lavishly decorated with ornaments, with which the tomb would be covered. The continental churches, at the present day, present many similar examples of ornamented shrines.

July 22, 1441. Comm. to Nic. Bp. of Dromore to consecrate and dedicate the chapel and chapelyard of St. Michael at Bempton, par. Bridlington.

Mar. 27, 1442. Comm. to John Bp. of Philippolis to consecrate the church of Pidseburton, which has been entirely rebuilt, together with the churchyard, and also to dedicate an altar erected in the south part of the priory church at Pontefract.

May 12, 1444. Comm. to the same prelate to dedicate and consecrate the parish church and churchyard at Monkfriston.

Sep. 4, 1444. Comm. to the same prelate to dedicate and re-consecrate the chapel in honour of St. John the Baptist at Ribstane, par. Hunsingore, which has been built anew. Oct. 30. Comm. to him to consecrate the church or chapel at Paul, which has been rebuilt.

Nov. 8, 1444. Comm. to Mr. Robt. Beverlay, Mr. Robt. Warde, and Mr. Thos. Sprotley, can. of Beverley, to discover a suitable place to erect a new church upon at Wythornse. The old church is hard by the sea, and is in danger of being washed away. The greater part of the parishioners have recommended the chapel of St. Kath., in the middle of the parish, the rest wish for a place called Presthill, near the sea. A similar commission was directed to Mr. Thos. Tanfeld, 8 Dec., 1445. On 1 Dec., 1446, Tanfield writes to the Archbishop from Beverley, to say that he has examined the parishioners, who say, one and all, that Priesthill is the best site for the church. It is far from the sea and convenient for the parishioners, and, besides this, if the church were erected elsewhere, it would be greatly to the detriment of the lord of the manor, Humphrey Duke of Buckingham, and the rector, the abbat and convent of Kirkstall. Priesthill is the best site for the new village of Wythornse, as the sea will swallow up the greater part of the lordship before it reaches this place. It is, therefore, chosen.

Dec. 9, 1445. Comm. to John Bp. of Philippolis to consecrate a moderately sized piece of ground, belonging "ad commendariam de Ossington," near the town of Nottingham, as a burial-ground for the brethren and sisters of the hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, at the instance of Robt. Boothil, the prior. Feb. 6, 1446. Licence to have divine service performed in a chapel in the town of Bradford, in honour of the Holy Trinity and of St. Sith the virgin.

Dec. 3, 1447. Comm. to Thos. Bp. of Dromore to dedicate the church of Dent, built anew, and to reconcile the churchyard, which has been polluted with blood.

Aug. 13, 1450. Licence to the brothers and sisters of the hospital of the Blessed Virgin and St. Martin in York, newly built, to have mass said in the chapel of the said house for a year.

Oct. 31, 1452. Indulgence, lasting for 3 years, "pro capella B. M. in parco de Ireby."

Jan. 24, 1452-3. Comm. to John Bp. of Philippolis to consecrate "capellam gildæ B. M. et S. Martini ad principale altare infra parochiam S. Cuthberti, Ebor. noviter constructam."

Feb. 24, 1452-3. Indulgence, for a year, "ad constructionem collegii B. M. Magd. in le batelfelde juxta Salopiam pro animabus eorum quorum corpora ibi requiescunt."

July 19, 1453. Indulgentia, 40 dierum, pro eccl. conventuali S. Leonardi de Torkeseye, dioc. Lincoln, ruinosa, necnon quia portio corporis beatissimi confessoris Leonardi, pes vide-licet, in dicta ecclesia inter ceteras reliquias contineri prohibetur, inclusa in quadam ymagine ejusdem satis decenter ornata.

Mar. 16, 1453-4. Indulgentia, 40 dierum, pro capella in le Gyll par. Wirkynhton in honore B. M. V.

May 6, 1454. Licentia incolis in le Tripett in par. eccl. sive capella B. V. M. apud Hull ad celebrandum divina in capella ibidem nuper constructa.

Sep. 25, 1454. Commissio Johanni Assavensi Episcopo ad consecrandum altare de novo edificatum in capella ex parte boriali ecclesiae sive prioratus de Syna.

LIII.—DETECTA QUÆDAM IN VISITATIONIBUS ECCL. CATH. EBOR., NECNON ECCLESiarum EIDEM PERTINENCium INFRA PROVINCIAM EBOR.*

MCCCCLXII.—ECCL. CATH. EBOR. Vicarii pausam rectam et debitam in psalmodiis non observant. Item cantant simbolum, non particulatim, sed sub involuero. Licet quilibet vicarius, cum incedere debeat per civitatem, incedere debet in habitu honesto, ad modum presbiterorum, saltu clauso, nec cum sotu-

* I need, I am sure, offer no apology for printing these extracts. They comprise a number of the presentments made at the visitations of the minster and of the churches dependent upon it. So large and so interesting a collection has never yet been made public, and many will thank me for placing before them a class of documents which throw a new light upon the arrangements of our churches; and, generally, upon ecclesiastical history. The presentments are very numerous, and out of them I have selected those which give us some insight into the services and the architecture of the minster and its churches. Others are added as illustrative of the manners of the times. I have not thought it necessary to bring forward any of the cases of immorality with which every class was charged, especially the clergy in the minster. It is a painful subject to dwell upon, and it can serve no good purpose to introduce it here.

As a general rule, I have not added any foot-notes to these presentments. Any curious term that occurs in them I shall endeavour to explain in the Glossary.

Some of the earlier presentments are to be found among the Chapter Acts, and to them I have given references. The rest occur in the Visitation books.

laribus rostratis, vel aliter deformatis, quidam tamen vicarii incedunt in tunicis curtis, duplicatis et consutis, ad modum armigerorum, cum cultellis et bastardis inter tibias pendentibus, per civitatem, in scandalum ordinis atque status. [G. c. 51.]

MCCCLXIV-V.—ALNE. Pluit in choro supra summum altare, et celatura cancelli est rupta et ruinosa. Deficit unum gradale, et aliud est insufficiens. Non est nisi unum antiphonarium. Non est nisi unum psalterium, duntaxat, et est contentum in antiphonario. Deficit unum manuale. Deficiunt capa et ij tuniculæ. Ostium cancelli est fractum. Johannes Belle, capellanus, defert eukaristiam per parochiam ad infirmos absque lumine cerei vel candelæ precedentis. Ostium revestiarii est fractum.

AKUME. Pluit in choro, et sunt ibidem plures defectus: pluit eciam in navi in diversis locis. Fenestrae vitriæ franguntur. Deficit serura eucharistiae. Deficiunt tunicula, dalmatica et una capa. Portiforium est insufficiens. Deficit unum gradale. Deficiunt, — vestimentum dominicale, lucerna pro deferendo lumen ad infirmos, tabula super altare, una phiala. Rector qui deberet invenire stramina ecclesiæ ter in anno, ea subtraxit per biennium. Rector subtraxit luminare circa elevacionem corporis Christi.

SKELETON. Cancellus patitur defectum maximum in cooperatura. Fenestrae vitriæ cancelli franguntur. Calix est fractus. Eucharistia non conservatur honeste nec habet seruram. Crismatorium caret fons. Carent serura. Portiforium est defectivum et disligatum. Omnes libri indigent reparacione et ligatura. Navis patitur defectus complures in cooperatura, et fenestrae ibidem vitriæ franguntur. Cimiterium non clauditur. Willelmus Assheton, rector, non residet nec aliquid boni facit infra parochiam, nec est aliquis capellanus celebrans Divina nec ministrans sacramenta et sacramentalia parochianis. [G. c. 71, b.]

MCCCLXXV.—CATH. EBOR. Ordinale est omnino insufficiens, et libri in notis et tonis discordant. Vicarii in diebus solempnibus nolunt organum cantare in pulpito nisi canonici dictæ Ecclesiæ eis conferant vinum, quod vendicant ex consuetudine. [G. c. 120, b.]

MCCXC.—Omnes ministri Ecclesiæ, pro majori parte, utuntur in Ecclesia et in processione patens et clogges contra honestatem Ecclesiæ et antiquam consuetudinem et ordinacionem Capituli.

MCCCC.—(Circa.)—CATH. EBOR. DETECTA PER VICARIOS. Pars Bibliæ et libri Sermonum, super quibus legend legitur in choro, in partibus suis ubi lectiones leguntur, sunt caduci et defectivi. Pueri, addiscentes, psalteria chori et alios libros Eccl. conculcant et denigrant. Fuit ex antiqua consuetudine Eccl.

Ebor. quod esset unum luminare ad ostium vestibuli, tempore matutinali, pro versibus in choro cantandis, inspiciendis, et recordandis, super librum vocatum standard, viz., in festis duplicibus et novem lectionum. Duo libri, tonarii vocati, sunt valde necessarii pro choro, unus ex parte Decani et alter ex parte thesaurarii, quia librorum hujusmodi defectus in tonizacione psalmodiae inter psallentes in choro frequenter discordantias disseminant inhonestas.

MCCCCVIII.—CATH. EBOR. Ordinatum est quod de cetero vicarii mantellis involuti non sedeant in tabula principali canonorum, sed in alia tabula inter alios. Item quod non ministretur vinum vicariis in prandio nec post, nisi ex speciali mandato domini.*

MCCCCIX.—CATH. EBOR. Sacristæ Eccles. Ebor. sunt nimis negligentes in impediendo tumultus & clamores hominum & puerorum tumultuancium & ludencium in Ecclesia, & presertim, tempore celebracionis missarum. Et non castigant furiosos canes & alios facientes turpitudines & utilitates in Ecclesia predicta. Inferiores ministri Ecclesiae, & alii, ludunt cum pilis & aliis super domum scaccarii & eciam alibi infra clausum. Cantantes ad missam de Beata Virgine non sunt in habitibus: nimis frequenter sc absentant. In vestibulo, tempore celebracionis Divinorum, ministri Ecclesiae & alii tumultum faciunt & clamores importabiles. Porta versus Bedernam est nimis patens subtus candem, & nimis aperta tempore prandii, ac in crepusculo noctis, per quam ingreduntur mulierculæ temporibus supradictis. Sunt alii ingressus preterquam per portas contra securitatem clausi. Difficile est pluribus celebrare propter defectum clericorum.

DETECTA PER VICARIOS. In primis pixis in qua pendet sacra-mentum super altare in Eccles. Cath. Ebor. pendet sinc canopeo, & minus honorifice agitur ipsis publica revocacio diebus Dominis modernis, propter defectum luminis & incensi aliarumque graciarum accionum, ad excitacionem devocationis populi circumstantis tempore illo devote faciendæ sacramento predicto. Luminaria circa magnum altare nimis tarde accenduntur & nimis tempestive in festis duplicibus et ix lectionum extinguuntur. Luminaria non ardent in choro in missis pro anniversariis defunctorum, ut debent. Dictæ Eccles. Ebor. antiqua fuit con-suetudo ut aliquis ministrancium in choro in habitu chori accenderet lumina circa magnum altare. Panni ante magnum altare jacentes non sunt mundati, ut solebant, & egent renovatione et emendacione. Habentes cantarias in Ecclesia non celebrant missas, ut tenentur, secundum ordinaciones ipsarum cantiarum. Quamplures missæ sunt dimissæ non celebratae propter defectum clericorum ministrancium. Personæ non veniunt ad chorum in festis duplicebus & ix lectionum ut deberent. Diaconi & thuribularii non veniunt ad chorum, ut deberent, & tempore quo sunt in choro confabulantur, nec se habent ut deberent. Choristæ non sunt informati, ut deberent, in cantu, nec incedunt morose & honeste, ut deberent, in processionibus. Tam personæ quam vicarii ac alii ministri Ecclesiæ nimis et communiter vagantur in Ecclesia usquequa tempore quo Divina celebrantur in choro. Libri in choro, viz., duo vocati standerdes, ac eciā libri processionales, propter eorum vetustatem, discordanciam, nimiamque paucitatem, sunt nimis defectivi, & varios & plures causantur defectus & discordancias intersallentes in choro. Pars Bibliæ & libri Sermonum super quibus legenda legitur in choro, in partibus suis ubi lecciones leguntur, sunt caduci & defectivi. Infra vestibulum silencium debitum et morosum non observatur, ut deberet, a ministris Ecclesiæ, sed ibidem sunt communiter insolenciae clamorosæ, tempore quo Divina celebrantur in choro, et precipue temporibus illis quibus ebdomarius se preparat ad celebracionem missæ majoris; quæ quidem insolenciae frequenter impediunt & perturbant devocationem celebrantis. Canonici prependati male solvunt stipendia pertinencia ad communam vicariorum, & presertim prebendarius de Thokeryngton. Fuit ex antiqua consuetudine Ecclesiæ quod esset unum luminare ad ostium vestibuli tempore matutinali pro versibus in choro cantandis inspiciendis & recordandis, super librum qui vocatur standard, viz., in festis duplicebus & ix lectionum. Plura vestimenta & ornamenta & jocalia diversarum cantiarum dictæ Ecclesiæ quamplures paciuntur defectus, & forsitan quædam sunt alienata, tam ex defectu custodis quam inquisicionis in hac parte debite faciendæ. Ornamenta pertinencia ad altare annuale sunt debilia & inconveniencia statui & honori presentis Ecclesiæ recolendæ. Secundum statuta & antiquas consuetudines Ecclesiæ ministri ejusdem ad quaecunque personatum, vicariatum, ac cantiarum promociones meritis & eorum habilitatibus intercedentibus preferri deberent & gratuitæ promoveri. Feoda ex laudabili consuetudine succentori vicariorum & aliis ministris Ecclesiæ debita, & solvi consueta, minus, in installacione canonicorum, male ac indebite subtrahuntur. Feodium succentoris vicariorum de scol' cantusvel a precentore Ecclesiæ debitum—minus debite est solutum. Non convenit quod corrcctionibus criminalibus saltem occultis & privatis, alieujus gradus, dictæ Ecclesiæ intersint aliqui nisi in gradu presbiterali constiututi ut occasio scandali penitus evitetur. Duo libri vocati tonarii sunt valde necessarii pro choro, unus ex parte Decani, & alter ex parte thesaurarii, quia librorum hujusmodi defectus in intonizacione psalmodie inter psallentes in choro frequenter discordaneias disseminant in honestas. Quædam cantaria ad altare S. Blasii ab antiquo ordinata, per quam plura incommoda in redditibus suis frequenter contingencia ex indebita gubernacione possessorum ejusdem, adeo ad nichilum est redacta quod resurgere non valeat nisi reverendi domini de Capitulo manus adhibeant adjutrices. Infra Ecclesiam & portas ejusdem & presertim in majoribus & solemnitatibus tocius anni solemnitatibus, fiunt publica mereimonia, non sine domus Dei publica & enormi de honestacione notoria contra evangelicam disciplinam. [E. 6—8.]

Vicarii sunt nimis vagantes in Ecclesia in habitibus suis tempore celebracionis Divinorum. Diversi vicarii sunt nimis garrulantes et confabulantes in choro tempore celebracionis Divini obsequii.

ST. MICHAEL-LE-BELFREY. Deficiunt unum ordinale, unum manuale, una legenda, et unum gradale. Omnes libri ibidem, viz., missalia, antiphonaria, et gradalia sunt valde debiles et confracti in tabulis et foliis, caduci in literis, et valde discordantes in notis, exceptis missali novo, j antiphonario novo et bono, uno gradali novo, et ij bonis psalteriis, uno novo et altero antiquo, quos libros habent ex dono domini Roberti Otteley. Item ij vestimenta sunt valde debilia. Dicunt parochiani ibidem quod, ex consuetudine ecclesiæ, Capitulum Ebor. tenetur pro ministracione Divinorum in ecclesia predicta, in octo festis duplicebus solemnitatibus per annum, videlicet, in festis natalis Domini, Paschæ, Pentecostes, Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, Assumptionis B. V. M., Saneti Michaelis et Omnium Sanctorum, capas et vestimenta ad sumnum altare et in choro pro rectoribus chori, diaconis, et subdiaconis honorifice exhibere, considerato statu ecclesiæ* predictæ: et ipsorum occasione capellanus par. ejusdem dat annuatim clericis de vestibulo ecclesiæ Ebor. viij pannos crismales. Deficiunt ibidem superpellicia, tam pro capellano parochiali quam pro clero ecclesiæ par. ibidem. Non habent parochiani

* This has generally been considered to be the principal church in the city, and the parishioners, at this time, seem to have been fully aware of the fact. It is really sad to read the presents that always come from this church. Little or nothing was done to satisfy the parishioners till the middle of the reign of Henry VIII., when the church was rebuilt.

pixidem pro corpore Christi, nisi unam de cupro et deaurato, ex mutuo aurifabri et absque serura. Crismatorium est absque serura. Non habent parvas cruces ad jacendum super feretra mortuorum, prout moris est civitatis. Thuribulum est valde debile. Crux processionalis est valde debilis, considerato statu ecclesiæ. Juxta vestibulum ejusdem ecclesiæ, videlicet, in domo Johannis Porter, est una latrina summo altari ejusdem ecclesiæ contigua, nociva valde, in tantum quod tempore estivali vix potest aliquis in choro exprecari, propter fetoris abhominacionem ejusdem latrinae. Navis et campanile ecclesiæ predictæ, viz., Berefridi, tam in meremio quam coopertura ejusdem paciunt defectus importabiles, in tantum quod singulis tempestatum, ventorum et pluviarum temporibus, propter incursus aquarum et campanilis commocionem, vix audent parochiani ejusdem ad audiendum Divina inibi exprecari, et quod sufficienter sunt docti ex relacione carpentiarorum et aliorum artificum noticiam habencium, quod campanile patitur notorios defectus in defectum ministrorum Capituli; in tantum quod parochiani minantur quod nisi remedium pro hujusmodi periculo apponatur, necessario oportet ipsos accedere ad alia loca pro Divinis officiis audiendis. Sunt defectus notorii in fenestris, tam in vitro quam ligaminibus ferreis, in singulis fenestris, navis ecclesiæ predictæ. Porticus ecclesiæ parochialis predictæ est nimis debilis et minans ad ruinam. Dicunt parochiani quod habent in eccl. par. unum vestimentum integrum nigrum honestum, cum capa ejusdem sectæ, unum vestimentum integrum de panno baudekyn cum j capa serica de alia secta: iij capas de albo bustian pulverizatas cum rosis: iij calices argenti et deaurati: iiiij corporalia cum casulis honestis, et j velum quadragesimale: quæ quidem ornamenta et calices habent ex devocione et donacione parochianorum ecclesiæ supradictæ, et sunt sub salva custodia parochianorum.

ST. MARTIN IN CONYNGSTRETE. Deficit ibidem ordinale. Dicunt capellani et parochiani quod omnes domus super communi venella, ex parte australi edificatae, habent suos introitus in cimiterium.

ST. ANDREW. Fons baptismalis erat sine cera. Dicunt quod illud tenementum de novo constructum ex parte boriali ecclesiæ, pertinens ad Hospitall Sancti Leonardi Ebor., totaliter situatur et construitur super cimiterium. Magister et fratres domus Sancti Leonardi Ebor. fecerunt ibidem fieri unam novam latrinam super cimiterium, contra honestatem ecclesiæ et abhominacionem parochianorum.

ST. MAURICE. Cancellus, minatur ruinam tam in meremio quam coopertura ejusdem. Non habent luminaria sufficiencia in ecclesia. Tabula mensalis super summum altare est fracta et minus ydonea. Deficit antiphonarium, et superpellicium pro capellano parochiali. Fons baptismalis est in parte ruptus nec tenet aquam.

MCCCCXVI.—OSBALDWYK. Libri, etc., honesta sunt et sufficiencia, considerata exilitate et paupertate parochianorum. Dicunt quod in fenestris vitreis in choro capellæ sunt notorii defectus pertinentes ad emendacionem prebendarii di Strensall.

ST. MICHAEL DE BEREFRIDO.—The same compl<sup>te</sup> agst. the nave & tower. Item sunt defectus notorii in fenestris, tam in vitro quam ligaminibus, in singulis fenestris navis ecclesiæ. Dicunt parochiani quod in cimiterio eccl. diebus Dominicis et festis commune forum rerum venalium tenetur, et diversæ res et bona ac cirpi vendicioni ibidem exponuntur: equi super corpora mortuorum ibidem sepulta stantes stercorant, in maximam de honestacionem ac Divini cultus impedimentum manifestum, propter clamores circumstantium. Johannes Mason, taylor, tractat uxorem suam atrociter, verberando et male tractando. Dicunt quod Alicia Wythe, Robertus Curtas et Elena filia Johannis Whyte, glover, qualibet die Dominicæ, aperuerunt schopas suas infra clausum.

ST. MARY, BISHOPHILL. Thomas Curtas, clericus par. parochianis eccl. B. M. Archiepiscopi, impedivit, et impedit clericum parochiale B. M. ecclesiæ suæ domum suam cum uxore intrare diebus Dominicis cum aqua benedicta, ut est moris civitatis. Idem Thomas et uxor ejusdem recusarunt accedere ad audiendum Divina in eccl. par., et subtraxerunt et subtrahunt oblaciones.

ST. MAURICE. Deficiunt antiphonarium et unum manuale pro sacramentis parochianis ministrandis, et incontinenter dominus commissarius suspendidit unum antiphonarium et unum manuale vetustate maxima consumpta. Dicunt quod deski in choro, tam ex una parte quam ex alia, ubi saltem capellanus parochialis et clericus parochialis sedere usi sunt, nimis deformes et indigent reparacione.

ST. JOHN BAFT. IN MARISCO. Dicunt parochiani quod ex parte australi eccl. par., super murum cimiterii, jacet unum magnum et abhominabile sterquilinum pro macellaria civitatis Ebor., ubi intestina et fetores animalium sparguntur, ad quod corvi, avesque immundi neenon magni canes—confluunt. Et ossa animalium, asserunt, et in cimiterio sparguntur, et exinde sape contigit fractura tegularum et cooperturæ ecclesiæ: neenon aves et canes ex dicto sterquilinio tantos fetores excitant quod vix potest capellanus par. celebrare.

WADSWORTH. Navis eccl. patitur magnum defectum in coopertura et in parietibus.

BOLE. Defectus est in coopertura cancelli. Turibulum eccl. est vetus et debile.

LANUM. Enormis defectus patet in cancello eccl. de Lanum, viz., in muris lapideis et maxime in parte orientali et in tectura ejusdem. Cimiterium indiget clausura.

DRAYTON. Defectus sunt in domate cancelli.

WARTHYLL. Dicunt quod vicarius secum tenet in familia Elenam Haworth, et quod ipsa equitat publicè secum ad dorsum versus Ebor., et in aliis locis. Hugo Warthyll dicit quod dictus vicarius denegavit sibi audenciam confessionis suæ, eciam et uxoris, ac sacramentum eucaristiae, ex culpa et malicia vicarii.

ACCLOM. Chorus patitur defectus in parietibus et in fenestris vitreis. Non habent ordinale.

BUGTHORP. Navis eccl. patitur defectus in meremio et lectura una cum portiu ad hostium dictæ ecclesiæ.

WETWANG. Fenestra vitrea ex parte boriali cancelli principalis est defectiva.

DRYFFELD. Altare principale in choro eccl. in Magna Dryffeld non est sanctificatum, et chorus ejusdem est defectivus in tectura. Tabula a retro altaris in choro eccl. de Parva Dryffeld est defectivus.

BURTON LENARD. Vicarius hoc anno, sui expensis propriis, de novo funditus, per omnia, construxit magnam aulam et cameras pro sua habitacione et suorum successorum juxta antiquum mansum.

MASHAM. Mr. Wm. Clynt, vicarius, in concilio generali Constancensi est. Commissarius inspexit chorum et cancellum eccl., et fuerunt comperta honesta et congrua, completis fenestris chori in edificando per dominum prebendarium, suis propriis expensis. Dominus Johannes Wath, cap. de Masham, et in ecclesia ejusdem et alibi, male regulatus inter parochianos, et multociens frequentat publicas tabernas, et, ad minus, per tres vel duos dies septimanatim est ebrius, et provocat parochianos ad pugnandum secum. Capellani parochiales de Masham recusant facere aut celebraræ exequias infancium et pauperum quorumcunque defunctorum, ni primitus per amicos et parentes sit eis satisfactum pro qualibet nygwake, 7d., quos multociens extorserunt. Capellani recipiunt in qualibet solemnizacione matrimonii, 8d., de pecunia posita super librum, contra antiquos usus suos, et petunt parochiani silencium eisdem capellanis.

BRAMHAM. Sunt magni defectus in libris, vestimentis, etc. Rogerus de Skellesthorp, serviens et minister Prioris de Sancto Oswaldo, subtraxit et asportavit a cimiterio, ad manerium prebendæ de Bramham, meremium et plaunchors, ad summam 13s. 4d., empta per parochianos pro reparacione campanilis; et posuit hujusmodi meremium et plaunchors in edificacionem manerii dictæ prebendæ. Dicunt quod dominus Joh. Dene, exec. magistri Joh. Clyfford, subtraxit plumbum ordinatum pro coopertura cantariae apud Bramham, et in usus suos proprios apud Rypon convertebat. Fiat mencio contra garrulatores tempore Divinorum. Dominus Joh. Derlyng, cap. est publicus carcetarius et laborarius conductus per diversos parochianos eciam ad opera ruralia, contra honestatem presbiteratus. Sunt defectus in coopertura navis.

KYRKEBY SUPER QUERF. Chorus eccl. est defectivus in coopertura et muris lapideis, et bemeffillyng, et quod pluit multociens super altare tempore missæ et super stalla in choro.

RYKALL. Missale et manuale sunt defectiva. Defectus enormes sunt in clausura cimiterii. Lucerna pro corpore Christi insufficiens est.

NEWBALD. Johannes Mason operatus est die dedicacionis ecclesiæ suæ in artificio suo de mason craft. Purgavit se gracie cum iiii manu propinquorum suorum, ad rogatum et ob reverencium domini Thomæ Brownflete, militis.

MCCCCXI.—ST. MICHAEL LE BELFREY. Capellanus par. et clericus par. non habent aliquam habitacionem illis assignatam. Sunt defectus in meremio cameræ pro crucifixo.

ST. MARTIN, CONY STREET. Parochiani multum formidant de ruina campanilis quia ruinosum est valde.

ST. MARY, BISHOPHILL, JUNIOR. Vicarius et par. dicunt quod est una capella vocata le Tempyll,* juxta Coupemanthorp, in qua Andreas Payntor celebravit missas per plures annos contra honestatem. Parochiani dicunt quod est defectus muri lapidei campanilis ecclesiæ, ex parte occidentali, et in cooperatura, et multum indiget reparacione.

MCCCCXIII.—CATH. EBOR. Dominus Willelmus Baynton est nimie garrulans in choro, et abstinet se in choro a cantacione cum sociis suis. Willelmus Esyngton tenetur invenire ornamenta cantariae suæ, a quibus se abstinet, et celebrat cum ornamentis Ecclesiæ. Item impignoravit domino Henrico Ravenswath unam calicem pertinentem ad cantariam quam ultimo occupavit, et eciam spoliavit ipsam cantariam de j missali. Item Merton, Burton, Hunter et Cawardly non curant laborare pro scientia historiarum suarum.

MCCCCXXII.—CATH. EBOR. In primis precentor, cancellarius, subdecanus, & succeptor canonorum, tenentur residere & non resident, & presertim cancellarius, qui juxta Ecclesiam actualiter legere & scholas ibidem exercere tenetur. Item, in absencia canonicorum residentiariorum, Ecclesia totaliter est destituta, quod in festis duplicibus non est in Ecclesia canonicus aut aliquis alius de Ecclesia preter personas & vicarios ad ministrandum ad summum altare, nec in processionibus generalibus, si quæ fuerint, in magnum dedecus hujus almae Ecclesiae Ebor. Diversæ personæ Ecclesiae predictæ qui nedum juxta formam ordinacionum cantiarum suarum, verum eciam statutorum super hac editorum, tenentur interesse Divinis obsequiis in omnibus festis duplicibus & ix lect., non observant ordinaciones predictas, sed quandoque in habitibus, quandoque illis depositis, ut laici essent, in Ecclesia vagantur: Ut puta, Haymer, Longe, Helton & Flowre. Quidam vicarii chorales qui strictius tenentur Divinis officiis interesse, hunc malum habent usum in consuetudine, viz., quod ad matutinas chorum non ingrediuntur ante finem psalmi Venite, et paulo post psalmum, Benedictus, exeunt, suffragiis laudibus & animabus, si quæ fuerint, penitus omissis. Ad primam vero similiter nimis tarde veniunt in chorum, et cito post incepcionem psalmi, Quicunque Vult, a choro recedunt, vagantes in Ecclesia, parietes salutantes, usque finem evangelii in missis obituum, cum acciderint, et post elevacionem exeunt; et etiam post elevacionem magnæ missæ coverte a choro recedunt. Et in vesperis post psalmum, Magnificat, chorum deserunt, vesperis Beatae Mariae et completorio dici totaliter omissis, et presertim Dovanby, Holbek, Esyngwald, Hulofe, Paynter, Halton, & Fell. Vicarii dicti chori antiquam Eccles Ebor. consuetudinem, absentibus dominis residentiariis, post ultimum classicum, tam ad matutinas quam primam & obitus post nonam, cum acciderint, magnam moram faciunt antequam Divina incipiunt. Dicti vicarii pretendunt omni die impune se absentare a magna hora seu duabus horis minoribus, et eciam absentant se a matutinis, uno die vel duobus in qualibet septimana, pretextu cuiusdam ordinacionis super hoc, ut asserunt, edito cuius auctor ignoratur; et specialiter, Preston, Derby, & Dernbruk. Thomas Forsett succentor canonicorum habet concubinam. (3 others similiter). Dom. Will. Hawn, persona, officium exercens penitenciarii in Eccles. Ebor., recepit & indies recipit diversa pecunias & legata fabricæ Eccles. Ebor., collata & concessa, et nescitur in quorum usus ea convertit. Sacristæ Ecclesiae sunt maxime negligentes in impediendo tumultus & clamores puerorum in Ecclesia, & presertim tempore celebracionis missarum. Diaconi & thuribularii non veniunt ad chorum, ut deberent, et cum in choro fuerint, confabulantur & garrulaciones faciunt, Divinis nullatenus attendentes. Infra vestibulum silentium debitum & morosum a ministris Ecclesiae non observatur, ut deberet. Juniores vicarii jurati ut faciant diligenciam ad sciendum sine libro officia Divina—non faciunt. Ordinacio alias facta quod duodecim vicarii essent in choro, ex parte domini Decani, & totidem ex parte thesaurarii, omni die feriali, et vix inveniuntur ad matutinas ex una parte quatuor, & sic similiter ad horas & vesperas, non solum diebus ferialibus, sed eciam majoribus & festis duplicitibus, in magnum dedecus Ecclesiae.

MANSUM SUBDECANATUS INFRA CLAUSUM. Una aria parvæ cameræ in manso est quodammodo fracta. Aria capellæ est quodammodo defectiva.

AMPILFORTH. Unum aulodium defectivum et tectura coquinæ est defectiva.

ULLESKELF. Porticus aulæ ruinosus. Capella et cameræ sunt defectivæ.

DETECTA PER PERSONAS. (Inter alia.) Dominus Joh. Hunter, persona in choro, sepius incbriatus est, et ultra modum frequentat tabernas, in perniciosum exemplum consociorum suorum, ob quam causam Divina celebrare multociens omittit. Erat quoddam vestimentum collatum altari B. M. textum cum cirogrillis, quod dominus Willelmus Hoton non bene servat, et timeatur de consumpione ejusdem humiditate, quia jacens per longum tempus subtus altare.

DETECTA PER VICARIOS. Portæ Bedernæ vicariorum in noctibus minus tarde clausæ sunt, sed fere usque horam decimam, qualibet nocte, sunt apertæ, in magnum periculum vicariorum. Ordinatum erat quod esset una lucerna infra januam Bedernæ pendens cum candela in eadem accensa tempore yemali, qualibet nocte, et illa ordinacio non observatur. Dominus Johannes Fell vix celebrat missam semel in quindena, et quasi noctanter deambulat per vicos civitatis in magnum scandalum vicariorum, raro Bedernam intrans ad horam decimam.

Wansforth, etc., non faciunt diligenciam in sciendo sine libro historias, ut juramento astricti. Repetat quolibet die inter Pasch. & Pent. unam historiam. Cum celebrata fuerit historia S. Raphaels multi vicarii, tam seniores quam juniores, absentarunt se a choro & recusant de illa historia dicere vel celebrare. Processionarii in choro sunt maxime discordantes in nota. Canes taliter in Ecclesia ululant & latrant, quod vicarii in choro existentes legendam audire nequeunt. Libri vocati couchers sunt discordantes in responsis. Jocalia vicariorum non ostenduntur visui. Vicarii qui celebrant psalmos se nimis festinant & indevote celebrant. Non resident in persona singulari, sed in omnibus. Diaconi, thuribularii & choristæ, tales faciunt in choro clamores quod legenda non potest per vicarios & alios audiri. Vicarii & alii utuntur calapodiis ligneis in choro contra consuetudinarium. Canonici residentiarii secundum antiquam consuetudinem, tenentur missam celebrare ad summum altare quatuor diebus in septimanis Natalis Domini, Paschæ, & Pentecostes, si tot fuerint presentes, quod factum non est. Diaconi, & thuribularii non attendunt lecturæ lectionum suarum, nec illuminacioni torcharum tempore elevationis corporis Christi in majori missa. Dominus Johannes Fell, & alii vicarii, non vacant Divino obsequio, cum in choro presentes fuerint, sed magis garulacionibus, cacchinationibus & aliis insolenciis attendunt. Dominus Johannes Fell, cum fuerit in aula communi vicariorum, habet multiplices comunicaciones de dominis temporalibus, excitando alios consocios suos ad rixas & discordias. Personæ in choro non intendunt processionibus ut deberent, sed quandoque obviant processioni extra hostium chori, quandoque in insulis, & quandoque in nave Ecclesiæ, in magnum Ecclesiæ dedecus. Pannus jacens coram summo altare diebus ferialibus est in diversis ejus partibus dilaceratus. Capæ occupatae in commemorationibus Beatae Mariæ, Sanctorum Willelmi, & Ap. Petri & Pauli sunt defectivæ et lace-ratæ. Casulæ & alia ornamenta eisdem pertinentia, in quibus ministri celebrant ad summum altare diebus ferialibus, forent de serico, et jam fiunt de worsted & alio panno. Fell, Gillow, & alii vicarii, non attente audiunt Bibliam in aula communi, sed per ignem sedentes garulant tempore lecturæ ejusdem.

ST. MICHAEL LE BELFRY. Vestimenta sunt debilia et lace-rata. Libri ecclesiæ, viz., antiphonaria, gradalia et alii libri versuum cantandorum, sunt valde debiles et confracti in tabulis et folliis, ac caduci in literis et notis. Velum quadragesimale est maxime defectivum. Thuribula sunt debilia et fracta. Albæ, et panni altaris ac manutergia et superpellicia, non sunt lota neque mundata, ut deberent, nec sciunt quis ea lavare debeat. Berefridum est defectivum in tectura, in tantum quod singulis tempestatum et pluviarum temporibus pluit in ecclesia, quod parochiani vix ibidem possunt permanere. Fenestræ vitriæ sunt defectivæ, tam in vitro quam in ligaminibus ferrcis. Johannes Fattyng et Johannes Lilly habent infra situm mansionum suarum ij bulscars, ac illi, et diversi parochiani, et alii, ibidem ludunt tempore Divinorum. Willelmus Par et Johanna uxor sua, absentant se diebus Dominicis et tempore celebracionis missæ parochialis, in domo habitacionis suæ, conclamaciones intollerabiles faciunt, seu saltem per alios permittunt, necnon potacionibus, et commensacionibus ac aliis insolenciis prohibitis insistunt. Robertus Corbryg, talyor, et uxor ejusdem, negligunt ecclesiam —vir dicit quod non audet ecclesiam adire nec intrare libertatem Sancti Petri, propter metum incarcerationis per Ballivum libertatis, eo quod erat certis viris indebitatus.

ST. JOHN DEL PYKE. Robertus Parke absentat se a Divino obsequio. Dicit quod sollicitus est diebus et festis duplicibus circa flacionem folliorum in choro ecclesiæ Cath. Ebor.

ST. MAURICE. Cancellus est ruinosus in muris, tectura et fenestris vitreis. Stalla chori sunt fracta et indecencia. Caput ymagineis principalis est quodammodo deformatum. Dominus Edm. Palmer, cap. par., fornicatur cum Alicia Huet: vir sublatus est e medio.

SKELTON. Navis ecclesiæ est defectivus in fenestris vitreis.

ACOM. Inhabitantes villæ de Drynghous Divina audiunt in quadam capella in Drynghous situata et noviter constructa, in prejudicium eccl. par. Idem inhabitantes tenuerunt exhibere certa luminaria vocata rudlyght. in eccl. de Acom, quæ subtrahunt.

LARETHORP. Missale nou est de usu Ebor. Deficit portiphorium; dieunt quod parochia est tam exilis quod non possunt emere portiphorium.

ST. ELLEN SUPER MUROS. Johannes Somersete, histrio, absentat se ab ecclesia.

HESLYNTON. Fons baptismalis non est sub sera custoditus.

STILLYNGTON. Vicarius vendicat de parochianis decimam cerevisiæ contra consuetudinem, et qualibet die Domiuica, obolum, vocatum halybredhalfpeny, quem clericus par. haberet.

STRENSALL. Fenestra vitria in cancello est quodammodo fracta. Unum sellor in choro est defectivum. Hostium navis est aliquiliter fractum.

HUSTHWAIT. Deficiunt unum gradale et j processionarium. Summum altare non est dedicatum. Non habent lavacrum pro aqua benedicta ferenda. Canapeum super sacramentum est dilaceratum.

AMPILFORTH. Dicunt parochiani quod erat quædam convencio inter ipsos et quemdam Robertum Mason de faciendo unum campanile ibidem, quod non perficitur—fiendum citra festum Paschæ 1474 sub pena, 40s. Navis Eccl. patitur defectus in tectura.

SALTON. Cancellus est ruinosus in muris et tecturis, ac stalla in choro deficiunt. Dicunt parochiani quod prebendarius tenetur sternere ecclesiam cum stramine, bis annuatim, viz., in festis Natalis Domini, et Paschæ; quod non factum erat per duos annos. Ordinatum est, de consensu parochianorum, quod nullus de cetero utetur ludis dishonestis et inhibitis infra cimiterium, ut puta, pilo pedali vel manuali, aut luctacione, sub pena forisfacturæ ij.d. Et quod nullus . . . litigare, aut cultellum, gestrum vel aliud defensibile trahere infra ecclesiam aut cimiterium.

BILTON. Navis ecclesiæ est defectivus in tectura.

MASHAM. Cancellus est defectivus in sillyng. Custos jurisdictionis vendicat de executoribus mortuorum testamenta condencium unum anulum signetum, cum testator nullum habeat, contra antiquam consuetudinem.

USBURNE. Navis ecclesiæ est defectivus in tectura.

RICALL. Cancellus est quodammodo defectivus in muris et fenestris.

WYSTOW. Parochiani dicunt quod est propc cimiterium eccl.

de Wystowe una capella Sanctæ Hildæ constructa, quæ est maxime ruinosa, quam prebendarius de Wystow solebat supportare. Non est in ecclesia de Wystowe principalis ymago. Dicunt quod ex sumptibus prebendarii ecclesia esset strata cum stramine, prout per tempus cuius contrarii memoria hominum non existit,—nunc recusat.

CAWOD. Cancellus capellæ est defectivus in tectura.

OSBALDWYK. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura. Missale est defectivum. Lumen coram crucifixo non exhibetur.

HEMELsay ET STAUNFORTHBRIG. Cancellus ibidem est in omni parte ruinosus tam in muris, fenestris et tectura. Dicunt quod omnes parochiani ibidem tenent plebisitum, et alias ordinationes temporales, in ecclesia et cimiterio—moniti, etc. Marjoria More nuper de Hemelsay legavit fabricæ ecclesiæ ibidem unum anulum auri prec., 5s., et liberatus erat Roberto Thweyng nuper defuncto; quem quidem anulum uxor ejusdem Roberti conceclavit.

DONNYNGTON. Erat in manso prebendali quoddam vas plumbeum quod erat implementum ejusdem mansi, et prebendarius nunc existens contulit idem plumbum fabricæ ecclesiæ de Donnyngton.

WARTHILL. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura, tegulis.

DRIFFELD. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura plumbæ. Est materia questionis et discordiæ inter prebendarium et vicarium pro decimis lini, et canabi, et signorum.

DRIFFELD PARVA. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura tabularum. Navis defectivus est in tectura.

WETTEWANG. Cancellus patitur defectus in tectura, hostiis, ac stallis retro. Parochiani dicunt quod dominus archiepiscopus, eo quod habet denarios Sancti Petri ejusdem villæ, tenetur conferre cereum paschale annuatim, et jam subtrahitur.

FRIDAITHORP. Cancellus est ruinosus in tignis et tectura plumbi.

WHARROM IN STRATA. Cancellus patitur defectus in tectura tabularum.

LANGTOFT. Stalla in choro sunt debilia ac fenestræ vitriæ sunt fractæ, et hostium chori non habet seram.

GRYMESTON. Cancellus est valde ruinosus in omni parte ejusdem. Carent vestimento pro duobus ferialibus et uno processionario.

ACLOM. Una fenestra vitrea in cancelllo est fraeta. Non est ibidem calix nisi ex mutuo. Missale est quodammodo defectivum et etiam gradale.

TUNSTALL. Cancellus est maxime ruinosus in muris et tignis ac tectura.

MAPPILTON. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura, plumbo, et fenestris vitreis. Stalla in cancello non sunt decenter facta.

BYSSHOPBURTON. Calix furtive abstractus erat.

WYGHTON. Fenestra vitrea in navi ecclesiæ est fracta. Fons baptismalis non est seratus. Clericus parochialis non exerceat officium suum, ut deberet, quia cum vicarius infirmum visitaverit, clericus se absentat, et puerum cum vicario mittit. Ordinatum est quod nullus ludat in cimiterio ad pilum pedale sive manuale, sub pena 12d. Johannes Holt, histrio vagabundus, fornicatur cum Marjoria Semester.

SHYPTON. Navis capellæ est defectivus in fenestris.

BRAMHAM. Cancellus est in tectura plumbea defectivus.

KIRKEBY SUPER WHERF. Non est ibidem antiphonarium, et campanile est defectivum in tectura. Navis est defectivus in tectura.

SHIRBURN IN ELMETT. Cancellus patitur defectus in tectura, ne non porticus ecclesiæ.

BROTHERTON. Cancellus non sufficienter tectus.

FENTON. Porticus est defectivus in tectura, et coopertorium super summum altare est ruinosum.

LAGHTON. Non est coopertura supra altare. Panni altaris sunt debiles, et carent portiphorio et processionari. Porticus est in tectura defectivus.

HANNESWORTH. Ecclesia est ruinosa ; jam tamen est in edificacione. Tectura cancelli est defectiva.

DYNNINGTON ET THWAIT ET THORPEN. Non habent velum quadragesimale.

WALES. Portiphorium est in literis caducum et defectivum.

WADDESWORTH. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura, et non est coopertura super altare. Stalla in choro non sunt decencia sed fracta et debilia. Rectoria est valde ruinosa. Non habent de propriis calicem ibidem, eo quod nuper fuit calix suus furtive subtractus, et infra breve dicunt, quod erant ix calices subtracti et furati.

DRAITON. Murus cancelli est ruinosus et hostium ejusdem fractum. Dicunt quod Ricardus Stroyland de Draiton habet unum tenementum ibidem, pro quo tenetur exhibere tria luminaria in eccl. par. de Draiton, unum, viz., coram crucifixo, aliud coram ymagine Sanctæ Katerinae et tertium coram sepulcro, et omnia ista luminaria per eundem Ricardum subtrahuntur.

ASKHAM ET STOCOM. Cancelli defectivi.

LANOM. Non habent velum quadragesimale.

BOLE. Ordinatum est de consensu parochianorum quod si contingat aliquem in ecclesia vel cimiterio deinceps litigare, ille vel illa sic litigans forisfaciet et liberabit custodibus fabricæ dictæ ecclesiæ unam libram ceræ, comburendæ coram ymagine B. M. ibidem, si per quatuor viros inveniantur culpabiles.

BYSSHOP-WYTON. Fons baptismalis non est sub sera custoditus. Alicia Thomburgh de Barnby utitur sortilegiis et incantacionibus contra catholicam fidem.

BUGTHORP. Presentant parochiani quod campanile est maxime ruinosum et debile, co quod de meremio conficitur; dicunt, tamen, quod nituntur aliud campanile construere de opere lapideo, quod incepsum est. Moniti eciam sunt quod, propter pericula quæ evenire poterunt, dictum campanile debile deponi faciant, ne ad terram prosternatur et cadat, intra festum Sancti Michaelis quod erit anno 1474, sub pena 40s. Illa pars muri cimiterii pertinens ad Priorem Sancti Andreæ Ebor. est defectiva.

ECCLES. CATH. Magister Johannes Plaskit excreens penitenciarii officium in eccles. Cath. Ebor. pecunias & alias res fabricæ dictæ Ecclesiæ per confitentes, in dieta Ecclesia collatas & legatas, per ipsum receptas, non confert ad usum Ecclesiæ, sed convertit easdem in alios usus pro suo placito, quia vix confert custodi fabricæ in anno iij s.

Saceroste sunt negligentes in impediendo tumultus et clamores puerorum & juvenum in Ecclesia tempore celebracionis missarum.

Dominus Will. Walter frequentat spurulas & alios ludos in-honestos. Choristæ sunt in choro maxime insolentes & garulantes.

STILLYNGTON. Solebant eligere inter se unum de parochianis suis pro conservacione bosci domini qui vocatur wodwarde.

STRENSALL. Fenestra vitrea in navi eccl. est quodammodo fracta.

HAXBY. Johanna Grave nuper defuncta legavit fabricæ capellæ ibidem unam zonam de serico argento paratam, unam togam blodii coloris et ordium crescens super dim. acr. terræ; et quidam Willelmus Flaxton de Strensall detinet omnia premissa.

HUSTHWAIT. Non habent lucernam pro communione parochianorum. Moniti sunt quod emant unam lucernam sive lanternam citra festum ascensionis Domini, sub pena 12d.

MASSHAM. Deest sellura supra altare in cancellio. Cancellus est defectivus in j trabe et in tectura, in fenestris vitreis. Tres rodæ terræ pertinentes ad ecclesiam de Masham pro sustentacione unius lampadis subtrahuntur per Ricardum Pygot servientem ad legem.

KIRKEBY MALLESERTH. Cancellus patitur defectus in tectura plumbea et fenestris vitreis. Navis est defectivus in tectura.

WADDESWORTH. Stalla in cancellio sunt confracta. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura plumbea. Crux in eimiterio est fracta.

KNARESBURGH. Cancellus est maxime ruinosus in tectura et meremio. Johannes Slyngesby de Skryven subtrahit unam acram terræ ad valorem 2s. per ann., quæ data erat ad sustencionem unius lampadis coram altari Sancti Nicholai in ecclesia de Knaresburgh.

USBURN PARVA. Vicaria ex infortunio ignis devastatur. Fons baptismalis confringitur et non seratur. Crismatorium non habet seram. Porticus ecclesiae est defectivus in tectura. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura plumbea.

BURTON. Non est sellura super altare.

SHIRBURN. Navis est defectivus in tectura.

BROTHERTON. Navis est defectivus in tectura plumbea et lapidea.

ULLESKELF. Non habent portiphorium nec manuale neque superpellicium. Fons baptismalis et crismatorium non custodiuntur sub seris. Fenestræ vitriæ in navi sunt fractæ. Navis patitur defectus ac eciam campanile in tecturis.

LAGHTON. Hostium caneelli non est sufficiens, nec est sellura super altare. Lampas pendet in cancellio coram altare, et non est lumen in eadem, nec sciunt quis onus luminis in eadem lampade exhiberet.

HANNESWORTH. Johannes Parkyn utitur incantacionibus.

SAINT JOHNESTOWN CUM DYNNYNGTON. Murus capellæ est defectivus.

MEKESBURGH. Vestibulum est ruinosum post majus altare in defectu domini archidiaconi. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura plumbea. Navis ecclesiæ patitur defectus in tectura, et velum quadragesimale est nimis debile.

BOLE. Cancellus est valde ruinosus in muris, fenestris et tectura lapidea.

LANOM. Fenestræ vitriæ in navi sunt fractæ.

DRAYTON. Cancellus est defectivus in tectura et meremio. (So at Askham.)

WISTOW. Non est sellura super altare in cancello de Wistow. Idem cancellus patitur defectus in tectura plumbea et fenestris vitreis. Capella Sanctæ Hildæ ibidem pene ad terram prosteretur.

NEWBALD, NORTH AND SOUTH. Cancellus caret sellura super altare: non est ordinale. Fons baptismalis non habet seram. Ordinatum est quod non fiat tumultus in ecclesia tempore divinorum, sub pena 2s.

SOUTHCAVE. Deficiunt duo superpellicia et duo rochetti, duo libri vocati processionales, unum par thuribulorum, et unum portiphorium, quod prebendarius inveniret. Ornamenta altaris non sunt honeste lota. Fenestra vitrea super altare est defectiva et hostium cancelli est insufficiens. Duo candelabra de auricalco et alia duo de stanno sunt fracta.

PRESTON. Dicunt quod solebant pertransire cum processione in diebus rogationum per calectum vocatum Maldleyneally, et per precinctum camporum ad villam de Preston pertinencium, et in diebus rogacionum A.D. MCCCC. lxxvij, inhabitantes villam de Hedon ipsos ab ea via vi expulerunt et eosdem hac via transire impidierunt et permittere noluerunt.

PITSEBURTON. Parochiani nonnulli faciunt clamores et garrulaciones tempore Divinorum in ecclesia par. et tenent in eadem plebiscitum in magnum dedecus ecclesiæ.

DRIFFELD PARVA. Una campana est fracta quæ de novo fieri oportet. Agnes Marshall, alias Saundier, de Emeswell, exerceat officium obstetricis, et non habet usum neque sciencian ostritricandi; utitur etiam incantationibus.

WYVERTHORP, ETC. Thomas Wansford de Est Lutton sua propria temeritate capellam ibidem Deo dedicatam ad terram projecit, et plumbum ac petras ejusdem, prout sibi placuit, vendidit, in utilitatem propriam premissa convertendo.

LANGTOFT. Non sunt stalla in cancello et fenestrae vitriæ in cancello sunt fractæ, et cancellus est defectivus in tectura. Vicaria non est sufficenter dotata quia vix valet in anno, ut asserunt, viij marcas.

WHARROM IN STRATA. Cancellus est defectivus in meremio, tectura, tabulis et fenestris.

SALTON CUM BRAWBY. Jacobus Hird de Shirefhton cum complicibus suis intravit libertatem Sancti Petri in Salton in profesto exaltacionis Sanctae Crucis, et fregit domum habitationis Thomae Brown ibidem, ac vi et armis cepit Willelmum Brown, et ab eadem eum duxit ad castrum de Hoton, libertatem, Sancti Petri violando, et sententiam excommunicacionis majoris dampnabiliter incurrendo. Cancellus est defectivus in muris et tectura plumbea.

AMPILFORTH. Una campana est fracta.

MDX.—Thes er defectes foundon by inquisition of inquisitors sworne of the parich of Saint Michell Belfra.

In primis the said inquisitors fyndes and presentes that the body of the said church of Sanct Michaell is not convenient for dyvyne serves to be doone in, and ferefull to the parichynge to syt in, except thar be many in the church, and, in especiall, to such parishynges as daily abydes longe in the church and loves to say thar devocions. Also the said church is so rewynous and the tymbre tharof in diverse partes of the stepull rotton, and defectyve in this, that it ranys in thar stallis and upon thame being at devyne service, in trobling thame in thar devocions, and in gret wyndes, as hath beyne of late, fereid thame to abyde to here dyvyne service. Willelmus Waux nuper serviens magistri Ricardi Latomer, in ultima sua voluntate voluit, ut unus capellanus celebraret per annum pro anima sua, et Henr. Waux, frater suus, occupat bona sua & non perimpler. M. Hauk in ultima voluntate sua, et etiam domina Hauk uxor ejus voluerunt, ut quoddam candelabrum pendens remaneret in ecclesia in honore Sancti Michaelis. M. Johnes Ranald dedit unum vestimentum ad altare S. Mich. de les greyn sattan, et executor liberavit vestimentum de greyn tutt, contra voluntatem defuncti. Item that John Bell, portor, what tyme as any fall seke upon the nyght, wooll not upon the yattes that the clark may rygne the holy bell when oon lyes in passinge, bot at his plesor, in so myche as when M. George Euers wyff lay in extremis, Sr. Peers Knot to have fechid a messe buke to have rede the passions over hir, wold not let hym in to of longe, and when he had let hym in and ij servaundes w<sup>t</sup> hym, keipt thame thar frome a xj of the elok after mednyght unto fyve of the elok in the mornynge. Item, thar, wher of old custome it hath beyne used that evere yere at the festes of Whitsonday and Sanct Petir day the kirk was wonnt to be strewed wt ryshes by the chawmberlane of the mynster and now it is not soe. Item that almyrys chistes ordeynd for the anorments haith no lokkes nor keys, nor the kirk doores nor rode loft dore haith no sufficiaunt lokkes, bot that every man may upon the kirk doore lok with thar fynger, and tharby many thinges and anormentes ar amys. Item the body of the kirk is fawty both in tymer, glas windowes and most specially in thak of lede, so that it raynes in in many places that the parishens may not sit in thar stallis to here divine service when any rayn is. And also likewise it rayns in the wher, and the glas winddowes they er so drak glas, that oppon the suthsyd of the wher in winter season the ministres may not see upon thar bookees of tymes w<sup>t</sup> owt candillyght on the daylight. Item that John Haster, goldsmyth, at the mynster gresses, haith suspect persons drawinge to thar company in thar shoppes at unconvenient tymes, and specially oon younge grille servaunt to a cowper in Fosgait. Item William Paynter in Petrigait commys bot seldomme appon the halydais and Sondais to the kirk to divine service when he myght come. Item we fynde that the parish clark haith not doone his dewte in attending oppon divine service on Sondais and halydais nor yit dooth. Item we fynd that mesbookkes, gralles, antiphonars, portous and oyer bookkes er fawtie, rywen and gretly hurt for fawt of bineinge, and divers of thame like to be lost except thay be shortly emendyd. Item like wise vestimentes coopes, tunacles, albes, auter clothes and other diver anormentes are gretly fawtie, some worne full of holles, some ettyn w rattons, so that they er not able to doo service w<sup>t</sup> owt they be helped.

ST. JOHN. Item yat Belamy woeff, executrix of ye testament of Thomas Glover hir husband, debet 3s. 4d., which yay say hath been haskd and not paid.

NORTHGRYMSTON. Cancellus, una celura, cum fenestris vitriis sunt defectiva. Carent gradale cum processionali. Carent stallis et hostiis in navi.

MAGNA DRIFFELD. Inprimis it is fownd yt on Sir Cutbert Rogg, prest, (is) nyghtly inhabitant at Driffield aforsaid, aganst ye will of all ye parishioners ther, to ther greate noyance, & to ye occasione of mych troble, & in a suspiciose place; and hath yer no stypend or wages but only for his plesor. Item yt maister prebendary of Driffield, hath not made his stallis in the qwere, so yt yer is no sufficient restyng place to ye mynysters yer.

PARVA DRIFFELD. Porticus borialis non est sufficiens pro presbitero ad aquam benedictam parochianis dandam in defectu domini vocati Nicholai Cowtbeytson.

WEVERTHORPE. Plumbeum super chorū, tres fenestrae vitriæ et hostium chori debent emendari. A gret tend laith in ye parsonage fallyn down; ye tenānd had gret hurt yerby. Anoyer grett laith will down bot if it be helpe vera sone w<sup>t</sup> oyer tymbre.

WAGHEN. Mastyrs, to have in remembrance yt we thynk yt m<sup>r</sup> vicar abydes not emange us, as a curette awght to do, for if he wald, we wald be content yerw<sup>t</sup>, qwher throught he wald do his dewte whilk longes to his charges and abyd w<sup>t</sup> hus; and also we fynd a faute w<sup>t</sup> hym enens a paschall & frankensense, ye whilk his predecessors have fown afortyme, by ye way of a welfull debet of his, it was laid by in woden of more troble; ye which we have fown this iij yere to ye tyme ye mater myght be tried, as we trist may be now; & also we have gret faut of a bull & a bore whilk we thynk m<sup>r</sup> vicar suld fynd, by gud reason, for why he hasse ye profett.

MAPLETON. Coopertura chori est defectiva in subtili distillatione circa presbiteri stallum. Carent tribus les alterclothes et una cera pro fonte.

TUNSTALL. Les ruff chori et vitrum et stalla sunt defectiva. Ye parsonage is downe and oyer tenementes yt longes to yt. Also yt we have bene in fawt of serves of a curet afortyme.

BURTON PIDSE. Fenestra supra summum altare non est sufficiens in vitro nec in les stonewark, for when ye wynd is in ye est part, it is liek to fall downe. Also anoyer in ye north parte of ye qwher which is so dyme yt no mane may see on yt sied yt syng in ye qwher.

HEDON. M<sup>d</sup> yt ye chirch yerd of ye chapell of Sanct Austyn of Hedon, in ye qwilk ye bonys, and ye holy sacrament is mynsterid, is not sufficiently reparillid for to hold out unresonable bestes. And also ye glas wyndow of ye hic awter is nowght reparillid, by the qwilk unreparilyng dovys enter in to ye qwer and makes unclene the qwher.

WIGHTON. It is so yt yer is a bok fawty and it is in makyng half maid & half unmaid; and a faut yt our parish clerk yt he hath not done his dewtie to ye kirk, yt is to say, ryngyng of ye morne bell and ye evyn bell, and also a noyer fawt, he fyndes yt powr mene pays hym not his wages.

NEWBALD, NORTH AND SOWTH. Sir, our prebends and chirch is well. Also our obittes is brought ne doyn throught ye folkes yt is departid to God, wherfor we desire counsell of your maistyrs.

And when we have a witness in God's Word and his commandments, then the Spirit helps us to understand all we hear and read. It is not for us to say, and it is not for us to think, that a spirit of darkness and a spirit of light are in the world, and a spirit of evil and a spirit of good are in the world.

However, Wesleyan is a spiritual boy. His accomplishment is spiritual and tends to spiritual salvation. His preoccupation is to become a sainted soul every year further.

Lastly, Wesley's preaching of Christ, the witness of his church of saints, the example of his life, and witness of his love and service, which we should be ready to show you of the changes he makes in us, should be done now. And for the present, send a soul, we trust, to you in love, as you do her serve as love serves. And we trust to have the love and living power of love always present, as no power is able to move you far off. We send you love, honor, and to the love, honor, and to the power of Christ, to minister in the far river of happiness.

Conclusion. Wesleyan said, ominous Thomas Bowes at the Horse Guards, when we were performing our election of our National President here, and a man from the U.S. said, "What will you do, Sir, if you are elected?" He said, "I will be president of the Presidents of Nations." Wesleyan added, "I presume you will be a good man. I presume God will be president of you."

Second. President good sometimes and sometimes in name, is something as is winter, it all the beauty of long years gone past. Proper recognition of president, low humility, a low estimate of himself, with strict judgment.

Conclusion. This is how we find presidenting the last of Presidents. How we presume his selecting over the alternatives for the election in the first place, for the first election is for the laying of the base. And the presidenting, first, is covering of the base, so far as you base is supporting of the high walls. Consider a nation, government, a foundation and foundation.

Conclusion. All the year as you grow, how you we find in the psychology of Presidents. The common sense is not accepted nor denied, but kept in the past. The common sense is also the basis of all presidenting, past and laying. We should now be good, but not so bad, and not too simple for a weak they said we are not so simple now, as we grow old. And the year of Presidents has been filled up his election a not bad, neither bad. President, Wesleyan, from nothing of you now, these nothing of you other and yourself.

Conclusion. The lesson of the president for multiplying of a body of the church of president now. In relation to no president ever to be other.

London. I comynre eanethi is not sufficient. The chancel is not sufficient, for it requires to be made of stone and of timbered, so that it deserves ye spere and ye honour. The chanci for Lesternre is not sufficient. The chanci is not sufficient. But in howþer yere we are arched, nor are grecianis and the canthill alleys for ye alter. Perambulatione parochiale. Ver a space betwix the coverynge of the church to god. The west end of ye banchynges of ye wallis to shewþe þis þereto. But nowþer bell is not hengyn up. The west end of ye north wall to þe crosyngis nighþ of ye wall. Because we set þis þereto for audience to say þis seruþe the crosyng and floryng, & þis is not want of þis building, þereto for þis amercy of remeþy.

Item. — Letters to the Labors. Inþerþis to the chancienges of the chancienges there wanteth a torch, and a chace of ye veray in þis chancieng for the remouall of the chanci. Item we fynde grecis wodis grecis of ye chanci and chanci of þe chanci. þe chanci is not shapen, wherþer a kyng comys to þis chanci. Item now on þis dayys after the beginnyng of þis chanci after our Lady of þe sondesyside, wherþi is fynde all kyngis of servys, wherþi is comys done. Item the goodly roþdewys is a ful of dace and expensys þis of þis yere þis chanci shalþe þis wodis & þis chanci a better assygnement & better þerþe. Item the falle wodis is so naymer and forme that it were grecis amercy to þis chanci to set þis chanci. Item the audacy that the comys houldis the chanci is a þe amercy to be wene about the holly sacrumet in wherþi a þere. Item the cofþysse is in þe chanci, as rycyon of þe chanci sitte the falle wodis þyngys and straungers wondres to be make in þis place & yet ver wantis þis. Item all the nauyngys of þis chanci ivati ouþyng in þe þremisitory, dugges þis to thank was droppys of þane, & the myȝtysers þis fumay of þe rowmays. Item we shalþe þis chanci to þis chanci of þis chanci wherþi is not honeste for straungers to take uppon. Item the hokes of þe chanci be eadys & xl & so faire in oþer tyme makyngh the vicars to make grecis þis chanci in þe chanci. Item in þis chanci in þe chapter were shewþre & set in myȝtys of þe chanci, but the roþt veray in þe same chanci set in þe chapter we thynke shalþe do wel.

The entyr Lesternre there wanteth toweþre for the chanciengy to vys of dace. Item the lavyng in the vestry wherþe we receyue our water, is a stoppled, & every man, or erer an other, putteþe and wasshethe there crower in a binket w water wherþe by þe same maner is stoppled, and so useth we w the same, and all in deþraþe of dressing in þe puliue & stonewys of the binket wherþe were some amercys. Item a goodly wel iu the crowdes, whiche hathe bepe uscd in old tyme & dyde grete goode what tyme as the churche was borned, whiche wantethe no thynge bot a pully & a rope, & the dore of the same is kepte lokkyd & no man nor woman can do there devotion in that place to our Lady. Item the vestiary, there is a chest full of suspect stuffe yt will make paroress, amettes, coshyns, & to amende many usuall thynges in ye where, & such as ye secunde forme wres nowe is all so tornc whiche tha walde amend well for every day. Item the albys for preists, many of thame be tornc & made so straite both in the bodes and slevys, that men cannot get thame on bot w<sup>t</sup> grete Payne. Item the heghe awter is nowe served both ix lessons and dowbill fests all in lyke, there is ordande chaunge for bothe bot tha will not be had. Item the chylder cummethe abowte the awter sum in one colour & sum in an other, w<sup>t</sup> vyle and unclenly albys nothyngc sortynge accordynge to ye day. Item the cause this is not amendid, in amendynge of copes, chysables, tunakles and such othere, it is not knawne who shulde pay for thame, where John Loksmythe is unpaid for the same amendynge, of his awn proper use, & not of the churche coste: if it were knowne whethere ye clerk of ye warke or the chaumberlane shuld do it we trust tha shulde be better looked on. Item the amendynge of the dalmatykes for ye Advent & Septuagesym myghte be done w<sup>t</sup> a litile cost, whiche nowe mosters away & not occupied. Item the lettron wherupon the gospell is red is moisterd away & faullyn downe, whiche specially wold be amendid by cause it is in opyn sighte.

Item, specially, we beseche y<sup>e</sup>oue, that ye revestre may be kepte after ye old facion, that the dure may be kepte opyn as hathe bene frome the begynnyngc of matens unto xj of ye cloke.
Nowe, oftyn tymes, the dure is stokked, and we parsons & vicars cannot get brede, wyne nor water, when we be redy & makethe us to say no masse for watynge of the where. Item we find grete faute the churche walles be full of copwebbys & all the pyloures of the same, whiche dothe full yll. Item we thynke it were convenient that whene we fetche a corse to the Churche that we shulde be in our blak ablettes mornyngly, w<sup>t</sup> our hodes of the same of our hedes, as is used in many othere places. Item we desyre and beseche y<sup>e</sup>oue that all the abbet may use there surples & ames w<sup>t</sup>owt blake abbet feriali, and othere frome Pasche to our latter Lady day, & generall processious, as tha do in other cathedrall churches, & this we desire for a special cause:
oftyn it happs that the secund forme & othere that be negligent oftyn tymes cummethe in there blak abbets, when thay shulde cum in surples, & when thay shulde cum in surples thay will cum in abbet, whiche wolde not be so if we did as tha do in other places cathedrall. Item we fynde the segistans geveth not suche attendaunce of the Churche as hathe bene, for it hathe bene that one of them hathe gevyn attendaunce all ye day when there wek fel, and sawe there were no dogges nor bryborse in ye Churche, bot tha wolde rewarde thame; and also a resonable tyme betwene ye fyrst pele and the secund, and also they wolde have mo plukkes, as we thynke, than tha giff tham, for ye pelys be veray shorte. Item, touchynge sighte of annormementes of chauntres, the olde custom hathe bene that ye clerk of ye Chapitour who hath a perfite boke maid, an on w<sup>t</sup> hym, shulde soneste see all suche thyngs. As for dekayne of chauntries, tha be many of thame so far furthe of Yorke & many of them in Yorke.

CHAUNTRES. Item of ye Sonday, we have done matyns at halfe oure to vij of the clok, and we have done messe by halfe oure to a xj wherfor we thynke it were more convenient to ryng to matyns at evere daie, excepte Palme Sonday at halfe oure to v; and prime bell to seice a quarter after ix, and yan myght ye pareshe messes be done afore our procession.

SIR MYLES COLYN'S CHAUNTRY IN CLIFTON. His howses wantes thak & morter in diverse place, which he hath promyssed to amend as shortly as ye weder brakes.

LIV.—A LIST OF THE CHANTRIES WITHIN THE CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF YORK.*

ALL SAINTS.

This chantry was on the south side of the presbytery, close to Archbishop Bowett's tomb. It was founded by that prelate 24 Oct. 1413, for two chaplains, who were to pray, specially, for the souls of the Archbishop, Henry IV., Henry Bishop of Winchester, and Richard Pittes, archdeacon of Cleveland. The endowment was half a rood of land, and the advowson of the church of Walton-upon-Thames.

MDXLIII.—A challesse and patten, sylver and well gylte. A written masse booke wyth twoo silver clasps. Twoo crewettes

* I now give a list of the channtries in the minster, with inventories of the furniture belonging to them at various periods. I do not consider this list to be by any means complete. Channtries were occasionally removed from one altar to another, and sometimes they fell entirely into decay. Many changes took place at the rebuilding of the choir, especially among the altars in the crypt. I have taken considerable pains to make the list as accurate as possible. The inventories have been gathered out of the Chapter books, and are given in chronological order. Those made in 1520 and 1543 are to be found in a volume appropriated to the channtries, and to it, therefore, I have given no references. Torre gives lists of the channtry priests, but they are so imperfect and inaccurate that I do not venture to insert them here.

ST. CECILY.

In the crypts, on the north side. In 1364 there was no service there “propter novam fabricam,” but it was performed “ad altare juxta feretrum, ex parte boriali,”* at which altar it remained in 1483.†

The altar was founded, in very remote times, for the soul of Jordan, a canon of York, and was endowed with five houses in Stonegate. It was in the gift of the Chapter.‡ In 1370, every record of its foundation being lost, the Chapter made another ordination of the chantry which was to be erected de novo § Up to this time it was dedicated to SS. Agnes, Cecilia, and Petronilla, henceforward it was under the patronage of St. Cecily alone.||

‡ In addition to these chantries, I find traces of others, some of which I believe were but of short continuance. In 1483 there was an altar to St. Ninian with a chantry for — Ferriby. There was also an altar dedicated to the Trinity. The chantry founded by Archbishop Zouch was under the patronage of SS. Mary Magdalene and Martha. The erection of it has been already noticed, but with its subsequent history I am entirely unacquainted. There was also a chantry founded by Adam de Acombe, and, in all probability, several others.

§ This inventory occurs in a little work called Excerpta Antiqua, which was published at York, by Mr. J. Croft, F.A.S., in 1797. I have been unable to discover the original, nor does Mr. Croft state where he met with it. I have, therefore, given the document as it is printed, making a few corrections where they are manifestly required.

The chief value of this inventory is that it tells us the furniture of the Church of York at the time of the Reformation. No subsequent list was made or required, for, Abrepto thesauro deficit thesanarii munus.

When Mary was on the throne several gifts were made to the minster. By will dated 11 June 1556, George Gale, alderman of York, bequeathed "to the Cathedrall Churche of York one frontclothe of purple, redde and blewe velvet, with the Resurrection upon it wrought in golde, for the highe altere, to be prayd for." By will dated 15 Apr., 1557, Sir Leonard Beckwith of York, knight, leaves "to the Cathedrall Churche one canapee of grene and reade sareenet under whiche the blessed Sacrament was wont to be borne."

In the reign of Elizabeth the final dispersion of the treasures of the Church of York, in all probability, took place.

The use of copes was strictly forbidden in the Archiepiscopal injunctions during that reign, and these orders were probably attended to. In 1691 there was a single "white cope" in the vestry. Torre, however, has left us a description of some hangings for the quire which were in existence in his day.

"Hangings belonging to the quire.

Eight pieces of blod [i.e. blew] with the arms of John Pakenham, treasurer, and Archbishop Kemp, at equall distances.

1. Quarterly. 1 and 4, quarterly gules and or, in first a cressant argent.—

2<sup>d</sup> and 3<sup>d</sup>, a, 3 cronells of a tilt spear sable, all encompassed with a border ingrailed, sable.

2. York see, impaling Kemp, viz., gu. 3 garbs, and border ingrailed.

Also there are 12 pieces of red, with the arms of the Lord Scrope of Massam wrought thereon at equall distances.

1. azure a bend, or, & fyle of three poynts argent.

2. A like coat [with the field, apparently, powdered with Cornish choughs, one of which is at the head of the shield].

A chalice of silver and guilt, 58 oz. A chalice of silver guilt, with a lyon and 4 scallop shells on the foot, 29 oz. A chalice of silver guilt with a crucifix on the foot, and patten, 22 oz. A round-footed chalice of silver and guilt, 13 oz. A round chalice, parcell guilt, 9 oz. A chalice of silver and guilt, with a crucifix on the foot, 19 oz. A pair of censors of gold, 17 oz. A shell of silver for the same censors, 1 oz. A box for singing bread, silver guilt, 11 oz. A box for singing bread, silver, 10 oz. A box for singing bread, of silver, 5 oz. A pair of great censors, of silver and guilt, 100 oz. A pair of great censors, of silver, 64 oz. Another pair of great censors, 64 oz. A pair of old censors, silver and guilt, 46 oz. Another pair of old censors, silver and guilt, 38 oz. Another pair of censors, silver and guilt, 44 oz. Two basons of golde for the high altar, 42 oz. Two little basons of silver, parcell guilt, with keys upon them, 30 oz. A sconce of silver, parcell guilt, 27 oz. Another sconce of silver, 18 oz. A ship, with a spoon, of silver and guilt, 21 oz. A ship, of silver, 7 oz. Two little crewitts of silver, parcell guilt, 7 oz. A shell of silver guilt, for salt, 2 oz. A bell of silver, 5 oz. A hat piece of silver, 3 oz. A pax of silver and guilt, Moreover there were 12 other pieces of white with red roses charged in the midst with an escocheon of the Lord Scrope's arms [az. a bend, or, over all a file of three points, argent].

On a cushion in the quire is embroydered these coats, viz.

1. az. three left hand gauntlets, or, impaling, sable, 3 leaves in bend, argent, between 3 cotizes, or.
2. Argent, a lyon passant, gules, inter 2 barrs, sa., thereon 2 bizants and 3 bucks' heads cabossed in chief, sa., (Parker) impaling, sa. 3 leaves in bend argent, between two cotizes, or.
3. Lozengee, gules & varye, (Tregoz) impaling sa., 3 leaves in bend, argent, between 2 cotizes, or.
4. sa., 3 leaves in bend, argent, between 2 cotizes, or, impaling, argent, a lyon rampant, sable, debruised by 3 barrs gemells, gules. (Fairfax)
5. Fairfax (ut supra) impaling Strelley, paly of 6 argent & azure, a canton ermine."

All these things have now disappeared. Two of the old wooden cases for vestments are, however, still preserved in the minster. They are especially valuable for the very beautiful ironwork with which they are decorated.

In the Cathedral at Durham the use of copes was retained till a very late period. In 1628 the virulent Peter Smart attacked Cosin for using them in that church. They were not thrown aside till the year 1760, when their rejection is thus mentioned by a local antiquary: "At the latter end of July or beginning of August, the old copes, those raggs of Popery, which had been used in the Communion service at the Abbey ever since the time of the Reformation, were ordered by the Dean & Chapter to be totally disused and laid aside. Dr. Warburton, one of the prebendaries and Bishop of Gloucester, was very zealous to have them laid aside, & so was Dr. Cowper the Dean." I have heard my father say that Dr. Warburton objected to them because they were always pushing his wig awry. They are still preserved in the library of the Dean and Chapter. Among them is one presented by Charles I., upon which, curiously enough, is represented the decapitation of St. John the Baptist.

9 oz. Three ampullas of silver, 40 oz. A tablet, of silver and guilt, unmelted, to sett on the altar, 110 oz. A pectoral of golde, with a rich stone in the middest, 13 oz. † This inventory was taken Nov. 11, 1681, when Nicholas Procter became vestry clerk. Shortly before this the church had sustained a great loss. On the night of Feb. 5, 1676, the vestry was broken into and the plate in the closets was carried off. The offender was never discovered. To supply the deficiency, Archbishop Sterne gave to the minster by will, in 1683, a gilt bason, two gilt flagons, one gilt paten and a gilt chalice with cover, all weighing 218 ounces. His successor, Archbishop Dolben, according to Gent, gave 195 ounces of plate to the church. Archbishop Lamplugh was also a great benefactor. Mr. Browne says that he gave to the minster "a covering for the communion table, of crimson velvet, richly adorned with gold and fringe, with a velvet hanging for the back of the altar; three pieces of fine tapestry for the same use, namely, one containing Moses found by Pharaoh's daughter; one representing God sending manna from heaven to the Israelites; and the third shewing Moses smiting the rock." It is to be observed that, after the robbery, no plate was kept in the vestry under the care of the clerk.

LVIII.—THE CONTRACT AND CHARGES FOR SETTING UP THE ORGAN.***

Articles of agreement indented, made, concluded and agreed, upon the one and twentieth day of March, anno Domini 1632, betweene the right worshippful John Scot, doctor of divinitie,

* We have now the contract and the charges for setting up the organ in the minster in the earlier part of the reign of Charles I. They occur in the register of the leases of the Dean and Chapter between the years 1624 and 1640. Mr. Crosse has already given them, but by no means accurately, in his account of the great musical festival in the minster in 1825.

It appears that on the 26th of July, 1631, a fine of £1000 was very properly imposed in the court of the high commission at York on Edward Paler of Thoraldby, a Yorkshire esquire, for the crime of incest which he had committed with his sister's daughter, Elizabeth wife of Francis Bulmer. The Dean and residentiaries ask the king to grant this fine to them for "repaireing the ruines of the said Cathedrall Church, for setting up a new organ, for furnishing and adorning the altar, and enhabling them to mainteyne a library keeper." Their request was granted on the 28 Nov., 1632, and in the following document we see how the money was laid out.

In 1634 two travelling parties paid a visit to York: each of them has left us an account of their journey and a description of the York organ. Sir Wm. Brereton speaks of a very stately organ lately erected in the minster-quire, under which is written, "Benedictus Deus patrum nostrum, Qui dedit in corde regis ut adornaret domum suam."

In the extracts from the journal of the three Norwich gentlemen which are given in the Graphic Illustrator there is the following description of the minster on a Sunday.

"We heard a domestical chaplain of the Lord Archbishop's preach, the pulpit standing in the midst betweene the quire, high altar, Archbishop's seat and organ, of which we are able to give an account, as we are bound. There we saw and heard a faire, large, high organ, newly built, richly guilt, carv'd and painted; a deep and sweet snowy robe of quiristers, a Paul's crosse auditory: the Lord Mayor in his golde chaine, with his 12 grave brethren, 2 sheriffs, 2 Esqrs., vizt., the sword bearer, and his left hand marcher with the great mace, the recorder, many serjeants with small maces, etc. The gentle vice-president, with his grave and learned counselle, discreet knights, his mace and guard, representing (next under the Lord President, now Lord Lieutenant of Ireland) a prince: many other worthy knights and gallant ladies that reside in that old city being most there present, with their handsome retinue, did represent a second London."

There is another description of the organ and minster, under very different circumstances, which I cannot refrain from giving. It is to be found in a very curious and scarce volume called Musick's Monument, written by Thomas Mace, one of the lay-clerks in the chapel of Trinity College in Cambridge, and published in 1676, in folio. It is very picturesque and interesting, and shews, among other things, the antiquity of the custom which still prevails of singing a psalm before the sermon. The author is speaking of the best psalm singing that he had heard— "The time when was in the year 1644, the place where was in the stately Cathedral Church of the loyal city York. The occasion of it was the great and close siege which was then laid to that city and strictly maintained for eleven weeks' space by three very notable and considerable great armies. By this occasion, there were shut up within that city abundance of people of the best rank and quality, viz., lords, knights and gentlemen of the countries round about, besides the soildiers and citizens, who all, or most of them, came constantly every Sunday to hear publick prayers and sermon in that spacious Church. And indeed their number was so exceedingly great, that the Church was (I may say) even cramming or squeezing

Deane of the Cathedrall and Metropoliticall Church of St. Peter of Yorke; Phinces Hodson, doctor of divinitie, chancellor and canon residentiary of the said Church; George Stanhope, doctor of divinity, precentor and canon residentiary of the same Church, and Henry Wickham, doctor of divinitie, archdeacon of Yorke and canon residentiary of the said Church, of the one party, and Robert Dallam, citizen and blacksmith of London, of the other party, touchinge the makeinge of a great organ for the said Church, as followeth.

The names and number of the stoppes or settts of pipes for the said great organ to be new made, every stopp containeinge fiftie one pipes, the said great organ containeinge eight stoppes.

In primis, two open diapasons of tynn to stand in sight, many of them to be chased, 80*l.* Item, one diapason stopp of wood, 10*l.* Item, two principalls of tynn, 24*l.* Item, one twelft to the diapason, 8*l.* Item, one small principall of tynn, 6*l.* Item, one recorder unison to the said small principall, 6*l.* Item, one two and twentieth 5*l.* Item, the great sound board with conveyances, windchestes, carryages and conduits of lead, 40*l.* Item, the rowler board, carryages and keyes, 20*l.*

full. Now here you must take notice, that they then had a custom in that Church (which I hear not of in any other Cathedral) which was that always, before the sermon, the whole congregation sang a psalm, together with the quire and the organ; and you must also know, that there was then a most excellent large-plump-lusty-full-speaking-organ, which cost (as I am credibly informed) a thousand pounds. This organ, I say (when the Psalm was set before the sermon) being let out into all its fulness of stops, together with the quire, began the psalm. But when that vast conchording unity of the whole congregational chorus came (as I may say) thundering in, even so as it made the very ground shake under us; (oh the unutterable ravishing soul's delight!) in the which I was so transported and wrapt up into high contemplations, that there was no room left in my whole man, viz. body, soul and spirit, for anything below divine and heavenly rapture. If at any time or place, such a congregated number could perform such an outward service to the Almighty, with true-ardent-inward-devotion, fervency and affectionate-zeal, in expectation to have it accepted by Him; doubtless it ought to be believ'd, that it might be and was done there and then. Because that at that time, the desperateness and dismaidness of their danger could not but draw them into it, in regard the enemy was so very near, and fierce upon them, especially on that side the city where the Church stood, who had planted their great guns so mischievously against the Church, and with which constantly in prayers' time they would not fail to make their hellish disturbance, by shooting against and battering the Church, in so much that sometimes a canon bullet has come in at the windows and bouc'd about from pillar to pillar, (even like some furious fiend or evil spirit) backwards and forwards, and all manner of side-ways, as it has happened to meet with square or round opposition amongst the pillars, in its returns or rebounds, untill its force has been quite spent. And here there is one thing most eminently remarkable, and well worth noting, which was, that in all the whole time of the siege, there was not any one person (that I could hear of) did (in the Church) receive the least harm by any of their devillish canon shot: and I verily believe, there were constantly many more then a thousand persons at that service every Sunday, during the whole time of that siege."

The names and numbers of stoppes of pipes for the chaire organ, every stopp containeinge fifty one pipes, the said chaire organ containeinge five stoppes.

In primis, one diapason of wood, 10*l*. Item, one principall of tynn to stand in sight, many of them to be chased, 12*l*. Item, one flute of wood, 8*l*. Item, one small principall of tynn, 5*l*. Item, one recorder of tynn unison to the voice, 8*l*. Item, the sound board, windchest, drawinge stoppes, conveyances and conduits, 30*l*. Item, the rowler board, carriages, and keyes, 10*l*. Item, the three bellowes with winde trunckes and iron workes and other thinges thereto, 15*l*. Summe totall 297*l*.

It is agreed by and betweene the parties above said, and the said Robert Dallam doth covenant, promise, and grant, for him, his executors and administrators, to and with the saide Deane and canons residentiary above named, by these presents, that he the said Robert Dallam, his executors and administrators, shall and will well and sufficiently, and workemanlike, new make and finishe the said organs in every the particulars before mencioned, accordinge to the true intent and meaninge hereof, before the feast of the nativitie of Saint John Baptist which shall be in the yeare of our Lord God 1634. Speaking of this plate, Sir Wm. The three Norwich gentlemen tell us "The sumptuous ornaments & vestments belonging to this Cathedrall are carefully kept in the vestry ; viz<sup>r</sup> the gorgeous canopy, the rich communion table cloths, the copes of embroider'd velvet, cloth of gold, silver and tissue, of great worth and value. LIX.—TWO LETTERS ADDRESSED BY CHARLES I. TO THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF YORK.* [Register of Leases, 1624—1640. 114. b.]

CHARLES R.

Trusty and welbeloved, wee greet you well. When wee were lately in our Cathedral Church of St. Peter's in Yorke,

* In the month of May, 1633, Charles I. visited York on his way to Scotland. Drake gives a long account of his splendid reception in the city. There is, however, an official description of the visit with which Drake was unacquainted and which I now give. It occurs at the commencement of the first of the seven volumes of annotations on the liturgies which were compiled by that most learned and little-known scholar, Marmaduke Fothergill. These volumes are worthy of a careful examination. Fothergill transcribed this account into his book from the acts of the Dean and Chapter.

1633. The king's reception at York Minster. Before the king's coming to York, all the dignitaries and prebendaries of the Church were summoned to appear in a general Chapter on the 22nd day of May, 1633, and none then (excepting Dr Cozens, archdeacon of the East Riding) appearing, they were pronounced and declared to be contumacious, etc.; and the act upon his coming is this.

Die Veneris 24<sup>to</sup>, viz., die mensis Maii, anno Domini 1633, illustrissimus in Christo princeps, dominus noster Carolus, Dei gratia etc., cum plurimis proceribus et magnatibus hujus regni comitatus, et pompa regia præfulgens, ad hanc

there to give God thanks for our safety thus farr onward of our journey towards Scotland, wee observed at the west end of that Church, where wee entred, certaine houses built on either side close upon the wall, and one within the very cross isle, which wee conceive tend much to the detriment of the Church, and altogether to the disgrace of that goodly fabrieke. After this, lookeinge aside, wee sawe the like meane tenementes in many places erected upon the south side of the Church, which gave us cause to enforme our selfe of that great abuse in buildeing houses and stables with their uncleane passages a great deale too neare to the house of God. Wee likewise observed, when wee came up into the quire, that there had been a removeing of divers seates, which, wee after understood, were placed there for the use of the wyves of the Deane and prebends and other woemen of quality, and, particularly one seat remayneing which incloseth three or fower stalls belongeing to the archdeacons and prebends; all which seates, and that especially, cannot but bee a great trouble to the service in the Church, and a great blemish to soe goodly a quire, as wee found yt to bee, and doe utterly dislyke that such seats as they should any way be continued there. Our expresse will and pleasure, therefore, is, and soc wee will and commaund, that neither you, the Deane and Chapter for the time being, nor any other Deane and Chapter that shall hereafter bee, doe either cause or suffer any dwelling house, stable, or other edyfiee to be built within or against any part of that our Cathedral Church aforesaid, or the quire or chapter house of the same, and, further, that neither you nor they civitatem, Ebor., (Deo duce,) aeventavit; et per portam quæ vulgo dicitur Micklegate Bar, civitatem ingressus, ad hanc ecclesiam Cathedralem et Metropoliticam Sancti Petri Ebor. recta devenit; qui, ut primum pervenisset, discendebat e curru, quem ad vitandam pluviam concendisset, et (ad?) ostium occidentale ejusdem Ecclesiae, flexis genibus, Deum Omnipotentem, per Quem reges regnant et principes dominantur, adoravit. Et deinde in Ecclesiam paulo progressus, consistebat prope lavaerum seu baptisterium, ubi venerabilis vir Henrieus Wickham S.T.P. archidiaconus Ebor. et canonicus residentiarius hujus Ecclesiae, (domino rego in cathedra ibidem parata prius discubiente), oratione Latina adventum regum gratulatur; quæ oratione finita, assurgens rex processit in chorum, venerabilibus viris Johaune Scot S.T.P., Decano dictæ Ecclesiae, Georgio Stanhope S.T.P., pracentore, Phinia Hodgson, cancellario, ac prefato Henrico Wickham, S.T.P., et aliis canonicis dictæ Ecclesie velamen seu canopeum baculis deargentatis impositum, super dominum regem stantibus: et peractis solemniter divinis recessit in navem Ecclesiae, et canopeo, ut prefertur, elato, ambulavit in dominum capitularem, et inde reversus cum in medio ambulacro paulisper ambulasset, profectus ad manerium seu palatium Sancte Mariae Ebor.

The fruits of this visit were some very proper orders to the Dean and Chapter about their Cathedral. Charles, at the same time, took the opportunity of administering a sharp rebuke to the Chapter and the Archbishop for wasting their revenues and aggrandizing themselves by long leases in which their friends and kinsmen had an especial interest.

renew any lease or leases of any of the houses, stables or other edifyses whatsoever, which are already built against the walles of the said Church, quire or chapter house, for any yeare or term of yeares whatsoever, but that yee suffer the leases now running to expire, and then pull downe the houses, or sooner if any shall be soe well minded to the Church as to relinquish their dwelling, but wee will that the house within the cross isle be forthwith pulled downe. And our further express will and command is, that the seate which incloseth the stalles aforesaid be presently taken downe, and set upp noe more, as alsoe that all the seats which were now taken downe against our comeing (the Lord Archbishop's throne excepted) be never sett up againe, that soe the quire may ever remaine in its auncyent beauty: and yet that woemen of quality may have fayre and free access thither to performe their service to God, our expresse will and pleasure is, that there be a fayre seate left or made upon the north side of the quire, above the stalls, for the Lord President's lady and her company and noe other: and, likewise, that there be moveable benches or chayres for other woemen of quallity, when they come to church, which may be putt into the vestry or some other convenient place, at all such tymes as they are not used. And, lastly, our express command is that these our lettres be kept safe by you the Deane and Chapter in the place where you keepe your evydences; and, further, that a copie be likewise transcribed by your officer and delivered to our right trusty and wellbeloved counsellor, the most reverend father in God, Richard now L<sup>a</sup> Archbishop of York, and soe to every Archbischopp from tyme to tyme, that he and they, successively, may have care of the performance of this our will and command; and all this wee strictly enjoyne yow, the Deane and Chapter, carefully to obey and putt in execucion in every part, according to our royall intencion before expressed, to the honor of God and His house, as yow or any of you will answere the neglect hereof in any particuler at your utmost perill. Given at our palace in Yorke, May the 27th, and in the ninth yeare of our raigne.

To our trusty and wellbeloved the Deane and Chapter of our Cathedrall Church of Sanct Peter's in our cittie of Yorke.

II. Trusty and wellbeloved, wee greet you well. At our late being in Yorke wee tooke order by our letters that noe seat or seats should be sett above the stalls on either side of the quire, save onely the Archbischop's throne on the one side, where the Lord President sitts with the Lord Archbischop, and one seat on the other syde for the Lord President's lady and her company: und this wee did command that the quire might be kept in its auncient beauty and not be filled up with so many seates. Now, for this buisines, though wee tooke all the care wee could, yet because the time of our stay was but short, wee cold not eniforme ourselfe so throughly of every circumstance as wee intended to have done, for since, wee finde that the seate which was lately appointed for the counsell of fee in ordinary, and stood just before the place where the Lord President sitts, may well be sett up againe, without any disgrace to the quire, because it doth not goe further into the breadth then the stalles and seats before them doe, and wee further fynde that if they have not a seat by themselves the company is many tymes so great that they can have litle or noe roome in the stalls; but the reason that moves us most is to take of all dislikes which were like to arise about choyee of places in the Church between barronetts, knights and our counsell of fee, which might perhaps breed differences amongst them, to the great disturbance of the country and of our service there especially. Our express will and pleasure, therefore, is, in this perticuler, to dispense with our former letters; and wee doe hereby commaund you, the Deane and Chapter, to see this seat sett up againe, in decent manner, before the place where the Lord President sitts, but to take care that the seat be not too high, and that it extend not into the breadth beyond the auncient stalles and seats, and for your soe docing this shall bee your sufficient warrant, but for all other perticulers whatsoever wee will have our former letters fully obeyed. Given at our court at Edinburgh this two and twentieth of June in the ninth yeare of our raigne, 1633.

To our trusty and wellbeloved the Deane and Chapter of Yorke.

LX. LETTRES FROM THE LORD KEEPER AND THE LORD ARCHBISHOP OF YORKE TOUCHING THE LORD MAIOR HIS SITTING IN THE STALL OF THE ARCHDEACON OF YORKE, 1633.*

[Register book 1624—1640. 116. b.]

After our very hartie commendacions; whereas some question

* This letter relates to a frequently disputed point, the right of the Lord Mayor to occupy a particular seat in the Minster. Few subjects have occasioned hath lateley arisen betweene you concerning a place or seat in the quver of the Cathedrall Church of Yorke, which out of our well wishing to the Church and cyttie we have been desirous to compose; for which purpose I, the keeper of the seale, have formerly written lettres to you, the lord mayor and the aldermen your brethren, and I, the Archbishop of Yorke, to you doctor Wickham, to which you have severally returned your answears, and you the lord mayor and your brethren, have sent upp certificates from twenty severall persons testifieing that long before the erection of the pew or particion for the Lord President's ladic, the lord mayor of Yorke did usually sitt in the stall in question, and did give onely place to accomodate the Lord President's lady; but, with all, you did by your lettre to me the keeper of the seale declare that you did not desire, neyther was it ever in your thoughts, to challenge any place their of right; but only that doctor Wickham would be pleased to yeild that faire respect to the lord mayor of that cyttie which his predecessors, tyme out of mind, had formerlie done: we being perswaded that this controversie hath growne by some misunderstanding of each other's intencion, or by some miscarriage of more contention. I append a roval mandate to the Lord Mayor, relating to the use of his insignia of office in the Minster. It is printed in the appendix to Drake's Eburacum, lxxii.

"The king's letter that the L<sup>d</sup> Maior shall not bear his ensigns in the Church, and for receiving the Communion etc.

CHARLES R.

Right trustie and welbeloved, and trustie and welbeloved, we greet you well. Whereas for the preservation of the solemnite of divine service in some of our Cathedral churches, and for the good of the inhabitants of those cities, we have required the maiors, aldermen and their companies to frequent those holy places upon Sundays and Holydays with all due reverence; and that they be there at the begining of divine service, and at their going out and coming in and whilst they are there, carry themselves so as becometh them in obedience to the canons of the church and the customs of those Cathedrals; requiring also the maiors of those cities that they shall not use the ensigns of their authority within our said Cathedral churches, that hereafter the distinct liberties and privileges granted by our royal progenitors to those several bodies be inviolably kept: We, therefore, casting the same gracious eye upon our Cathedral and Metropolitical Church of St. Peter in our citie of York, to have it regulated in like manner, doe hereby require you according to your several duties to take care for the due performance of all the said orders in that Church. And, farther, that as well you, the Lord Maior, as also the recorder & aldermen, at some solemn times every year, shall receive the Holy Communion in the said Cathedral Church of York, to manifest your conformitie to the orders established in the said Church. Given under our signet at our Court at Greenwich the second day of July in the thirteenth year of our reign 16[37].

To our right trustie and welbeloved the Lord Maior of our citie of York, and to our trustie and welbeloved the Recorder and Aldermen of our said citie."

The Lord Mayor & Aldermen still pay an occasional visit to the Minster, with the sword & mace borne in state before them. When he passes the stall of the residentiary the Lord Mayor bows to him, in deference to his authority in that place.

some message betweene you, for that we are confident that you, Doctor Wickham, would willingly have afforded as much respect as any your predecessors did to the lord mayor, and magistrates of that eittie, soe as it might not tend in derogation of the right belonging to you, and to your successors, we have thought fitt to address these our joynt lettres to yow both, praying you for avoyding all further mistakeings to meete and treat together, and we do advise you the lord mayor to make noe other chal lange, but accordinge to the said lettrec, and you, Doctor Wickham, without prejudice to the right of your place or succession, to give way unto it in that manner as a respect to the civill magistrate. And to prevent all misunderstanding hereafter, that a trew copie of this our lettrec may be registered as well in the chapter booke of that Church, as alsoe amongst the recordes of the cytty, which wil be a meanes that the cytty wilbe carefull not to presse too farr on the Church in future tymes; and the Church will have noe cause to feare that there performance of any respect to the cytty should endanger their ryght. This we wish as a fitt accommodacion in this busines, which we are confident you will willingly harken to on both sides, and shall never have cause to repent it, and soc we rest,

Your Lordship's and your verie loveing freindes, xxv. Novembr' 1633. Tho. COVENTRIE, RICHARD EBOR.

To the right honorable our verie good lord, the Lord Mayor of Yorke, and to the right worshipfull our verie good freind doctor Wickham.

LXI.—TWO LETTERS TO SECURE THE RENTS ATTACHED TO THE FABRIC OF THE MINSTER.*

I.—To the right honorable William Earle of Newcastle, his excellencie, generall of all his Ma<sup>ties</sup> forces in the North, the humble

* From a draft of the original petition which is preserved among the muniments of the Dean and Chapter. The fabrie fund at York has always been inconsiderable, and the abstraction of the rents mentioned in this petition would be seriously felt. Towards the close of the century the fund received a considerable addition in a gift of £1000 which was made by the Earl of Strafford. It was laid out in the purchase of lands at Barrowby and Little Leek in the North Riding. The Earl announces his intended gift to the Dean in the following letter.

“ W. Woodhouse, 30th Aug: 87.

“ Sir

“ I had long since a letter w<sup>ch</sup> yourselfe & ye prebends were pleas'd to write mee, w<sup>ch</sup> ill health & several accidents has kept mee from acknowledging sooner, & I begg your pardons for. Things are in so ill a condition in Irland, where ye greatest part of my estate now is, and my debts are so great, as I cannot petition of the residentiaries of the Cathedrall and Metropoliticall Church of St. Petter's in Yorke.

Humbly sheweth, that whereas for the necessary upholding and repaireing of the goodly structure of the Cathedral and Metropoliticall Church of St. Peter's in Yorke, the revenues, considering the certaine payments issuinge yearly out of them, are verie small: and that the sum of fortie eight poundes, parte of these revenues, hath a longe tyme bin paid out of the lands lyinge in Kirkby Hall, Thorp Underwood and Wyddington in the parish of Little Usburne, within the North Rydinge of Yorke, till the beginninge of this Parliament; but hath ever since bin arreare, whereby divers parts of the Church are fallen into great ruine. May it therefore please your excellencie, that whereas all legall courses (for releife in this kinde) are now taken away, you would vouchsafe to cast a gracious eye of compassion upon the fabricke of this Church, and cause Thomas Dickinson,† mercheant of Yorke, William Dickinson of Kirkby Hall, and John Weddall‡ of Widdington, or anie other tennants in whose present possession the aforesaid lands are in, to pay such summs forthwith as are now behinde, and alsoe suche, as shall from doe what I desire; but, besids a decent tombe I intend for my father, <sup>wch</sup> shall not be unbecoming ye minster of Yorke, I will, by ye grace of God, give a thousd<sup>d</sup> p<sup>d</sup> to ye Church. I hope I may live to see this done, but, if I doe not, it shall be provided for in my will, & I shall shortly send and advise further with you about it: in the meane time I could not longer omitt writeing to you haveing so good an oportunity, as by this gentleman, Mons<sup>t</sup> Sequeville, whom I should be very glad likewise to serve, it being a generall duty to endeavour it in ye deplorable case of ye French Protestants, & I being oblidg to him for particular relations, & I should be exceeding glad (if) any of my friends could help mee uppon y<sup>t</sup> account. Sir, I shall now only adde my humble service, & rest,

"Your affectionate, faithfull friend & servant,
"STRAFFORDE.

" For Doctor Wickham, Deane of Yorke."

The pious Earl died in 1695 and the sum of money, which he mentions, came into the hands of the Chapter as a legacy in his will. He was the son of a noble-hearted gentleman who is well known to history and to fame. The father lies among his ancestors in the humble church at Wentworth; the son sleeps in the stately Minster, which he enriched, among the illustrious dead. His wife is resting by his side, a worthy daughter of the house of Stanley and it was to commemorate her that the affectionate husband made this splendid gift to the Cathedral, "the place for the worship of God," as he himself says, "being fittest for the memoriall of a Saint and the daughter of a Saint." They had, unfortunately, no children, and the second Earl of Strafford was the last.

† Thomas Dickenson, merchant, was Sheriff of York in 1640 and Lord Mayor in 1647 and 1657. He was also one of the members for the city between 1654 and 1660. He was knighted by Cromwell and was the novus homo of a family which acquired some little wealth and position. In 1657 he was instrumental in obtaining some new bells for the minster. Drake tells us that he was "a mighty man against his royal master."

‡ The Weddells of Widdington and Earswick were a family of some consequence. Their wealth was derived from trade in York. They are now represented by Earl de Grey.

II.—My Lord Maior for fabrick rents.*

Gentlemen,

We understand that the surveyors of the Deane and Chapter's lands intend to retorne parte of the fabrick lands by this post, and other parte thereof by the next, distinctly, by themselves. Yow know what an ornament and of what publique use the Minster is to this cittie, we have therefore writt to Mr. Bowles† to gett a peticion drawne for eontinuance of those rents to the use for which they were given, and doe earnestly desire your care and assistance therein; and upon Mr. Bowle's retorne hither that you thinke fitt, and we are assured he will be carefull to observe your directions: soe in assurance of your care herein we remayne

Your assured frindes;

LEON. THOMSON, Maior.‡

HE. THOMSON.

ROBT. HORNER.

Yorke, the 22nd of January, 1649.

In dorso. For the right worshipfull Sir William Allanson, Knt., and Thomas Hoyle, Esq.,§ members of the Parliament at Westminster. Seal oval—arms of York in bold relief with the legend Signaculum Eboracensium.

* This letter has also been printed by Drake. I give it from a copy among the records of the Chapter. It evinces the solicitude which the Corporation felt for the welfare of the Minster, a feeling which is not yet extinct.

† An excellent and pious Puritan divine whose name is well known to every one who is acquainted with the ecclesiastical history of that period. It is said that the Deanery of York was offered to him after the Restoration, if he would conform, but he would not accept it on those conditions.

‡ Each of the three gentlemen who sign this letter was a person of wealth and consequence in York and the founder of a family which, in one case, is still flourishing in affluence.

§ Members for the city for a long period. Both of them were citizens of York and had passed through the civic offices. Allenson was a draper and lived in the Pavement. In 1633 he received the honour of knighthood from the hands of Charles I., who dined with him at his house when he was Lord Mayor. Thomas Hoyle was a merchant of some consequence. Eight days after this letter was written he hanged himself in his garden at Westminster, on an apple tree, on the first anniversary of the murder of King Charles I., against whom, according to Drake, "he had been an active man." The royalists did not neglect to "improve" the occasion, and celebrated his death in a satirical ballad.

LXII.—A LIST OF THE THINGS WHICH WERE TAKEN AWAY FROM THE MINSTER OF YORK DURING THE GREAT REBELLION.***

Two guilt candlesticks, and three little plates were sold by Mr. Dossey, by order from the Lord Maior. There was three

* A very valuable document which makes us acquainted with the greater part of the injuries which the Minster received during the great rebellion. I say, "the greater part," because the Minster, according to Mace, did actually receive some injury from the artillery during the siege in 1644, which is not here alluded to. The mischief, it will be observed, was by no means inconsiderable. The injury done to the splendid organ, which had been recently erected, would be severely felt, and we learn, with sorrow and regret, the fate of the many and splendid brasses "which formerly shone like embroidery."

The Chapter house, according to the York historians, had a very narrow escape. It is stated that the Parliament actually made a grant of it to a native of York who intended to destroy it and build himself stables with the materials! By some happy chance this catastrophe was averted. Drake, also, tells us that there was a sword, in his time, in the vestry, which had been "taken from a buff-coated Oliverian, who, equally drunk with liquor and spleen, had irreverently entered the Church with his drawn blade."

It is most surprising that the painted glass in the Minster is still so complete. Drake accounts for it by saying that Thomas Lord Fairfax directed it to be taken down and carefully stowed away during the days of turbulence and commotion. Torre, indeed, hints that some of it was not restored. It is probable enough that Fairfax did really take care of it and on that account he is entitled to the gratitude of the County and City of York. The great charter-horn of the Minster came into his possession, but it was duly restored by his successor in the title, Henry Lord Fairfax, in 1673.

There is no family in Yorkshire in which talent, energy and valour have been so conspicuous as in that of Fairfax. The star of that great house was undoubtedly the Parliamentary General. To him Cromwell was indebted for his throne and if it had pleased him to have held up but a finger against Monk, Charles II. would never have returned to England. He deserted his party when violent counsels carried the day against his, comparatively speaking, temperate opposition to regal domination. In his retirement he was not forgetful of the duties of religion and of those gentle tastes which have made his name illustrious. It was a high distinction to be the patron of such men as John Rushworth, Matthew Poole and Roger Dodsworth. With a few extracts from the will of this distinguished man I am tempted to close the text of this work. It is almost unknown, and some of my readers will be glad to know how the victorious general could make his preparations for death. That solemn document was drawn up about four years before his decease, on the 8th of November, 1677. He was "something infirme in body" when he made it and he says "I committ my soule unto Almighty God who created it, butt it being by originall corrupcion made an unfitt offeringe for His pure and divine majestie, I hope through the mercyes & by the merits of the precious blood of Jesus Christ, my onely Saviour & Redeemer, (in whome I trust) Hee will make mee a fitt partaker of that glorious inheritance which Hee hath prepared for all those that beleive in Him; and I desire with all humble and hearty acknowledgments, to expresse my great thanckfullness unto God for the many preservacons I have had in those hazardous imployments and daingerous encounters I have mett with in the course of my pilgrimage in this troublesome world, which I ought and desire for ever to praise him for: and my body I committ to the earth, and desire (if itt cann conveniently bee) that it may bee copes taken away by order of the committee by the sequestrators, Mr. Seamor, Francis Cundall, George Peckett and William Wawdby. The organ pipes, and the brasse deske, in the quire, and a statute of brasse, which lay without the closett where six of clocke prayers is, and all the brasse which was taken of the grave stones, was sold by Mr. Dossey. There was one greate iron chestt in the vestry was sold by Alderman Topham and Alderman Dawson to Thomas Squire and James Jolly. There was fower little pewter candlesticks, and three little ewers sold by them, but to whome I know nott.—JAMES SCRUTON.

buried neare unto the body of my most honoured and deare wife in the parish church of Bilbrough, in such a manner as may bee convenient, and decent rather than pompous. To my cozens, Mr. Bryan Fairfax & Mr. John Rushworth £10 each to buy mourning. To Mr. Richard Stretton, my domestike chaplaine, my tythes at Bilbrough for 60 years, & hee to supply the office of a preaching minister there: I give him one sett of the great Pollyglott Bibles. To Mr. Matthew Poole £10, towards the carrying on of his Synopsis of the Creticks. To John Hill, sonne of Robert Hill of Oxton, £10 towards his maintenance at the Universitie. To my late servant, John Denonley, who received a maime in my service disableing him to earne his living, a farme of 40s per ann. in Boulton Percy. Item my will is that my executors shall have my bookes at Appleton (except those manuscripts of Mr. Dodsworth's collecting, and other manuscripts at Appleton aforesaid which I give to the University of Oxford to be kept in the University Library there) the better to enable them to pay my legacies & funerall expences, & I give each of them a horse or mare, after the Duke or Dutches of Buckingham have chosen out six horses."

How sad it is to turn from the father to the son-in-law, and to find the name and wealth of a noble house disgraced and dispersed by the reckless debauchery of the profligate Villiers. That singular and illfated man was greatly addicted to the study of chemistry and, as Drake humorously observes, "if he did not find out the philosopher's stone by it, it is certain he knew a way of dissolving, or evaporating gold and other metals, quicker than any man of that age."

GLOSSARY.

A

AISIAMENTUM, 17. An easement. A legal term of frequent occurrence.

ALBA. The alb. The mediæval vestments and service books have been so frequently described that it is unnecessary to mention them here. An excellent and faithful account of them will be found in Dr. Rock's Church of our Fathers, a work to which I am under great obligations.

ALLEY, 116. An aisle or any compartment of a church, a word in common use in the North of England, especially at Durham (Rites of Durham). In 1358 Sir Robert Hilton, of Swine, in Holderness, obtains permission "ad animas Matildæ et Margeriæ, filiarum suarum, in posteriori parte porticus sive aulæ S. Trin. in eccl. par. de Swyna sepultrum in loco eminentiori et denotiori dicti porticus sive alæ, in quo quidem loco idem miles inteduit sepeliri cum aliis amicis et propinquis suis transferendum" (Reg. Thoresby). The word is also applied to the central division of a church. In 1565 Richard Binks, of Richmond, desires to be buried "in the mydde allie, before the quere dore" (Richmondshire Wills, 180). Mr. Hunter applies it to any passage between the pews, and this is the modern use of the word in South Durham.

ALMARIOLUM, 75. "A lytell almary or a cobborde" (Prompt. Parv.) cf. Test. Ebor. ii. 53. "For locks, etc., for six doors of an almariole in the vestry for keeping the vestments in" (Brayley's Westminster Hall, 167). Two of the old cases of wood for vestments, which from their shape are generally called triangles, are still preserved in York Minster. They are covered with the most beautiful iron-work. In the appendix to the Hist. Dunelm. Scriptores Tres., 445, are the expenses incurred in making an almariole.

ALMERY, 113. A closet or press of any kind. Vide Prompt. Parv. sub. voce. The word is technically applied to the recess by the side of an altar to contain plate or vestments. There is little difference between this and the preceding word. A perfect range of almeries, with all their fittings, may still be seen in the office of the Chapter clerk at York. The only perfect specimen of a church-almery that I have seen was in the old church at Richmond in Yorkshire. cf. Gloss. of Architecture.

ALUMPNYNG, 130. 2. Limning or illuminating. "Pro alumnyng trium gradalium, 40s. Pro alumpnacione magni gradalis, 20s." At p. 165 will be found an unique contract for writing and illuminating a service book.

AMBO. A kind of pulpit from which sermons were preached, and the epistle and gospel read (Church of our Fathers, i, 211, etc.) At York there was one in the choir (89), and another in the Chapter-house (231); the latter was probably used as a rostrum. In 1501, Elias Casse, of Beverley, leaves 5 marks for the buying "ambonis scituandæ ad finem borialem summi altaris, eccl. B.M. ubi legitur sanctum Dei evangeliū."

AMPULLES, 308. A little bottle or cruse which contained the famous Canterbury water, or the oil and water which was connected, in a miraculous way, with some shrine or Saint. They were made of lead, pewter, or other substances. Dr. Rock gives an engraving of one which is in the museum of York. I have seen another which is in private hands in the same city.

ANORMENTS, 299. Ornaments. In 1540, Fr. Morley, Esq., leaves "to the reparacion of and annournenament of the quere of Saynt Katryne in Mellyng church, 6s. 8d." — Richmondshire Wills, 21.

ANXAGIA, 105. Goose-grease, or, simply, lard. In 1346-7 the monks of Holy Island buy axurgia porcina, i.e., hog's lard for the wheels of their carts (Raine's North Durham, 80).

ARCHEBANDS, 52.

ASCELWOD. Hasels, used in burning lime, 34, 37, etc., cf. Test. Ebor. ii. 23. In 1423, at his death, Archbishop Bowet had 2000 "ascelwood," worth 40s.

ASHELERS. Squared stones for building, cf. Gloss of Architecture. In 1433 the Chapter of York sell 23 dolea of ashelers to the mayor and citizens of York, who were then erecting their guild-hall.

ASSERES, 23. Laths. cf., Glossary to the Priory of Finchale, sub voce.

ASTILLAR', 12. "In j corda pro fonte astillar'." Messrs. Britton and Brayley make it equivalent to hostillaria or hosteltry, "For working about that pent-house which is for the lodgings of the masons in hosteltry, i.e., astellaria." Hist. of Westminster, 122. Anno 1319. An astell is a shide or board, and astellaria may be nothing more than a shed or barrack for the temporary accommodation of the masons.

AULODIUM, 252. In 1472 "unum aulodium," is out of repair in the prebendal house of Ampleford, but it is by no means clear what this is. The word lodium will occur in its proper place.

AURICALCUM, 79. Brass. Pro factura catherinum de auricalco pro candelabris. In 1496, William Ward, of York, clerk, leaves to the college at Lowthorp "unum par magnorum candelabrorum de auricaleo."

AURICULARE, 166. A pillow or cushion. Pulvinar (Ducange). There were several of them in the treasury at Windsor (Dugdale's Mon.), and the monks of Wearmouth possessed one which was laid under their book of the gospels on great days.—Compt. domus de Wermouth, 153.

AURIFRICIUM. An orphray, q. v.

BACON, BAKON, 41, the same as batten? Mr. Wright says of the word batten, that it is "a rail from 3 to 6 inches broad and 1 or more thick." Batte, staffe. Prompt. Parv. cf. Boucher. Batten, in the North, means a bundle.

BAGYRNES, 98. "Les bag de welwit et les ringges vel bagyrnes de argento,"—a passage which requires no explanation. In 1496, Dame Margery Salvin leaves to "my gosip Richard Potear of London a pair of bagyrons of sylver and enameled."

BALACE, 214. A ruby—"cujus rubor et fulgor dilutiores sunt." DUCANGE. Gallicè Balais. In 1507, Lady Stapleton, of Wighill, leaves to her daughter Norton "a ryng wt a balys." cf. Expenses of the Princess Mary, 209.

BALK. A beam of wood, and, also, of iron. Among the stores in 1399 was "j balke ferri cum les scales et ponderibus." In 1433, "ij quercus squararatae" were bought "pro balkes," 52. cf. Hist. Dunelm. Scr. Tres., app., exc., and Boucher's Glossary. In 1432, Isabel Hamerton leaves "instrumentum ferreum pro camino aulae, vocatum balk,"—this, in the North, is generally called the rannal-balk. Circa 1500, the receiver at Howden pays 2s. 11d. "pro balk-hookes infra orreum,"

BANDS, cross bars,—or fillets,—for a door. "In j magno clog pro bandes pro januis," 8. In 1433, "vj band-clogs" are bought, 53. "Pro factura xij bandees," 3s. Comp. Thos. Ayer, apud Dunelm. 1433.

BANDWYMBYLL, 207. An anger for making bands.

BANQUER, 227. A covering for a table, bench or altar. Of frequent occurrence.

BASTERDWALLTIELL, 95.

BATELLA, 57, etc. A boat. Cymba. Ducange.

BATELLAGIUM. The charge of conveyance by boat, in English called ferilay. cf. Wearmouth Rolls, 249.

49, 52, etc. Quod pro batello seu nave solvitur—Naulum. Ducange. cf. Expenses of Eliz. of York, 236.

BAUDKIN, 129, etc. "A rich and precious stuff, said to have been composed of silk interwoven with threads of gold in a most sumptuous manner." Wright. cf. Boucher, Rock, ii., 29, and Expenses of Eliz. of York, 236.

BAWDRIC. A thong or strap with which the clapper of a bell is suspended. Bailey, 23, etc. See also, especially, Boucher's Glossary. "For trossyng oon offe ye belles in ye stelpul, 16d. For the belle clapper, 18d. For the bawdryc of leder to the same belle, 4d." Expenses at Durham House, London, 22 Hen. VIII.

BEAUTIFIED, 120. "For getting the chancell of Topcliffe washt and beautified, 6s. 8d." "When a country church has been beautified, to use the technical phrase on this occasion, it is customary for the grateful topographer minutely to display the judicious application of some late pious legacy, and to dwell with singular satisfaction on the modern decorations of the communion table, consisting of semicircular groupes of bloated cherubs, tawdry festoons, ginger-bread pilasters, flaming urns, and a newly-gilded decalogue flanked by a magnificent Moses and Aaron in scarlet and purple, the work of some capital artist who unites the callings of painter, plumber and glazier in the next dirty market-town." (Warton's History of Kiddington, 13.) Any one who is still more curious, will find the process most picturesquely depicted in an amusing little volume, called Hints to Churchwardens.

BEKE. An iron for a door. The iron on which the pot is hung over the fire is also called a beake. In 1366, there was at Holy Island "j bec ferri." North Durham, 107.

BEMEFILLING, 250. Filling up the wall plate. "To Ralph de Fritheby for bemfillinge." North Durham, 276.

BERINGBARWES, 18. Handbarrows.

BLAKLISTED, 208. With a black edge or border. In 1444, John Brompton, of Beverley, leaves a red coverlet having "in lystyng volueres et albas ollas." (Test. Ebor., ii., 99.)

BLAUNCHE PLOME. White lead. cf. Prompt. Parv.

BLODIUS. Blue and not red or purple. cf. Dr. Rock, ii., 260.

BLOKKER, 207-8. A broad axe.

BOD, 8, 64. In waynscot bod emptis, etc. Boards.

BOLLIS. In iij pelvibus pro iij bollis parvi campanilis, 14. "For two bollis for the use of the masons and tilers, 1319." (Westminster Hall) Pro iij de bollis et ij discis ligneis et j cribro emptis, 10½d. Creyke Roll, 4, 5. Neville.

BONCATE, 6. A banquet.

BONER, 12. "In j boner pro domo R. de Patrington, 18d."

BOWD, 97. Crooked or bent. "The said Manwell toke a rose noble of gold out of his purse and bowed it." (Eccl Proc. Durham, 282). "I will that suche bowed golde as I have, beinge bowed of one silke lase be given for my sowle," 1548.

BREK. I. The race of a mill, 10. II. A brake. "iij magna arbores de Catton brek," 19.

BRETISHINGE, 3. "A general term for the upper finishing or parapet of a wall." (Willis, Architectural Nomenclature, 33.) cf. Prompt. Parv., Rites of Durham, 4 and 35. Hist. Dunelm. Scr. Tres., App., clxxx.

BROCHE, 183. Any spire of a church. The spire at Darlington is at this day called "Darnton broach." Architects now use the word technically for a spire springing from the tower without an intervening battlement.

BROCHE AX, 19. To broach stone, according to the Glossary of Architecture, is to cut it in the form of voussoirs. "For brochyn of stone." (North Durham Castle, 1543).

BRODDES, 3, etc. Prods. Slate pins of wood or bone, but more frequently of the latter. North Durham, 87. "Paid for stone brodds, 3s." (Howden Accounts, 4-5 Edward VI.)

BULDERS, 45. Boulders, large round pebbles or cobles used in paving.

BULSCARS, 252. Boscar is a stable or stall for oxen. cf. Prompt. Parv.

BUNCHES, 135. "Bunchys of lattes," i. e., bundles.

BUNDAS, 64. Boundaries or limits. The metae and bundæ of the forest of Galtres are mentioned in a perambulation at Durham, 29 Edward I. So also in an early perambulation of Mickleton in Teesdale penes Com. Strathmore.

BURD ALEXANDER. An eastern fabric, frequently used in churches. North Durham. In 1392, Richard Bride-sall, of York, leaves "dimidiā peciæ burd Alysaunder ad ornatōnem summi altaris." (Test. Ebor., 1. 174.)

BURDONES, 89. Pro emendacione burdones pro missali. Are these the knobs to prevent the sides of a book from being rubbed? Bordonus is a wand of silver ending in a knob. Dr. Rock, ii., 116. cf. Ducange and Prompt. Parv.

BURGES, 302. Probably cloth, etc., manufactured at Bruges. In 1502, Eliz. of York buys "saten of Bruges, blake." (Exp., 17.) "Pro j amue' de Bryga, 14d." (Whitaker's Craven, 398.) In 1444, John Brompton, of Beverley, leaves vessels of pewter "cum lavaero de Brigges vel facto London." (Test. Ebor., ii., 99.)

BURNE, 115, 119. A marking iron. That belonging to the Chapter of York had the stamp of the cross keys. In 1362, there were at Holy Island "duo brenighirnis pro animalibus signandis." (North Durham, 102.) So also at Jarrow and at Finchale.

BUSH, 27. "Pro bush pro maliots." The bush of a wheel is the inner circle which incloses the axletree.

BUT. A measure of land of frequent occurrence. cf. Best's Farming Book, Prompt. Parv., etc.

BYCE, 85. "A preparation of zaffre, of a dim and brownish cast of colour, in comparison with the brillianey of the true azure." (Prompt. Parv.) In 1423, at his death, Archbishop Bowet had "j roba de sangwyn, viz., j mantill, j chemour cum ij capicuū penulatū cum menyver et j garnyche penulatus cum lyss." When the grave of Gregory the Great was opened, he was found enveloped in a pall "byssō candente contextum." (Rock, ii., 127.)

BYNDYNS, 66. Ropes saturated with tallow, etc., used for seuring the decayed parts of the leaden piping by which water was conveyed. cf. Finchale Gloss., and Durham Household Book.

BYRTNYNG, 130. Lopping? Pro byrtynng quereuum, 1393. "In mercede Walteri Gulyght fundantis et brittinantis diversas quercus, 32s. 6d." (Account Roll of St. Leonard's Hospital, York, 10 Richard II.) It is identical, I believe, with the word snagging in the following passage, "Payd to Robert Wayneman and his felloys for cuttyn, snaggyng, and helpyng to loyd waynis in Hoveden Parke, 10s. 8d." (Howden Account, 1545-6.)

C

CADDEAS. "Flocks of silk, cotton, tow or wool, used for stuffing gamboised garments." (Prompt. Parv., q. v.)

CALAPODIA LIGNEA, 252. Clogs or pattens. Dr. Rock, ii., 241.

CALATHIUS, 271. A pedlar. "Quidam calatharii, Angliecē pedlers,"—i. e., a carrier of the calathus. "Quorum copinus fænumque supellex."

CALATHIUS, 43. A basket or covered vessel for carrying provisions. "In ij calathis pro victualibus magistri usque Lemyn custodiendis, 12d." (Accounts of St. Leonard's Hospital, York, 44-5 Edward III.) Poculi genus. Ducange. A basket or wallet.

CALCEDON, 224. A sort of agate or onyx stone. Bailey. In 1463, John Baret, of Bury, leaves to John Croftys his "bedys of calecydony." (Bury Wills, 41.)

CALEBS. Steel.

CALEFACTORIUM, 222. A metal ball filled with burning charcoal or hot water to warm the hands of the bishop in the time of service. Dr. Rock, ii., 163.

CALLYBER, 116. For gunne and callyber tayles for the glasyer, 2d.—A small gun used at sea. Bailey.

CALX. Lime.

CAMAKA, 300. Panni serici vel pretiosoris species. Ducange. In the treasury of Windsor was an alb "de camoca."

CANABA, 127. A canopy. Pro fætura j canabæ pendentis supra corpus Christi, 20d.

CANNERASHES, 116. For two bushells of cannerashes for the harth of the new house, 14d. (?) cannal coal.

CAPSULA, 221. A case or bag.

CARDE LOMBARD, 126, 127. Probably some kind of woollen cloth made in Lombardy.

CARECTATA, 6, 10. A cart or wain load.

CARUCATA, 96. A cart load.

CATCHMAN. A keelman. Catch, a keel. "Pro ij magnis cordis vocatis heued rapes, j hausour et j stay pro le cachs, 5s. 4d. Diversis hominibus auxiliantibus quandam naviculam Hospitalis vocatam le cache ad aquam tractandam, 4d." (Accounts of St. Leonard's Hospital, York, 44-5 Edw. III.) Archbishop Bowet had when he died a catch valued at 46s. 8d., and another, out of repair, worth 13s. 4d. Catch, navicula. Skinner. In 1624, Robert Clark, of York, mariner, leaves to his brother all his "goodes, cattles and chattles, keales, catches, boats and creditts."

CENDRE, 158. cf. Sendall.

CEPUM, 16. Fat or dripping.

CERURA, 7. Serura. A lock.

CHALON, 166. Pannus depictus. Dufresne. The painted or embroidered coverlet of a bed. In 1348, there were at Holy Island "ij chalones boni." (North Durham, 98, iii.) In 1398, Wm. Asham leaves a chalon. Test. Ebor., i., 130. cf. Prompt. Parv. Chaucer has the word in the Reves tale:—

"And in his own chambre hem made a bedde
With shetes and with chalons faire yspredde."

CHAPE, 208. Vaginae mucro ferreus. Skinner. cf. Prompt. Parv.

CHELANDER, 224. Skinner explains chelandri seu chelaundre as a goldfinch. Chylandre—a water serpent. Prompt. Parv. The "unum le chelandre auri" mentioned in the Inventory, may perhaps be a ring wreathed like a serpent. There was also a jewel called a serpentine. In 1495, John Hert, canon of York, leaves to the Archbishop "preciosissimum meum jocale, cooperatum, vocatum serpentine, argento et auro inclusum, pro servisia bibenda, quod quidem jocale Ricardus rex secundus dedit Ricardo comiti Sarum, qui dedit illud domino Georgio, filio suo, postea Ebor. Archiepiscopo."

CHINGIL, I. Shingle from the coast, used in paving, 44. II. Light boards used for roofing houses, 128-31. Chingil nails, or, as they may be pronounced according to Yorkshire dialect, t'ingil nails, were for fastening these boards down. Latinè cindulus. cf. Brayley's Westminster, 199; Hatfield's Survey, 202-4; Finchale Glossary, etc.

CHIPPIES, 84. The waste from the mason's yard.

CHIXILL, 18. A chisel.

CILICIUM, 276, etc. A cloth of hair used for various purposes, especially to mortify the flesh. cf. Ducange.

CIMEA, 216. Simia, an ape or monkey. A favourite device among the mediæval artists. In 1397 John de Sandall, rector of Wheldrake, leaves behind him "unum maser cum babun in fundo."

CINGULUM, 127. The girdle with which the alb was tied round the waist. Dr. Rock, i., 488.

CIRPI. Scirpi, rushes, used for strewing churches. cf. Finchale Glossary, "In cirpis emptis pro aula et parlura et cameris magistri, 2d." Act. Roll. of St. Leonard's Hosp. York, 10-11, Hen. IV.

CLAMES, 19. Iron clamps or cramps to bind stonework together. Pro operacione, xvij petrarum in exv clannys, etc., 5s. 9d. Finchale Rolls, cclvi.

CLAP-BURDES, 100, 105. Halliwell explains clapboard as "board cut in order to make casks," with an alias of clapholt, quoting Brit. Bibl., ii., 401, 510; Book of Rates, p. 32.

CLIBANIS, 191. According to Ducange the clibanus is a kind of moveable oven. If so they must have been used in making the sacramental bread. In clibanis emptis pro die paschæ, 12d.

CLIFE-BURDDES, 96. Cleft-boards. In Best's Farming Book, "Quarter cliffe" boards are mentioned. The young tree, to obtain these, is cleft into four parts, and then each part is rounded.

CLOG, 8, 38, etc. Rough crooked pieces of timber, or stumps of trees. "In sarracione unius clog pro tabulis, 8d." Comp. Tho. Ayer apud Dunelm, 1433.

CLOWTES, 116. Clouts or plates of iron. cf. Finchale Rolls, Exp. of Eliz. of York, Wardrobe Account of Edw. I., etc.

CODDES, 20, 40. Pillows or cushions. In 1402 Matilda Smeton, of York, leaves to the high altar "unum cervical, Anglicè, a kode, de panno serico." Test. Ebor., i., 288.

COLET, 267, 312. The acolyte.

COLUMPNULÆ, 163. Columpnulæ exteriore que vocantur botraces. The pilasters around St. Cuthbert's shrine were called columpnulæ. Raine's St. Cuthbert, 132; cf. Willis' Architectural Nomenclature, 41.

CONYNGES, 31, 309. Conies or rabbits. Gowns were often furred with their skins. In 1415, Isabella de Wyleby leaves "furraram cum cuniculis." Test. Ebor., i., 383.

COOLED, 127. Pannus cooled?

COPHYNSE, 267. Cophini, cistæ or chests. "Pro iiii cophnis pro reliquiis, 21d." (Raine's St. Cuthbert, 144.)

CORIACIO, 27. Covering with leather.

COSTÆ, 39. Latera or sides. Ducange, who does not explain the word satisfactorily.

COTTERELL, 115, 118. An iron pin to secure a ferel or bolt. Craven Glossary.

COUCHERS. Books that were kept couched or lying upon a desk or lectern. A coucher is also a register book. In 1477 Dean Andrew leaves to the church of St. Asaph "unum magnum coucher." Dr. Rock, iii., pt. ii. 233.

COYNES, 200. Quoins. The stones at the corner or angle of a building.

CRATIS TENEBRARUM, 164. The candlestick or hearse on which the lights were set during the tenebrae or service on the three last days in Lent. The word cratis is a new one. Dr. Rock, iii., pt. ii. 233.

CREDELL, 54, 109. The frame of wood which is still used by glaziers for carrying their glass. cf. North Durham, 282. In 1508 Sir John Petty, of York, leaves to his brother Robert "a credill of Normandy glass."

CRELES, 18. A covered basket or pannier. The word is still in use for a fishing basket. In 1346 there were at Holy Island three pairs creles. North Durham, 90. "The keache i' the creel" is a well-known Scotch ballad.

CRESTES, 87. A general term for any ornamental upper finishing. Willis, 31. Prompt. Parv. Tres. Scr. Dunelm Appr. ccxxxvi.

CRIBRIS, 27. Sieves. cf. North Durham, 276. "Pro j cribro pro calee, 8d." Durham Cloister Roll, 1408.

CRISMA, 216. The eucharist for the dying.

CRISMATORIUM, 203. The vessel or pix in which the chrism was carried. Dr. Rock, 1, 133. In 1433 Archbishop Bowet had in his chapel "unum crismatorium deauratum et de passione S. Margaretae," worth 51s., and another of silver standing on four lions worth 53s. 4d. In 1498 Bishop Martin leaves his chrysmary of silver to the grey friars at Canterbury. Test. Vet., 457.

CROCKETTS, 83, 88. "Projecting leaves, flowers, etc., used to decorate the angles or spires, canopies, etc." Gloss. Arch., q.v. The earliest strongly resemble pastoral staves or croches, vide crowch.

CROSSADUS, 224. A crusado, a Portuguese coin, worth about four shillings.

CROSSDAYES, 136. The perambulation or gangdays in Ascension week. See a note in the beginning of Best's Farming Book.

CROSSHAFTES, 88. Willelmo Jonkyn carianti les crosshaftes usque Ebor.

CROWCH, 113. A pastoral staff. In the treasury at Fountains was the head of a "crouche," silver and gilt, weighing 100 oz., and valued at 21*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Prior Berrington, of Durham, "dyd first opteyne the use of the myter with the crutch or staff." Rites of Durham, 46.

CRUDDES, 18, 36, etc. The crypts. cf. Gloss. Arch., etc.

CRALES, 91, 98. Two-threaded worsted. Bailey. Fine worsted. Wright. cf. Exp. of Eliz. of York, 190, etc.

CULCITRUM, 208. Unum culcitrum, Anglicè a quilt. cf. Ducange, sub voce culecita. cf. Test. Ebor. ii. 39. In 1479 Sir Peter Legh had in the knight's chamber at Wollaton "j culcitrall" worth 6*d.*

CULMES, 25. Culme is a top. In this case it is applied to some kind of wood.

CUNA. A vat or fat for holy water.

CUNEUS, 60, 85. A wedge, q. v.

CUPPATOR, 65. A cooper.

CUPRUM, 18, 79. A base metal which Ducange calls "aes cyprium vel etiam quodlibet aes."

D

DAMPLADE, 2-6, etc. A new word of which I can give no explanation. It is used to express the loads of stones that were carried to the Minster, and probably has reference to the bearer.

DEMAYD, 266. Demeaned.

DENTRIX, 65. A tooth-pick, an ordinary present. "In j dentric' empt' et dat' domino de Montacu et domino uxori suea prandentibus infra Hosp. xx. Jan., 2s. 4d." St. Leonard's Hosp., 1, Edward IV.

DEOSULATORIUM, 306. A paxbread, q. v.

DIGHTING, 95, 115. Dressing, clearing away. "For on seyff for dygh-tyng of the lyme, 2d. In dyghlyng and castyng forth of stones and rubishe, 23s. 2d." Howdenshire Accts., 1556-7. A dooskyn newe dyght." "A silver deght dagar." Richmond Wills, 31, 37.

DODGET, 115. An iron implement.

DOGG, 107, 116. An iron band or stay to support old walls, wood, etc. "For putting in of dogge for staying of the panne pece, 8s." Howden Accts., 1556-7.

DOLEUM, 59, etc. A tub. Here a certain quantity of stone, a tub-full.

DOLOBRIUM, 208. Dolabrum, an ax.

DORNIX, 279. A kind of stuff which takes its name from Doornick or Tournay in Flanders, where it was first made.

DORSERS. Hangings for the wall of a room. cf. Finchale Glossary and Prompt. Parv. At Archbishop Bawet's death, in 1423, there was in the hall "j dorsorium" of red and green say, paled, with costers, banquers, cushions, etc., to match.

DOUBLEPOSTEIS, 53.

DOUBYNG. DOBACIO, 23. Plastering or pointing. cf. Prompt. Parv. and North Durham, 87. In 1399 Sir John Saville of Eland, leaves 5 marks to the fabric of the chapel of Eland, "ad dealbandum eandem." In 1414

31s. 2d. are paid pro dealbacione partetum." Durham Cloister Roll. "Daubed with untempered mortar." Dealbo occasionally means to whitewash.

E

EBDOMARIUS, 245, 267. Hebdomarius, the priest who has the charge of the services for a week. "Erauit in ecclesiis Cathedralibus quibus majus sacrum canere, omniumque horarum officium inchoare incumbebat." Ducange.

ELLERWOOD, 118. Allers or alderwood, usually called so in the North. "Witness did buye seaven score birk-trees and allers." Court Papers, Durham, 1616.

ESEBURDES. EVESBORDES, 66, 98, 101, 114. The timbers of the roof which overhang the wall and constitute the eves.

ESSES, 225, 310. The device of SSS, which has puzzled so many antiquaries. Dr. Rock conjectures, with some probability, that these are the initials of the words Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, as they occur in the Te Deum. Mr. J. G. Nichols has made some valuable remarks on the subject in the Gentleman's Magazine and Notes and Queries.

ESTRIGEFEDERS, 228. Ostrich feathers. A common device in embroidery. Cardinel Wolsey was the owner of "twoo standing peces, with covers, gilt, of the fasshon of the estrege fedder." (Collect Cur., ii, 328.) At Lincoln there was a cope with a trail of ostrich feathers, and in 1518 Sir Brian Stapleton, of Wighill, leaves to his daughters "a ryng of golde graved with fedders, which was the last token betwixt my wyfle and me." In 1295 Thomas de Richmond, lord of Constable Burton, sealed with a very beautiful device. Six ostrich feathers radiate, in the fashion of a hexapetalous flower, in the centre of which a lion is sleeping.

EXENNIA. Presents. cf. Finchale Glossary, St. Cuthbert, etc.

F

FALARIIS, 98. Phaleris, trappings for a horse. In 1425 Sir Thomas Hersey leaves to his son four horses "cum phalleris." Test. Ebor., i, 409.

FARRAMENTES, 109, 112. Ferramenta, iron-work, or instruments of iron. In 1429 the central tower of Durham Cathedral was burned and fell to the ground "cum grossioribus ferramentis." Scr. Tres. Appx. ccxvii. "Sol. cuidam irnemonger Ebor. pro. x petris et vj lb. ferri pro les axes cementariorum, hokes, bands, et aliis ferramentis inde fiendis." Creyk roll, 4-5, Nevilte. "Pro ferramentis pro aula de Southwell." Rot. Kemp.

FATOLE, 77. Fat oil, used by painters.

FATTES, 18. Large vessels or vats.

FAYDE, FAYNE, 88, 90. A vane or weather-cock. 1450, "In vij lb. di. laton pro fanys inde fiendis, 2s. 8d. Thomas Goldsmith pro factura de la fanys, 20d." Tres. Scr., ccxxxvi. cf. Prompt. Parv.

FELTHUM, 208. The gambeson. cf. Ducange and Prompt. Parv.

FEMELL, 48, 60. Canobum de femell. A kind of hemp used for ropes. Sheets were also made of it.

FEREFULL, 262. Dangerous.

FERELEY, 135. A payment for crossing in a ferry-boat. In the Wermouth Rolls, pp. 247-9, is a most interesting account of this due as it was exacted at Sunderland. "Lay or cess-ment." Durham Court Books, 1628. Humphrey Denton "denyeth to pay ijd. for his church lay." York Court Books, 1586. We speak of laying a rate, and the word lay as a substantive seems derivable from the verb, just as a cess is derivable from assess.

FERIAL. For festival-days. In 1536 Chr. Canabe, rector of Beeford in Holderness leaves "to Anuys Wrawbe one gowne wych I do were on feryall days."

FERNE, FERYN, 45, 54, 63, 66, 91. In guests, etc., pro le scaffaldyng et le ferne—les poles de la ferne—greac pro, et pulleys. Pro j feryn empto, 12d. Connected, no doubt, with fer, iron, but what it is I cannot say.

FEYING, 135. Cleansing, sweeping.

FILLETES, 263. A small flat face or band between or upon mouldings.

Gloss. Arch. "Pro operacione de sylettes, 2s. 6d."—lead work. Durham Cloister Roll, 1414. "In mendyng of the gret lucayne in the gallery and lyng of syllettes." Durham Castle, 1543.

FIMBRIATUS. Edged or fringed, a classical word.

FIMUS, 55. Earth, mire.

FINDUL', 63.

FINYALL, 80. The bunch of foliage, which terminates pinnacles, canopies, etc. Gloss. Arch. Any upper termination; thus we speak of a finial cross.

FIRSPERRES, 23. Spars or laths of fir.

FIRSTAN, 14, 33. Free-stone. Building stone, which may be cut into blocks and worked with freedom with a chisel. Gloss. Arch. In 1411 Wm. Melburn, of Beverley, merchant, leaves 60s. "ad fabricandum les bordors de Hulbrig cum frestone." "Pro adquisicione DCCCC<sup>ma</sup> petr. voc. frestone pro nova construccione coquince cum lardario inter veterem aulam et magnam cameram." Creyk roll, 4-5, Neville.

FLABELLUM, 223. A fan with which, during the celebration of high mass, the deacon drove away the flies which came near the priest or the elements. Dr. Rock, iii., pt. ii. 198, gives an engraving of one.

FLAGHITES, 131. Flab, Flaught, turf, fuel. Wright, cf. Craven Glossary and Brochett. "Vendicio turbarum. De vs. pro flagthes venditis." Act. Roll St. Leonard's, York, 10-11, Hen. IV.

FLEKE, 2, 18. A burdlo. cf. Prompt. Parv. and Jamieson. In 1486-7 the monks of Finchale pay 42s. pro factura les flekes, les stakes, et acquisitione ramalium, etc., pro reparacione stagni molendini de Fynkhall." The remains of this mill and of the flekes may still be seen. The flekes are large rudely shaped oak trees fastened down in the water with iron clamps, hurdle-wise, and pinned down with large cobles in the interstices. "Roberto Skepper pro x flekes de virgis factis in bosco de Frankleyne pro ponte tractabili ad portam boriale salvando, 3s. 4d." Durham Castle, 9, Ric. II. cf. Scr. Tres. Appx., clxxxviii., etc.

FLETE, 38, perhaps FLOTE. A quantity of timber fastened together and floated to its destination. "We will cut wood out of Lebanon, as much as thou shalt need, and we will bring it to thee in fletes by sea to Joppa." 2 Chron. ii. 16.

FLEW, 273. I see flew and nyght fevers. Fever-few.

FLORISF', 296. Flowered or powdered. Cardinal Wolsey had a "standing cuppe, pleyne, with a cover with true loves florished in the bottom." Collect. Curiosa, 11, 327.

FLYTYNG, 263, 267, Scolding, quarrelling. A Scottish word.

FOURNERS, 17. In this instance formers seem to be the moulds which the masons used in shaping the stones. In 1399 there were 400 of them at York. cf. Arch. Nomenclature, 22-3.

FOVEA, 41. Fossa, Ducange. Here a mill-race or fleme. "In mundacione et escuracione foverarum circa gardinum apud Westminster, etc., 4l. 12s." Rot. Ab. Kempe.

FRAMER, 207. Former, which, according to the Prompt. Parv., is probably a gouge.

FRANGNABS. These are, I believe, the fractilli or jaggs with which garments used to be foliated, temp. Ric., ii., etc. Mr. Way has given an interesting account of this curious custom in the Prompt. Parv.

FRESED LEDER, 77. Dealbatus. Leather whitened by being dried and bleached.

FREYNES, 126. xj peces de freynes et tayse.

FRETTATUS, 185, 213. Ornamented with frets, or, generally, raised or embossed work. Among the treasures in Canterbury Cathedral in 1315 was "capa Lanfranci nigra frectata auro cum bestiis et floribus aureis et ij tasellis aureis." Dugdale. In 1442 Margaret Gateshead, of York, leaves two silver spoons "cum frellettes."

FUYL, 303.

FYNYNG, 7, 57, etc. Fusio plumbi or smelting. A "new fynghouse" built at Gateshead "pro le fyngh sive pro combustione plumbi." Rot. Wolsey Episc. Dunelm, anno 4-5.

G

GADES, 107, 118. Gad-steel is Flemish steel made in gads or small bars. Wright. A gad is also a spike or rod. In 1343 there were at Holy Island two "schafe de stel contin. 66 gaddes." North Durham, 88. "Pro ij goddis pro campana, 4s. St. Leonard's Roll, 44-5, Edward III. GAGAT, 226. Jet. cf. Prompt Parv. GALEO, 98. Galea, a cap or covering for the head.

GARGILLES, 88. Projecting spouts, generally in the shape of grotesque figures, to throw water from the gutters of roofs.

GARTHYNG, 17, 23. Girthing, putting the girths or hoops upon tubs.

GAUDEYS, 224. The larger beads on a rosary (Wright), probably deriving their name from the first word of the hymn, Gaude, Virgo Christipara. (Depositions, etc., Surt. Soc., 336.) "She occupied her gandes as many thousand dyd." (Ibid., 164.) In 1509, Alison Clerk leaves her "best beddes of corall with silver gawdies gilded to Corpus Cristi sheren, and the broche of gold at the same to Saint William hed."

GAUNTREES, 35. A wooden frame or stand, generally for casks, here probably for timber.

GAVELOCKES, 19, 117. A crowbar or lever of iron, used, principally, for raising stones; a word still in use in the North. "Pro ij gavelokis, ijd." (Roll for building the Prior's kitchen at Durham, 1368.)

GEISTS, 35, 200. Joists, cross beams or balks, a word in common use.

GIPSUM, 94. Pro gipso, alias dicto litura, Anglicè plaister, 5s. 9d.

GIRAP, 8, 75. A kind of rope, the exact form and use of which is not known.

GOGIONS, 54, 63, 115. The large pivot of the axis of a wheel. Wright. It is also used for other things. "In gugonns ferri pro fenestris aulae, 7d." (Hatf. Survey, 202.) "For 3 gogons of iron for the gable, 9d." (1332, Westminster Hall Accounts, 156.) "In ij hopes, ij plates et ij godeons ferri pro le southyete and ye faldeyete infra castrum." (Durham Castle, temp. Henry VI.) "Pro j huke et j goyon et j plate ad ostium novi palissii parcus." (Howden Accounts, temp. Henry VI.)

GRAYLL, GRADALE, 113, 130, etc. A service-book containing the responsoria or gradalia. cf. Prompt. Parv., and Rock, Church of our Fathers.

GREASES, GRESSES, 114, 262. Steps. In 1497, Nich. Conyers, of Stokesley, desires to be "beried in the qwer of Stokesley kirk at the grecce before Saint Petyr." (Circa, 1498.) Marm. Clarvaux ordered his body to be interred "at Croft Kerk, in the wher, among the grecis before the blesed sacrament." (Longstaffe's Darlington, app. lxxii.) In 1505, Thos. Roos, Esq., of Ingmanthorpe, desires to be buried "in the high qwher directly afor ye sacrament, betwix the letteron stede and the nethermost degree from the awter."

GRENEGYZNGER, 45, 48. Greenginger, a delicate conserve, and an ordinary gift, especially to ladies. In 1494, Sir Brian Rocliffe leaves to his son "j longum coeliar argenti et deaurati pro grenegynger." In 1434, Wm. Pelleson, Archdeacon of Cleveland, mentions in his will two silver spoons "cum le pyke pro grenegynger." In 1463, John Baret leaves his "silvir forke for grene gyngor." (Bury Wills, 40.)

GRONSALL, GROUNDSOLES, 110, 272. The groundwork, foundation. Hypothyrum, the groundsell or foote poste of a doore. Jun. Nomencl. In 1463, John Baret desires to be buried "in a pet under the groundsville ther my lady Schardelowe was wont to sitte." (Bury Wills, 15.)

GROPHIRNE, GROPYNG, 39, 207. A groping iron, "Runaina." It is also called a former, and probably resembled the modern gouge; it was used to make grooves. To grope is, therefore, to groove. cf. Prompt. Parv.

GRYNDLESTONE, 119. A grindstone.

H

HAGILGAGLE, 227. The recreatio of the vicars and parsons of the minster at the celebration of an obit.

HALFBOKES, 261. Breviaries and service-books containing only half of the services appointed for the year, the pars aestivalis or hyemalis. In an inventory of the goods in the chapel at Norton Conyers in 1446 were "duo porteus vocata halfyers." (Reg. Archidiac. Richmond.)

HALYBREDPENNY, 254. A small tax upon a congregation to purchase the holy loaf for the eucharist. cf. Dr. Rock, i., 137. "The inhabitants of St. Margaret's withdrew ther accustomed dewties, except hollybread silver, which haith bein accoustomable paid." (Depositions, etc., ed. Surtees Soc., 280.)

HANAPERIUM, 276. A hamper or basket. The Hanaper Office derives its name from the circumstance that the writs were deposited there in a basket. Wright. Here it is a small case or skippet in which records were preserved.

HANDBELLAN, 142 Dr. Rock (ii., 307, 357) conjectures that these were hand-bells which were used at funerals, to arouse the attention of the passers by and to secure their prayers. They were, also, used at obits. Dr. Rock is, I believe, in error when he says that the MS. which contains this list belonged to Sherbourne minster: I cannot but think that the place alluded to is Sherburn in Elmet, in the neighbourhood of York, a church which was intimately connected with the Chapter of York from a very early period.

HARDWALTIELL, 95. "Item in m<sup>l</sup> walte<sup>l</sup> emptis pro quodam muro dicti domus ex longitudine xl et iiii pedum, vs. Johanni Hendhachet, sementario, operanti super dictum murum per iiii dies et dimidium, cap' die' iijjd. — xvijd." Works at the New Castle on Tyne, 1358. The item occurs some time after the erection of a wall of the same length, 2 feet high, to support a timber house.

HARRETREES, 54. The heel of a gate to which the bars are attached. Cra-ven Glossary.

HARTLATTES, 66. For 300 hartlattes, 1s. 3d. 1332, Westminster Hall Account, 154.

HAUSOR, 8, 18. A three-strond rope or small cable (Bailey), principally used on shipboard.

HAXSHAFFTES, 47. Shafts or handles for hacks made of ash. Pro j fraxino pro harshafftes, 14d.

HAYLL, 66. Pro factura le hayll.

HEFTES, 18. Hafts or handles. "Cuidam carpentario facienti ij haftes pro cruce domini de fraxino." (Rot. Ab. Kemppe.)

HELME, 18. j helme ferri. A helme is said by Bailey and Wright to be a handle: the meaning, in this case, is not quite evident. cf. Prompt. Parv.

HEMPFREISE, 135. The tree or piece of wood upon which flax is dressed.

HERNAS, 15. Tools, etc., and, generally, the whole equipment of the quarrymen.

HERSE. The frame, shaped generally like a harrow, for supporting lights, especially at funerals. Dr. Rock gives an interesting account of it, together with an engraving, cf., also, Prompt. Parv. In 1436, John Carlton, canon of York, desires to be interred "sine aliquali serie candelarum, Anglicè herce." (Test. Ebor., ii, 14.) In the register of the Chapter is the following decree relating to the clothes with which the hearse was draped. "Jan. 8, 1495-6. In questione orta inter Thomam Bate- man et Thomam Hunter, clericos de vestibulo, ex una parte, ac Thomam Tyndale, Johannem Runkton et Johannem Ysake, sacristas, ex altera parte, pro perceptione pannorum super les herses in dicta eccl. Cath. super corpora mortuorum positorum — dominus Decanus decrevit, quod, de cetero, in perpetuum, clerici de vestibulo unam dimidiā partem hujusmodi pannorum, ubicumque fuerint infra dictam ecclesiam sive in insulis sive in navi supra corpora mortuorum positorum, et sacristae aliam medietatem habeant."

HORNYNG, 46. Protecting the edges and corners of the boards of books with horn to prevent their being rubbed. The old craft of the horner is now extinct.

I J

IMPES, 270. Vicarius inveniret iij cereos, duos super quibus ponit les impes.

INCLE, 114, 119, 136. Tape.

MARSHALERIA, 128. The farrying or shoeing of a horse. cf. Finchale Glossary, etc. It was the province of the Earl Marshall to attend to the king's horses.

MASER, 31. A drinking vessel made of wood. Mr. Way gives a most interesting account of it in Prompt. Parv. Dr. Rock also has some valuable remarks upon it. He will be glad to learn that the maser-bowl of Archbishop Scrope is still at York, and he will find a description of it in proceedings of the Archaeological Institute during their visit to York.

MASTICOTE, 77, 79. Gum mastic, used by painters.

MAUNDYE, 136. The washing of the feet and feeding of the poor upon the Thursday in Holy week, which was called Maunday Thursday, or Shere Thursday.

MEL, MIELL, 7, 18, 21, 26. A measure answering to the term met, which is now in use.

MENSILLIS, MENSULIS, 98, 104, 105. A kind of board, probably connected with mensa a table.

MERBLERS, 73. Workers in marble. In his will, made in 1494, Sir Brian Rocliffe says, "volo quod Jacobus Remus, marbeler, in Poules churche-yeerde in London, faciat meum epitaphium in Templo."

MESSING, 10. A kind of metal which Ducange calls mestallum. In 1434, Eliz. del Hay leaves "majorem patellam de meslyn." Test. Ebor. ii. 39. In 1506, John Fell, of York, leaves "a basyne and oon ewere of myslyne."

METRETA, 27. A measure.

METRODDES, 82, 88. Sometimes called metwands. The measuring wands or rules used by masons and carpenters.

MOLD, 9, 17, etc. The pattern, made of tin or wood, which the masons used in shaping their stones. They now make use of zinc for that purpose. cf. Architectural Nomenclature, 22. For two oak boards for moulds for the masons, 2s., 1332. Westm'r. Hall, 154.

MOLOUR, 207. Molleur. A stone used for grinding colours. "ij molver stones with the runners." Bury Wills, 1558, 151.

MONASTERIUM, 35, 51, etc. A word frequently applied to York Cathedral, although, curiously enough, there was never a monk connected with it. It is at this day everywhere called the Minster.

MONSTRUM, 222. A monstrance or reliquary generally made of glass or some other transparent substance, and inclosing the blood or relic of some saint, and also the Eucharist, to be exhibited to the worshipper — monstrandum. Cardinal Wolsey was the owner of "oone monstrans silver and gilt withe a round birlall to put reliques in." Collect. Cur. ii. 337. The word is of rare occurrence among English documents.

MORE, 314. Major, the greater. St. James, the More. "Helpinge to liste and turne the testator for his more ease." Durham Court Papers, 1615.

MORNINGLY, 268. In the morning. MORSUS, MOYCE, 130, 222, 228, etc. The mors, a kind of clasp which was used by ecclesiastics to prevent the cope from slipping off. Dr. Rock in his most valuable work The Church of our Fathers, ii. 37, gives an account of it with an engraving. In the great inventories of the treasures at St. Paul's, etc., given by Dugdale, many precious morses are mentioned.

MORTAS WYMBYLL, 207. An auger for mortising.

N

NAILS. Among the different kinds of nails mentioned in this book we find the following:—Broddes (q.v.), including stanbroddes (stonebroddes), and strabroddes (strawbroddes), chingil-nails or tingil-nails, gullet-nails, lat or lath nails, lead nails, also called kyrklednale, sharplings, and single and double spikings, and Scotsem-nails. Brags are not mentioned.

NAPRONS, 25, 50. Aprons used by masons, etc. cf. limas. "Pro linea teta ad naperons," 1307. (Whitaker's Craven, 291). "Dati j coco domini Archiepiscopi, ij cocis magistrorum, et j coco domini Henrici de Snayth, in precium iiiij naperons panni de lake, 2s. 6d." St. Leonard's Roll, 10., Ric. II.

NATTES, 17, 23, 191, etc. Mats. A very common word. "For covering the seates with natting in the Dean's closet, 1s. 1669."

NODI, 74, 75. Knots or bosses. cf. Knots.

NYGWARE, 249. The night-wake or watch by the side of a corpse. In the Rites of Durham, 44, is an interesting account of the manner in which a deceased monk was waked. From the funeral expenses of Archbishop Bowett we learn that he had six wakers, each one of whom received a shilling.

O

OBTURACIO, 63. Hardening or strengthening. Said of a staith which was strengthened with piles and faggots. OCOR, 77, 97. Oker, the colour used in painting.

ORFRAYES, 127, 229, etc. Aurifrigia. The bands or bordures of embroidery with which vestments were ornamented. cf. Prompt. Parv. Dr. Rock gives a long account of them, with one or two plates to show how they were worn.

OWCHES, 224. Brooches or clasps. cf. Prompt. Parv. sub voce nowch. One of these jewels was, probably, the gift of Joan de Hesilrig, who, in the year 1400, bequeathed "capiti Sancti Wilhelmi Ebor. unum monile, Anglicé nouch auri, cum uno saphire in medio, et j dyamand desuper, et circumpositum cum percales et emeraudes." Test. Ebor. i. 267. cf. Church of our Fathers, ii. 39.

OWTMEN, 264. Strangers. "The said Sir Thomas dyd rebuke this examine for making any busyness in that parish, being an out man." Ecclesiastical Depositions, Surt. Soc. 116.

P

PACE, 120. The pace at the west door. The space flagged over which was used as a walk. The nave of the Minster was also called a pace, as it was a place of public promenade, or a deambulatorium.

PAIS', 37, 64. A certain measure for glass less than a seam. In 1366-7 the monks of Holy Island possessed 200 "pays" of glass. North Durham, 107.

PANDOXATRIA, 200. Pandoxatorium in the Finchale Glossary, is said to be a brewhouse. I should imagine, however, that it generally signifies an inn, or, as the word implies, a place of public entertainment.

PANELL, 18. A compartment of stained glass. "Henrico Ros, glusier, de Ebor.

operanti intra palacium in vitriat. . . panell cum ymagine S. Johannis, et alias panell cum radiis solaribus ibidem et in emendacione fenerarum ibidem. . . occidentali ejusdem aulæ, 16s. 8d." Rot. Kemp. cf. Gloss. Architecture, sub voce.

PANNES, 116, 271. A pan is the piece of timber in a house which lies on the top of the posts and supports the beams. Wright. cf. sub voce dog.

PARCLOS, 42 54. A screen or enclosure. cf. Gloss. of Architecture and Prompt. Parv. "I wil that the ymage of oure Lady that Robert Pygot peynted be set up ageyn the peleer next ye parclos of Seynt Marie awter." Bury Wills, 19.

PARICHYNGE, 262. Parochiani, the body of the parishioners. It also signifies the parish. In 1526, Alison Francland, "of the parishing of Saynt Peter the Lyttyll," makes her will. Richmondshire Wills, 10.

PARSERS, 92, 93, 207. An instrument used by masons and carpenters. In 1400, Robert Brade, of York, leaves "duo parsures, unum thixtill" (Test. Ebor., i., 265).

PARURÆ, 125, 127. Small ornaments fastened on to the upper part of the amice, like a collar to it, and cut into a square or oblong shape, fastened in various ways at different places on the alb. Dr. Rock, i., 438. They are called apparels. Dr. Rock gives several woodcuts representing them. cf. Prompt. Parv.

PATELL', 18. A pan.

PAXBREID, 277. A figure of our Saviour painted on wood or copper which was kissed by the priest when he was celebrating the mass. After this it passed through the congregation, being kissed in turn by each, all of them receiving the pax, or kiss of peace. Dr Rock, i., 161, etc., gives an interesting description of the ceremony, with several illustrations. In 1377, Sir John Meaux leaves to Bridlington Priory, "unum paxbredevocatum relik" (Test. Ebor., i., 101). In 1458, Nath. Radclif, of York, leaves "unum osculariorum vocatum paxbrede" of silver and gilt. cf. Test. Ebor., ii., 139, and Prompt. Parv.

PECTORAL, 307. Au ornament, in the shape of a brooch, which was attached to the breast of the chasuble. It is frequently called the rationale, and sometimes the morse. cf. Prompt. Parv. and Dr. Rock, i. 363, and ii. 39.

PEDICULIS, 208. Unum candelabrum cum duobus pediculis, Anglice floweres.

PENDANTS, 43, 200. Stone for building the pendentives, or, else, the voussoirs which were called pennants. The pendentive is the thin vaulting, or voussure, which rests upon the ribs. Willis's Architectural Nomenclature, 45.

PENDAUNT, 224. The pendant of a girdle. cf. Prompt. Parv.

PENISTON, 270. A game at ball so called, probably taking its name from the village of Peniston, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

PERITED, 214, 235. A chrysolite. Unus annulus cum perited alias crisolid. King Edward offered at the feretory of St. Cuthbert an ouch of gold, "cum peridot in medio." Hist. Dunelm. Scr. Tres, App. ccccxli.

PETIBAG, 130. Clerici de petibag regis. Clerks of the hanaper?

PEYN, 263. Paena, a fine or penalty.

PILEUS, 98. A cap.

PIS', 9. Pisum, pisa, pease. Here pease straw.

PIXIS. The pix, or case, in which the Eucharist was kept. It usually hung before the high altar.

PLAUNCHORS, 50, 56, 249. Planks or boards. "Payd to ij wrightis and ther iij servanntis, every of them for vi. dayes, in mendinge of the stabyls and the planchers, and lyinge . . . of the saide bords, 16s." Howden Accts., 2-3 Edw. VI.

PLEGHDAI, 10. The day on which the masons at the Minster pledged themselves to obey the Chapter and their masters.

PLUMES, 19. Lead weights for the clock.

PLUSCULA, 224. A buckle, or some such appendage to a girdle. In 1411, there was, at Finchale, "una zona serica cum pendiculo et plusculo et stothis deauratis." Priory of Finchale, App., clvi.

POMANDER, 224. Pomme d'aumbre, generally applied to balls containing perfume, which were carried about the person. The calefactorium, q.v., was occasionally called the pomander.

POPPES, 62. Poppy-heads for stalls. cf. Gloss. of Architecture.

POSTE, 37, 40. Generally, a quarry.

POSTING, 117. Posting and squaring of siplings. Lopping, or snagging, and rough-hewing.

POUSES, 298. Poesies or mottoes? In this instance, probably, texts of Scripture. In 1617, Nich. Fenay, yeo., leaves to his son Wm. "my signet, or ringe of gould, haveinge these letters, N.F., for my name thereupon engraven, with this notable poesie about the same letters, vizt. Nosce te ipsum, to the intente that my said son, William Fenay, in the often behouldinge and consideringe of that worthy poesye may be the better put in mynd of himselfe and of his estate, knowinge this, that to knowe a man's selfe is the beginninge of wisdom." In 1618, Robt. Eyre, of Blythe, leaves to Sir Jervas Clifton "my hoope ring of gold, with this posie or inscription, Think on mee." In 1622, Eliz. Watson, of York, widow, leaves "to her dau. Sara Watson, a gould ringe with a posie, Desire & Deserve. To my dau. Easter, one gold ringe with a posie, Keefe faith till death. To my dau. Dorathie, my little hoope ringe of gould, with a posey, As God hath appointed, soe am I contented."

POWDOR. Pewter.

PREBENDA, 12. Corn or provender for horses. cf. Finchale Glossary.

PRECULARIA, 76. Used of glass-work. Beaded wreaths surrounding devices. These precularia are still in existence in the windows of the lantern tower.

PRICK CANDLESTICKS, 275. Candlesticks with a prick or spike, upon which the candle was placed. They were hence called prickets. cf. Prompt. Parv. In 1550, Annes Herper, of Marton, desires by will to "have fyve prikyttes of wax borne about my corse in the messe tyme." Before the high altar at Durham were three silver basons, with basons of latten within them, "having pricks for sorges, or great wax candles, to stand on" (Rites of Durham, 12). "A candylstyke of latten with a pyke," is mentioned in Bury Wills, 19.

PRICK SONG, 103. This, according to Dr. Rock, is florid music. In 1544, Margt. Kirkbie desires to be buried in St. Crux Church, in York, "wt a masse of our Blessed Ladie wt pricksong and orgons the same day or as n'r the same day as may be convenient." At the funeral of Francis, Earl of Shrewsbury, at Sheffield, in 1560, "after the gospell, the quire sung another psalme in pricksong" (Hunter's Hallanshire, 57). At pp. 101, 116, 118, are charges for pricking or writing this music.

PRINCIPALL, 309. A splendid vestment for principal days, or high festivals.

PSALTER-CANDLES, 231. These lights seem to have been used at funerals and obits, but whether they were used in the church or given away to the friends, etc., of the deceased I cannot tell. In 1475—6, Wm. Hawn, chaplain, says "volo quod obitus meus fiat in choro Eccl. Ebor. cum speciebus, et vino, ac candelis vocatis psalter-candels secundum modum ibidem ab antiquo usitatum."

PULLEX, POLEE, 2, 12, 18. A pulley. In 1367, the monks of Holy Island had three "pulicæ." North Durham, 107.

PULYNGAX, 19. A pole-axe?

PUTURA, 10. Pro putura, reward, etc., pro le clok. A word not easy to explain. Ducange gives trabs as Somner's paraphrase of this word, which he derives from the French poutre.

PYK, 61. Pitch.

Q

QUARRELLS, 116. Quarries of glass. In 1577—8, George Neville, of High Popplewell, gentleman, leaves to "Mr. Mathewe Nevell, lorde of my howse, all the glase windowe, wilinge my neigbours, Wm. Bronke and John Browke, th'elder of the Scholes, as they love and beare good will to a Nevell, to take boonde of theme that shall come to dwell at Hie Poplewell, to upholde and manteyne the glase windowe quarelles in theme, to that Mr. Mathewe come to the howse to dwell."

QUINDENA, 1. A period of fifteen days. The workmen at the Minster received their wages fortnightly, a custom which, in some cases, is still kept up in York. cf. North Durham, 110.

R

RALYCOLE, 81. Coals from Relly near Durham?

RAMELSTONE, 51, 52, 54. Ramell means rubbish, and ramelstone is the chips and useless stone from the quarry or the mason's yard.

REDDITUS, or REDDITALIS DOMUS, 12, 27, 71. The house in which the rents due to the Minster were paid; perhaps the treasury.

REGALIA, 224. Rials or royals. The rial was a gold coin worth about fifteen shillings.

RENYSPIKE, 16.

REPARYLED, 258. Repaired. In 1545, John Stavely, of Rippion Park, gent., leaves "to the reparacion of the northe brige beside Ripon when yt is begowne to be reparelled and amendid, 10s."—1545—6. "To the reparelling of the churche in Olde Malton, 6s. 8d."

REREBRACES, 9. Mail or armour to cover the back of the arm. In 1423, Archbp. Bowett had a pair "de vambbrace et rerebrace in iiiij peciis," valued at 3s. 4d.

REREDOS, 9. Armour for the back. REREDORCE, 36, 65, 67, 70. The screen behind an altar, or the wall which was decorated with carving and panelling. The great reredos of York was of wood richly carved and gilt. It was removed in 1726. Torre gives a rude drawing of a portion of it. In 1452, Wm. Duffeld leaves 20*l.* "pro perfecione deauracionis les reardosse."

REULOR, 16. The rule, used by the workmen. "Pro levells, squares, et reules, 20*d.*" Durham Cloister Roll, 1412.

REVESTRY, 117. The general term for a vestry. "When the monkes went to say or singe the high masse they put on theire vestments in the vestry [revestry]. These were always revest in the same place" (Rites of Durham). In 1488, Edm. Malleverer says, "volo quod locus sepulture meæ in eccl. de Bardsey edificetur et volo quod altare B.M.V. renovetur usque ad finem revestiarii."

REVYN, 69. Torn or split. "For ryving of fyerwoode in Frankelyn for my lorde." Durham Roll, 1543.

REYNES, 300. Rhenish cloth? In 1400, Joan Lady Scargill leaves two par of sheets "de panno vocato clayth de reynes."

RIDDACIO, 49, 52. Ridding or clearing away. cf. Hatfield's Survey, 219.

RIGALD, 8, 10, 12, etc. It is difficult to ascertain what sort of timber this was. Some suppose that it came from Riga and that it derives its name from that place. cf. North Durham, 112, 275.

RIGTIELL, 35. Ridge tiles.

ROSEBANDS, 263.

ROSTE YERNE, 269. A clibanum which was used for baking the singing-breads?

RUEBE ARCHA. The red chest or ark. A box for holding alms, which was placed in the beginning of the fifteenth century against the south-east pillar of the lantern. There was also one at Beverley, as in 1398 Agnes Bird, of Beverley, leaves "ymagini B.M. supra rubeam archam in eccl. S. Joh. peciam velorum." Test. Ebor. i. 240.

RUDERA, 82, 134. Rudus, a classical word, signifies a pavement or passage generally composed of rubble.

RYSE, 130. Brushwood. cf. Finchale Glossary and Raine's Auckland Castle.

S

SABATONS, 9. Coverings for the feet made of steel. Slippers also were called sabatons. In 1423 Archbishop Bowet had "j par de sabatons brouddird et couch' cum perell," worth 5*s.*, and another pair of white cloth of gold valued at 6*s.* 8*d.*

SARKING, SARKINGBORDS, 71, 118. Boards for covering a roof.

SAY, 279. "A serge or fine woollen cloth. Wright. Shag. Durham Household Book. In 1433. Thomas Scargill leaves a bed of red say and a tapet of the same material. Test. Ebor. ii. 36. In 1496, William Warde, of York, leaves to Wheldrake church a vestment "de rubio sago."

SAY OR SOE, 94, 118. A large tub. cf. Finchale Glossary. Two hoops of wood are bought for a "saa" borrowed by the slaters. Durham Castle, 7-8 Laur. Booth. "For mendinge of ij soes and one skele, 10d." Catterickbridge Act. 1569. "Jan. 25, 1580-1, Johane Calame beinge about a yeaare and a half oulde by misfortune drowned in a soo of water, bur." Belfrey Par. Register, York. "Mar. 7, 1679-80, Anne dau., Mr. Anthony Wilkinson, of North Shields, bur. The child was drowned in a little water in ye bottom of a soa, standing on ye backside, being ye first buriali at Christ's Church after Nichs. Waid's." Tynemouth Par. Register.

SCABELLUM, 97, 99. A desk. cf. Test. Ebor. ii. 283.

SCAFIS, SCAFULIS, 71, 73. Scafa, vas culinari. Ducange. It is, I believe, a bowl of wood. "Pro scafis et discis, 3s. 8d." Comptos of Fountains Abbey, 1456-7.

SCAPULANS, SCAPULATUS, SCORPILYNG, 15, 52, 62, 100. To scapple stone is to rongh-dress it with a hammer. "Pro scapulacione et way-nyng petrarum." Lavatory Roll at Durham, 1432. "For hewyng, brochyn and scaplyn stono for the chappell." Durham Castle Roll, 1543. In the history of the building of Westminster Hall the scapping both of stone and wood is mentioned. To scapple a tree is, according to the Gloss. of Arch., to bark it.

SCHALDRS, 9, 21. Chaldrons.

SCHEPPIS, 9, 50. Skeps or baskets made of twisted straw, a common word in the north. A bee-hive is often called a skep. "She bair thre skepfull of sand to the said alter." Ecc. Proc. Durham, 194. "1621. Office against John Bowe, of Benton, for not resortinge to his parishe churche on Sundaeis and Holidaiies, but going abroad to sell squills and skepps at those tymes." Court Papers, Durham. "In j skepp carbonum ligneorum voc. charcole pro combustione calcis." Creyk Roll, 4-5 Neville.

SCOMOR, 18. A skimmer.

SCOPIS, 65. Scoops, vessels for water. Here, I believe, pails.

SCOTSONAIL, 7, etc. A kind of nail, deriving its name, I believe, from Scotland. In the time of Bishop Bury it is called Schotnail. Hatfield Survey. It is also called Shotnail in the Norham Accts., circa 1340. North Durham, 275.

SCOVELLES, 26. Shovels.

SELOR, 130, 254, 263. A ceiling. cf. Gloss. of Arch. Pro "silouryng," 112s. 6d. Cloister Roll, Durham, 1418.

SEME, 37, 54. A measure for glass. According to Willis a seam of glass is 120 pounds or 24 stone. Arch. Nomencl. 49.

SENDALL, 158, 295. Cendel, sindon, i.e., silk? cf. Prompt. Parv. It occurs in the Wardrobe book of Edw. I., the editor explaining it to be taffety and not silk. In 1389, Wm. Askam, of York, leaves "robam meam de cendre." Test. Ebor. i., 130.

SERVYER, 135. A servant.

SERZIS, 9. Serges or large tapers, generally used at funerals. In 1393, John Croxton, of York, chandler, says, "I wyte xxlb. of wax in v sereges to birn abouto my body." Test. Ebor. i. 185. In 1492, John Brown, par. St. Helens, leaves "a candilstyk of laton w<sup>t</sup> v branches to be set aforo oure Lady in the northe queere, also 1lb. of wax to be made in a serge."

SETTER, 21, 25, 50. Masons whose business it was to set the stones in their places in the outer face of the wall. SETTYNG CHISELS, 18, were the tools with which they worked.

SEVERNS, 101.

SEVERY, 47. The enclosure of the Archbishop on the north side of the Minster, severing his grounds from those belonging to the Chapter.

SEVERYSE, 48. Each compartment of the vaulting was called a severey. Willis, 42. "Pro factura xxxij ulnorum de severans, 12s." Hist. Dunelm. Ser. Tres cccxxvi.

SHANKS. In 17 Hen. VII., Guy Grene, of Naburne, gen. leaves a gown of green "penulatum cum le shanks." Sir Harris Nicolas in a note to the Wardrobe acc'ts. of Edward IV., says that shanks are the skins of the legs of animals.

SHEIFFES, 96. A certain measure or quantity of glass. "1476-7. For 20 'sheffs' of new glass, 13s. 4d." Raine's Auckland Castle, 54. In 1508, Sir John Petty, of York, leaves to St. Mary's Abbey "x shaffe Renysh glase." cf. Finchale Glossary and Durham Household Book.

SHERETHURSDAY, 136. Maunday Thursday, or the day before Good Friday. It is so called "for in olde faders dayes the people wold that daye shere there theyr heedes and clype their berdes and poll their heedes, and so make them honest ayenst Easter day." Wardrobe Exp. of Edw. IV., 222. cf. Rock, iii., pt. ii. 235.

SHIVES, 18, 22, 91. Shives or shivers, the wheel of a pulley. Wright.

SHOOTING, 116. Forging iron bars.

SHYDES, 75. Billets or faggots. In 1559-60, Richd. Hall had at Hamssterley "in byllot or shydes, with ij thowsand lyeng on Lynts grene, iij thowsand." He owes to "Ryppotheres wyfe ij thowsand shydes, 30s. For leadyng of a thowsand shydes, 6s. 8d."

SHYVERS, 49. Probably mason-chips, or, perhaps, identical with shivers. Durham Registry.

SIGNACULUM, 89. A clasp. In 1423, at Archbishop Bowet's death, there was in his chapel a missal "cum ij signaculis de argento," valued at 106s. 8d., and a great antiphonar "cum ij signaculis deargentatis," worth 8*l.* In 1462, Lady Margaret Cockfield leaves a primer "cum uno signaculo argenteo habente duas tales literas, c.c." Test. Ebor. ii. 263.

SINAPER, 85. Sinape or sinapi is mustard. Sanapes, sanaps is a coarse towel.

SINGINGBREAD, 136. The Eucharistic bread. cf. Rites of Durham, 1; Eccl. Proceedings and Dr. Rock, i. 149, 156. This bread was baked in irons which were made for that purpose, and were called singingirons. In 1429, Annas Wells, of York, leaves "tria instrumenta ferri vocata syngyngirons, ij alia instrumenta ferri pro pane ad Eucharistiam ordinando."

SINGLEWALLTIELL, 95. cf. Hardwalltiell.

SINNILLACIO, 6. This word is, I believe, identical with scapulatio, q. v.

SIPES, 272. To leak or run out. A common word in the North.

SITULIS, 55, 65. Pails or tubs of wood. Meusura liquidorum. Ducange. In 1423, at Archbishop Bowet's death there was in the hall "j parva situla pro aula." "Pro j situla pro aqua de quodam putio haurienda, 3s." Creyk Roll, 4-5 Neville. cf. St. Cuthbert, 123; and Wills and Inv., i. 13.

SKONSE, 115, 129. A kind of candlestick. According to Wright it is one with a tin back to be hung against a wall. In 1506, John Fell, of York, leaves to Sir Richard Godson "on of my sconsis and a writyng candlestik." There was in the treasury at Lincoln a "sconse of silver, parcel gilt, bordered with divers stones above and under, weighing 16oz., the handle broken off." Dugdale.

SLECKING, 118. Slaking. To slake lime is to mix it with water. Bailey.

SLEDDYNG, 21. Sledging or drawing on a sledge.

SLITTS, 119. Lancet windows. In this case the Five Sisters are called slitts.

SLOTES, 87, 109. The bolts of a door. "Thomæ Brak, smyth, pro duabus petris ferri Ispanici empti pro una cathena inde fienda pro clausura portæ castri interioris, operacione ejusdem ferri, emendacione serarum ejusdem portæ et porticulae et les slotes, emendacione serarum posternarum vocatae Kyngesgate, emendacione ligaturarum ferri ostii vocati Pycher-hous infra castrum fractarum per servientes comitis Northumbriæ, 3s." Durham Castle Roll, 7-8 Bp. Laur. Booth.

SOKE IREN, 7. A soc or sock is a ploughshare. In this case, however, it seems to be something different.

SOLARIUM, 300. The rood-loft as explained in page 301. cf. Gloss. of Architecture. In 1450, John Baghill, of Fetherston, leaves 13s. 4d. "ad reparacionem et sustentacionem solarii crucifixi, Anglie the rode loft."

SOLE, 118. The sill of a window.

SOLES, SOLETREE, 53, 101. According to Wright a soletree is a piece of wood connected with the machinery for drawing up ore from the mine. This explanation, however, is not a general one. It is quite possible that it is a piece of wood for the sill of a window. It occurs in the following passage which contains several other curious words. "Diversis carpentariis operantibus super prostrationem quinque quercuum, dolacionem sarracionem et framacionem earundem in balks, postes, bandes, stothes et alia necessaria reparanda tam infra stabulum et oreæ quam in owtshotsparres, sarkynboordes et geists ac soletrees pro thakking tam lapidum quam gutterarum plumbi, 19s." Howden Roll, circa 1530.

SOSORIIS, 99. Saucers.

Soudre, 20. Solder used by plumbers, etc. SOUDYNG, soldering or the using of solder. SOUDYNG-IRENS, 18, 19, the tools for soldering.

SPADYRNES, 78. The iron work for a spade.

SPANG, 286, 298.

SPAUERS, 282, 295. The apparels which were worn by ecclesiastics on the upper part of the alb. One was worn on each shoulder, and they were called spaulæ and spatularia, or shoulder pieces. We still use the word in epaulets. cf. Rock, i. 445. They are called spatularia in the Inv. of St. Paul's. Dugdale.

SPIERRES, 44, 45. Spars. "To Wm. Ogle and his ij men in mendyng of the sparres, boþt stayng of the owtshotis & settyng uppe of ij prick postis, 8s. 8d." Howden Roll, 1556-7.

SPINTR', SPINCTR', 214, 215. Duange mentions this word, taking it from the present passage, but he offers no explanation of it, nor have I ever seen any.

SPRING, 132. A young wood or plantation generally inclosed and used for rearing game. "Sir James Fullertou at his late being at this Lordship, about 5 years since, did for relief of the game give speciaall direction for rearing of a new spring in the East park, for enclosing whereof there was long since paid by Mr. Auditor Paddon to the said Henry Sanderson, 10*l.*, and the said spring is neither reared nor inclosed, nor the game thereby provided for" (Brancepeth, Survey of the Nerille Estates, 1615). By will dated 1623 Thos. Barnby, of Barnby Hall, Esq., leaves "one springwood called Haggsett, lately bought of Robert Greaves." York Registry.

SPRINKLE, 300. Isopus, the instrument for sprinkling holy water. cf. Prompt. Parv. Cardinal Wolsey had "oone hallywatar stocke withe a sprynkill," valued at 6*l.* 19s. (Coll. Cur., ii. 311). In 1527-8, John Chapman, of York, leaves "unum le sprynkill argenti ad spargendum aquam rosarum." It is also called a strinkle. In the Fountains inventory was a holy water vat with "a strynkill" of silver, worth 8*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.*

SPYCR, 32. Specarius, a dealer in spices or spice. Under the head of spices, in old times, were comprehended many articles that are now sold by the fruiterer and the chemist. (cf. Finchale Glossary). In 1557, Sir Robert Tysonne, vicar of Osbaldwick, near York, leaves "to the town of Osbaldwicke a braysyn morter, & yt to remayne in the husbandmen's handes for ever, & everye man to have it a yare & no more, & it to go abowte as the holy breade dothe, & no man to deuyne riche nor poore to braye his spice in yt."

SPYDDELL, 110. A (small) spade.

SPYNDILL, 94. The spindle connected with the mill stone. cf. North Darham, 274.

SQUYRS, SWYERS, 16, 207. Squares used by masons and carpenters. cf. reulor.

STALLAGIUM, 34, 44. A staith.

STANDARDES, I., 118. The upright bars of a window. "To John Lame and his servants, ether of them, for wirkyngh iiiij. dayes in makyng of standertts and lokettes for the windows, & sherpynge of ther ger, 3s. 4d." (Durham Castle Roll, 1543). "To John Conewey, smyth, for fourre transoms and xij. standardes, etc. Item in lede for the fastenyng of the same iron, 2s.  $\frac{1}{2}$ d." (Exp. of Eliz. of York, 25). II., 244, 245. Books in the choir of York Minster. They were probably kept continually chained to a desk or lectern to be used during the services. III., 118. The upright poles used in a scaffold. "1331. For 12 large poles for standards for the scaffold, 10s." Westminster Hall, 153.

STANDERS, 309, 312. Copes for standers.

STANEXES, 17. Stone axes used by masons. Hacks. cf. North Durham, 98.

STANELATTES, 44. Stone laths. STRELATTES, 54. Strawlatts. Laths upon which slates or straw are fastened.

STANZONES, 53, 62, 69. A kind of board.

STARNES. Stars. In 1454, Robert Constable, Esq., leaves "to Bossall kirke a vestement of rede cloth of gold, and the awter cloth yare to of the same cloth of gold, and rede cape with *starne*s of gold" (Test. Ebor., ii. 176). In 1569-70, Geo. Conyers, of Pinchinthorpe, in Cleveland, Esq., leaves "a blacke stagge with a starne in his forehead."

STATERAS, 81. Steel-yards. cf. Finchale Glossary, North Durham, 107. In 1439, John Notyngham, of Bury, leaves "majorem stateram meam cum balance, et omnia grossa pondera mea plumbea et j parvam stateram de ij libris" (Bury Wills, 10).

STATUTE, 334. A lectern? In the Rites of Durham is an account of the fate of the lectern in that cathedral.

STAYING, 118. Supporting, propping up, making firm. "Payd, 1 July 1556, to Wm. Bellow and his ij worke-men, in staying of the crosse (in the market-place) & wallyng & setynge of the staires abowtt the said crosse, 10s. For staying of the owt-shottis, etc., 7s. 8d." Howden Rolls.

STEYS, 109, 114. Ladders; the common name for them in the North.

STOKKED, 268. Barred or shut.

STOKKES, 208. Tunicula cum stokkes de correo. Wright explains a stock sleeve to be "a sort of half sleeve, the upper part of which was raised and full of gathers."

STOKLOKS, 38. In the Durham Household Book it is conjectured that these are probably "locks fixed permanently in one position," and opposed to handlocks. In this case they were to be used in Peter prison, and on that account we may suppose that they were locks of more than ordinary strength. "For 18 stokloks, 1365-6." Westm. Hall, 192.

STOOTHES, 90. "Thin spars of wood used in making stoothings or partitions of lath and plaster between one room and another." Durham Household Book. "For settinge in ij stootes and mendyng the wall of the receiver's chalmer over the stare, 8d." Howden Roll, 5-6 Edward VI. "Operantibus super reparacionem murorum stabuli circa soletrees et stootes et fac' plangerds de novo, etc., 13s. 2d." Ibid., circa 1530.

STOPPELL, 27. A stopper or plug of lead stopping up the drain of the font. "Item deliveryd the dressing uppe and boillinge (?) and burnysshing of twoo flagons and mending the cheynis and stoppells." Coll. Curiosa, ii., 325.

STOTA, 123. A stot, or young ox under four years old.

STOURES, 41, 48. Stakes of wood, frequently used in the walls of a house. "Uni homini amputanti stoures apud boscum de Acom pro parietibus domorum infra Hospitale, per diem, 4d." Acc<sup>t</sup>. roll of St. Leonard's Hospital, York, 44-5 Edw. III.

STOWPE, 134. A stoup, or gate post, a very common word in the North. "Mem<sup>d</sup> that in 1709 the Lady Sarah Slingsby beg'd leave to have a great gate hung at her proper charge for her coach in bad weather to come into the church-yard, and upon her Ladyship's promise that the said gate and stoups, etc., should be repaired by the family of Red-house," it was allowed. Moormonkton Reg. Slingsby's Diary, 193.

STRAGULATUS, 127, 208. Variegated. Diverso colore radiatus. Ducange. In 1400 Roger de Wandesford leaves "togam stragulatam." Test. Ebor., i., 257.

STRIKEING, 120. Painting or engraving upon something. "Deliveryd to my Lordis grace iij feyre gob-litts with a cover, parcell gilt, strekyn with the marlitts." Collect. Curiosa, ii., 317.

STYLE, 117. A handle; the word is still used in this sense in the North. "Payd to viij masons, every of them, for stelyng of ther geer, 12d. To ij prentec' for ther stelyng sylver, 2s." Durham Castle Roll, 1543.

SUDARY, 267. Sudarium, a towel. cf. North Durham, 116. At Archbishop Bowet's death, in 1423, there was in his chapel "j sudarium de albo panno cum armis ducis Lancastriæ in finibus."

SUMMAG', 26. Summagium, a horse load. Summarius is not a cart horse, as in North Durham, 108, but a sumpter-horse. Durham Household Book, 345.

SUSPFNT, 268. Suspended; forbidden to be used on account of age or wear. "The iiiijth bell remaynes ther still, and was never ronnege sync it was suspent." Rites of Durham, 34.

SWAPE, 114, 115. The handle of a pump, a lever. Craven Glossary.

TABARD, 207. A sleeveless coat, opening only at the sides. The following extract exhibits the word in a different meaning: "Payd to John Brown, bricleyer, for ij day & di. to repeyer a dor ofe stone and wyndows, and to felle w<sup>t</sup> morter offer the tabards alle ye roffes, 20d." Exp. at Durham House, London, 22 Hen. VIII.

TABLAMENTUM, 276. The front part of an altar. cf. Rock. i., 236.

TACHMENT, 137. An attachment.

TAKE ORDER, 327. To make arrangements for. "When he heard that Matthew Morton was syke, he went to take order with hym for fyve nobles y<sup>t</sup> this deponent aught hym 1575." "To take some orders for bir which was lyke to be lost for gydinge and lokinge too, 1575." Cause Papers, Durham.

"Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went." Comedy of Errors, act v., sc. i.

TARTARINUS, 213. Cloth of Tartary. Auckland Castle, 22. Species pannex Tartaria adiecti. St. Cuthbert, 137. Wardrobe Acc<sup>t</sup>., 368. At Abp. Bowet's death, there was in the chamber "j lectus rubeus de serico, broudird, cum rosis de filo auri contextis coopertorio, cum testura et celour et tribus curtainis de rubeo tartary."

TAYSE, 126. A word which it is not easy to explain. In Bp. Hatfield's Survey, 218, we have a cord "de ix tayciis" bought for the carts. Here, I presume, it may mean plaits. In the present instance it may mean fringe, tape, or lace.

TELESCARTHE, 45.

TEMPLIS, 48. According to Willis, the molds used by workmen were called templets or temple molds. In 1338-9 "wykerres and temples" are bought at Holy Island. North Durham, 275, 277. A templet is also a short piece of timber sometimes laid in a wall under the end of a girder or other beam. Gloss. Arch. The staves used by weavers for stretching out their cloth are called temples. (Wright.) Templarius, species tigni vel assidis. Ducange.

TENE, 3. cf. Finchale Glossary, sub voce Tine.

TENELL, 18. A tenel is a kind of basket. Wright. Tenella, however, is explained by Ducange to be forceps, and this is probably the meaning here. In 1392 Nic. de Schirburn, of York, leaves "j par tenellarum de ferro." Test. Ebor., i. 173.

TERRICIDIIS, 35, 130. Trees blown down by the wind. The wood of Langwath supplied the Chapter of York with their fuel and also with a portion of the timber they required. In 1635 there is an inventory of the trees in Langwath. The number was "of timber trees 804; of oake siplings 1395; of dotards, or decayng timber trees 46; aboute the ring of your wood in the hedge-rowe, which we call dyke stalls, 228, etc."

TEXTUS, 84, 223. An evangelisterium or book of the gospels, very frequently bound and jewelled in the most gorgeous manner. cf. Rock, i. 297. In 1405 Thomas Graa, of York, leaves "unum librum vocatum tyxt, cum ymaginibus crucifixi, Mariae et Iohannis, et aliis bonis reliquis inclusis." Test. Ebor., i. 339. In the inventory of the treasures at St. Paul's is a goodly number of texts. Dugdale. There is a single text remaining among the MSS. of the Dean and Chapter of York which has been already mentioned, 142, 223. It was lost for some time, but soon after the Restoration, according to an entry in the Chapter books, it was restored. It was placed in the hands of the dean by Henry King, the learned son of the celebrated bishop of London and the brother of Milton's Lycidas. Bishop King had been a canon of York and had filled the Belfrey pulpit for some time.

THAKBURD, 33, 39, etc. Boards used in thatching, upon which the thatch was laid, or, generally, boards for the roof. THACKTILL, 27. Roof tiles.

THEKYNG, 16, 264. Covering with a roof, or thatching. "Porticus oportet de novo tegi, Anglicè thekyd." In 1429 John Scott, of York, leaves "to the thekyng of the stepill of my parish kyrke 26s. 8d." Test. Ebor., i. 420.

THIXTELL, 117. An axe. Wright.

THOREGISTES, 53, 135. Thorough joists; joists running right through or across the roof.

THRAUNE, 270. Wrought of twisted silk or thread. The silk throwers were incorporated 23rd Apr., 5 Car. 1. Their arms are a throwing mill, a reel and three bales of silk. Bailey. In 1582 Anne Middleton, of Redmire, leaves "a fayre thrawne chayre." Richmond Registry.

THROUGH-STANE, 21, 40, etc. A through-stone, in the first instance, is a stone which goes through a wall appearing on both sides. Drake uses it in this sense (Eboracum, 58), when he is speaking of the escape of the monument of the standard-bearer of the 9th legion "from the brutish workmen who had broke it in the midst, and were going to make use of it for two throughs, as they call them, to bind a wall." A through is also a long stone which marked the burial place of some particular person or family, which was laid through or over (super) the whole space occupied by the body. When churches were unpaved its use would be obvious and its appearance remarkable, and where there was a pavement, the through was always to be distinguished by its length and massiveness. In 1548-9 John Bullock, of Newcastle, desires to be buried in the "pariche churche garthe of All Saints nye the through stone besides the weddylg churche dore." Durham Registry. In 1562 Thomas Ellis, Esq., of Doncaster, orders his body to be interred in the church of "St. George in Doncaster, in our Lady queare, of that side towards Saint Thomas' altar, in that place wheare Sir Robert Smyth was buried, and I will that that stone that lyeth upon that place be laid there agayne, and four stones sett upon ends of the same, and thereupon laid one through, beyng now of the bakeside of my house." York Registry. In 1531 Sir John Rocliffe, of Cowthorpe, desires to be laid "in the Gray Frears' churche within the cytte of of Yorke, nyghe my fader's grave, on hys lyfe syde, upon the northe sydye of the churche. Also I will that my ex<sup>re</sup>. cause a thorughe stone to be laide upon me, and one ymage of the Trinitie sette and fixed in the said thorughe-stone, and one ymage of myself maide kneling undre the said ymage of the Trinitie, w<sup>t</sup> one scripture for me in perpetuall remembrance for me, within one yeare after the buryall." Ibid.

THURIBULUM, 217, etc. A censer. In 1423 there was in Archbishop Bowet's chapel "j par turebulorum aliter censoures" gilt with chains of silver, worth, 17l. 6s. cf. Rock, i. 205.

TONARII, 246. Music books. Libri de tonis sive cantu. Ducange.

TORALIS, 38. A kiln.

TOVEIRNE, TEWERNS, 81, 98. Tool-iron? cf. Gloss. of Architecture sub voce Tewel. In 1447 the smith at Jarrow had "j tewyrne." Jarrow Rolls, 92.

TOYME, 105.

TRACYNGBORD, 17. The board on which the plans, etc., were traced or drawn. TRACINGE-HOUS, 118, the place or room used by the draughtsman.

TREANGILL, 207. A triangle, an instrument used by carpenters.

TRIFOR', 281. Triforiatus. In the shape of a trefoil. In the inventory of St. Paul's were three morses "triforiat." Dugdale.

TRUNCUS, 35. An alms-box formed out of part of the trunk of a tree. Arcella, cujusmodi in ecclesiis protestant ad recipiendas fidelium elemosynas. Ducange.

TRYNDILES, 131. The beam of the spindle. Wright.

TUNALL, 2, 3. cf. Willis, 62.

TUNIGHT, 37, 40, 43. A measure or quantity of stones, etc. "xvij tunight asserum, lapidum, plumbi," mentioned in Kempe's Roll.

TUTT, 262. Some kind of cloth, what kind I know not. TUTTS, 270. A game at ball; the name is probably a local one.

TYERS, TYRES, 81, 87. A tire of a wheel is the iron hoop around it. Tires are, I believe, the smaller iron-work, or generally the more minute gear or furniture that is required for any work. In 1585-6 a testator at Durham leaves her "plowghe-irons and the tyrement." Tire also survives in our word attire, and in one word, means dress. "And Jezabel painted her face and tired her head."

"Then put my tires and mantles on him." Anthony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. v.

TYNIREN, 18. Probably a ladle or a skimmer.

TYNGILNAILL, 35. cf. chingil-nail.

TYRRET, 117. A tiret is a leather strap. Wright. It may perhaps bear that meaning here.

TWICHYNGROPES, 83. Ropes required for fastening together the different parts of the scaffold.

TYWBYLL, 207. A mattock. Prompt. Parv. A double-headed bill or hatchet. Bipennis, twibille vel stan-awx. Finchale Glossary.

U

UPLANDISH, 267. In the country, or, rather, away from the sea.

VADIIS, 226.

VANELL, 27. Vanella, or venella, is rendered by Ducange as viculus, anjiportus. I can scarcely think that it can be so rendered here. It seems rather to be some part of the roof, perhaps the gutter.

VANGIS, 43, 82. Sarcula or spade. Ducange. Another meaning assigned to the word is, vans for winnowing. North Durham, 101.

VECTES, 53. Bars of iron.

"Centum serei claudunt vectes, veteraque ferri Robora."—En., v., 609.

VENERE, 297.

VERMEYON, 77. The colour vermillion.

VERMYTH, 77.

VERNAKYLL, VERNACULO, 215, 280, 282. The veronica; representations of the face of Christ on handkerchiefs, etc.; said to have been impressed by Christ's wiping his face, as he carried the cross, with a handkerchief. The original was said to be preserved at Rome, and copies of it were frequently brought home by pilgrims. In 1429, John Scott, of York, orders masses to be sung for him "apud verernakall in ecel. S. Petri apud Romam." Test. Ebor. i., 420. In 1432 Isabel Hamerton of York leaves "unam veronicam Romae." Test. Ebor., ii., 23. Cardinal Wolsey had a "challe with a patten gilte, the foote of yj square graven withe a crucifixe, withe Mary & John, & in the patten a rarnaclis hedde." Coll. Cur., ii., 305. Chaucer, when describing the pardoner who had come from Rome, says—

"A vernicle hadde he sewed upon his cappe."

VICE, 106. A spiral staircase. "For making a pent-house and covering newly made ultra vicium novae capelle." Westm. Hall, 1318, 121. In 1463 John Baret, of Bury, speaks of "the vys dore goyng up to the candlebem." Bury Wills, 29.

VINCULA, 78. These, I am now inclined to think, were not fetters, but iron work, clasps, etc., for the windows.

VIRIDARIUS, 37. A verderer, an officer in a forest. Temp. Edw. I. Robt. Hagett, etc., "verderers de le forest de Galtrer," occur in an old charter.

VIRRETE, 98. In this passage the word appears to be synonymous with pileus, a cap. A virrolette is a kind of sword and virola is a ring.

VOST', 214.

W

WADETONS, 16.

WAFRIS, 124. The sacramental wafers.

WAITES, 138. Musicians who still parade the towns in the North of England at Christmas tide. At Newcastle one of the towers was called the Waits Tower. At Durham they had a regular livery and wore a silver badge. Their musical abilities at the present time are not of the most striking description, but formerly they were deemed worthy enough to assist the choristers in the Minster.

WATCH, 103. The watch connected with the clock. The two armed figures of wood, "pro les watch," which are here mentioned are now preserved in the vestry.

WATCHETT, 316. Pale blue.

WAW, 70, 78, 83. A certain measure for glass, with the exact quantity I am unacquainted. At Holy Island in 1384-5 "two waws of iron" are mentioned. North Durham, 111. In 1508, Sir John Petty, of York, leaves to his brother Robert "a waw of glasse."

WEDGES, WEGGES, 2, 7, etc. Wedges of iron used by masons and quarrymen.

WENGGES, 9, 12, 65. Wings used for sweeping and cleaning.

WESTWALL, 36. A kind of cloth.

WETHES. Withes—osiers, or twigs; a word in common use.

WODEN? 265.

WODWARDE, 259. A warden or keeper of the woods. At Brancepeth "George Pinchney is woodward who hath a fee of 21s. 8d. per ann." Survey of the Neville Estates, 1615.

WRIGHT AX, 18. A carpenter's ax; the shed used by the carpenter, etc., was called the WRIGHT-HOUSE, 118.

WYDAL, 90. Pro uno les cable pro wydal.

WYMBELL, 207. An auger.

WYSP, 73, 75, etc. Another measure for glass. "Pro tribus whisps vitri ad reperandum fenestras capellæ valde ruinosas." Howden Roll, temp. Hen. VIII.

Y

YLING, 116. For candles at the ylinge of the glasse, 2d.

ADDENDA.

BOWETT, 284. A provincial word for a lanthorn.

OLASTERIUS, 276. Pannus olasterius. The meaning is not quite obvious. cf. Ducange sub voce olea. He considers oleæ to be gems, but a passage which he quotes speaking of them as "serico textas, coloreque depictas, quæ festis diebus in circuitu altaris majoris dependent," militates strongly against this view.

ERRATA ET ADDENDA.

page 2, note, for "on their way," read "on its way."

" 3, 5, for "cementaris," read "cementariis." The original has been too faithfully copied.

" 15, line 2 from bottom, for "calibre," read "calibe."

" 17, note, for "1349," read "1399."

" 19, for "appreciata," read "appreciati."

" 29, note, for "great west window," read "great east window."

" 49, middle of page, for "alias," read "alias."

" 61, 7th line from top, for "Henrica," read "Henrico."

" 63, 5th line from foot, read "cum," for "com."

" 78, 82. It is not certain when the image of Henry VI. was removed. Probably the niche was vacant when James I. paid his visit to York, and the place of the missing effigy was supplied with a figure of that monarch. The late Dean, Dr. Markham, removed the statue of James and sent it to Ripon, replacing it by another of Henry VI.

" 79, middle of page, for "empto," read "empta."

" 120, foot of page, for "term," read "term."

" 139, note, Ulphus' horn was restored by Henry Lord Fairfax.

" 153, last line of text, for "datum," read "data."

" 170, for "xxxiv," read "xxiv."

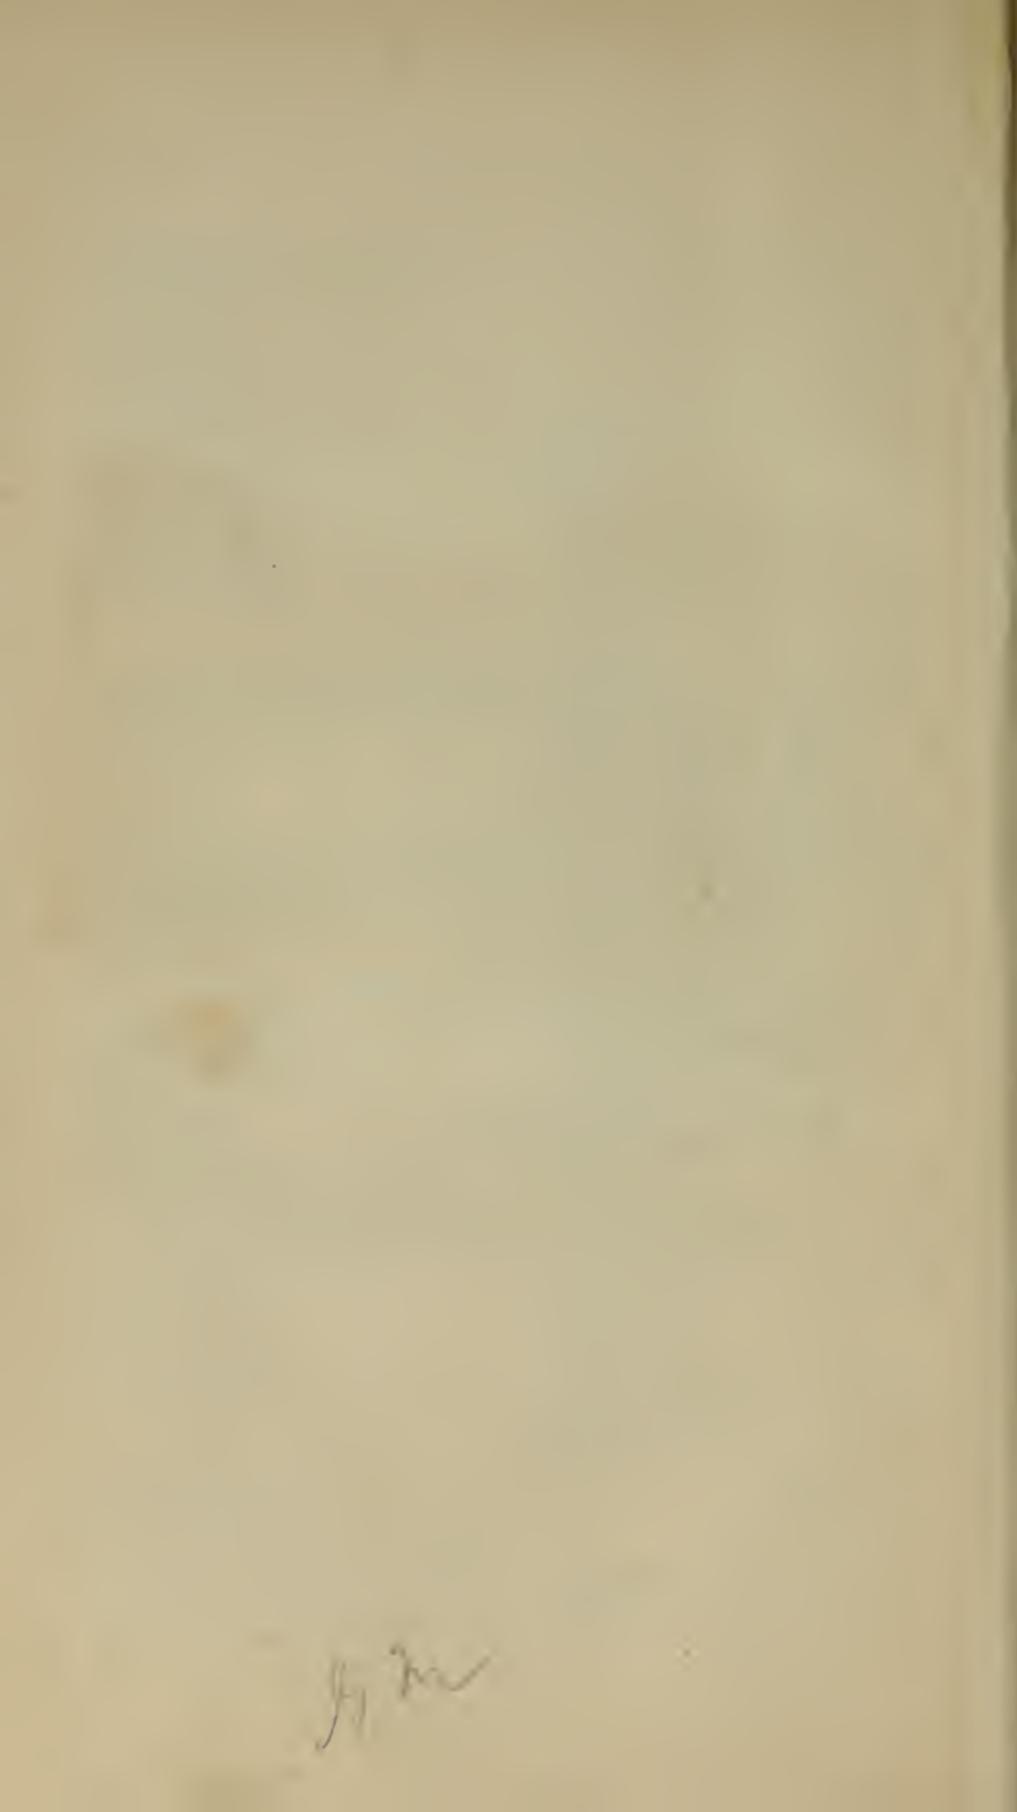

" 203, 4th line from foot, read "1424-5."
